The fifth charter is noticed, by Inspeximus, in one of King Henry the Fourth to the abbey of Battle, and has been already printed among the Instruments appended to the account of that Monastery. By this the earl of Hereford confirmed to the monks of Brecknock in perpetual alms certain lands given to them by Osmund de Traveleia, with a burgage in Brecknock, and an acre of land "extra barram," without the walls.^g

Maihel de Hereford, brother of Earl Roger, also granted a charter of confirmation to the monks, which will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^h

William de Breos, or Braiosa, in the time of Henry the Second, granted two charters to Brecknock priory. By one he gave his body to the church of St. John the Apostle and Evangelist in Brecknock, to be conveyed thither from whatever place it might please God he should die, whether in England or Wales, that being the church beyond all others he revered, because upon St. John, after God and the holy Mary, he placed his greatest trust. He then confirms the charters of his predecessors, and finally grants to all persons belonging to the church of St. John, as well burgesses as others, privileges and exemptions from all levies and contributions payable to chief constables, and from all fines for common trespasses and defaults, and gives to the monks the goods of felons convicted within their jurisdiction; at the same time reserving to himself and the officers of his court the right of determining and pronouncing all judgments affecting life or limb.ⁱ By the second charter he confirms a certain demesne which Ralph de Baschevilla gave them within his barony, called the mill of Trosalref and its stream in Levem; i. e. Trosdref mill upon the river Llyfni or Lleven.^k

Other charters will be found in the Appendix, of Herbert Fitz Peter and John Fitz Reginald.^l

Humphrey de Bohun, earl of Hereford, also appears upon the list of benefactors to this priory. He confirmed all the grants of his predecessors.^m He died in 1298.ⁿ

Such are the instruments more immediately granted by the lords of Brecknock.

Mr. Jones, in his History of Brecknockshire, has given the substance of numerous other charters to Brecknock priory, copies of which are preserved among Carte's manuscript collections in the Bodleian library at Oxford. These are,

1. A charter of Henry the First in the twenty-seventh year of his reign, A.D. 1127, exempting the abbat and convent of Battle and the religious Cells belonging to them from the payment of tolls throughout the kingdom, and giving them all amerciaments, goods, and chattels of felons, and the trial of offenders through their jurisdiction.^o

2. A charter from Bernard the Norman, bishop of St. Davids from 1116 to 1149, granting to the prior and convent the chapel of Saint Alud, or Elyned, near Swlch.^p

3. Another charter from the bishop, confirming a grant of William Revel to the church of Hay. This document is printed in Bishop Kennett's Case of Improvements, App. num. iii. ex Cartulario Prioratus S. Johannis Evang. de Brechon, fol. 47.^q

4. An award by Robert de Betune, prior of Llanton, elected and consecrated bishop of Hereford in 1131, upon a dispute referred to him, with the approbation of, and under the pope's authority, between the prior and convent of Brecon and the abbat and monks of Gloucester, by which he directs, that, in consideration of the brethren of Brecon relinquishing their claim to the tithes of wool,

^c Mr. Jones says, for the elucidation of this passage it may be necessary to remark that Bernard Newmarch had before granted considerable tithes in this county to the monks of Gloucester, as had Earl Milo to the monks of Malbern; which claims were necessarily to be satisfied before the grant of Earl Roger could have effect. cheese, lambs, and calves, of the demesne of Talgarth (which belonged to them), to the abbat of Gloucester, the latter shall cede to the former the tithes of calves and lambs within the forest of Brecon, reserving to himself the tenths of the chase and the slaughter-house at Christmas yearly.^a

5. A deed dated upon the fifth of the kalends of July, 1152, in which David Fitzgerald bishop of St. Davids, at the petition of Ralph the prior and the whole convent, confirms to them the church of Saint Aissilde (Saint Hailide or Saint Alud) granted to them by his predecessor; and further to increase the charity and devotion of those who should come annually at the feast of the Virgin Mary, or within three days afterwards, to visit the convent, grants certain immunities and pecuniary privileges for thirty days while such persons are going or returning.^b

6. A Confirmation from Gilbert Foliot, bishop of Hereford, of a grant of the church of Humbre to the prior and monks of Brecon by Walter del Mans and Agnes his wife, about the year 1162.^c

7. Another Confirmation from the same bishop of the church of Burghill granted to the prior and convent by Roger earl of Hereford, together with a mill. Mr. Jones says, this was made upon a dispute between the prior and convent of Brecon and the canons of the church of Burghill; but he suspects an error or omission in Carte's manuscript, and that the grant was from one of the family of Burghill with the consent of his lord, Roger earl of Hereford; for certainly no such benefaction appears among the charters of that baron.^d

8. A Grant, of the middle of the twelfth century, from Walter de Traveleya, or Travle, of his mill in the village of St. Michael, and twelve acres of his land called Travelia, nearer to the possessions of the monks of Brecon in that part of the country.^e

9. A Confirmation of the last Grant by Walter de Traveleya, in which he also notes his reception into the fraternity of the monastery, the convent allowing him annually a mark of silver for his life. This instrument was again confirmed by Walter de Traveley the son.^f

10. A Grant of twenty gallons of wine annually, at the feast of St. John the Evangelist, from John le Pichard.^g

These benefactions, says Mr. Jones, were again followed and confirmed, and additional possessions annexed to the priory, by the descendants of these last named donors; for Roger Picard, who was the eldest son of John le Pichard, with the consent of his wife Martha, ratified the gift of his father, of a tenement at Stratdewi, near the west gate which is called Boket gate, containing five perches and a half in length, and in breadth three perches and four feet: he also confirmed his father's grant of two parts of the tithes of Stradewy. John Picart, another son of the former John, with the consent of his wife Hawys, gave them twelve pence per annum charged upon land in the possession of Vincent le Deyne "ad sustentationem luminariorum;" and he also confirmed his father's benefaction of a tenement in Stradewy, and added two parts of all his tithes there and at Llansafreit. These two last instruments are supposed to have been executed between 1200 and 1232.^h

Of nearly the same date as those of John le Pichard are three grants from a benefactor of the name of Torel. By the first charter Ralph de Torel, with the consent of his son and heir Ralph de Torel, grants "unum mesuagium cum omnibus pertinentiis quod jacet juxta regalem viam et extendit in longitudine de la Lidesdale ad semitam quæ tendit versus ecclesiam de Bruness juxta rivulum qui descendit de Brenihesowre et etiam illum rivulum; concedo illis ut adjacet prædicto mesuagio et extendit se in latitudine a via regali usque ad gardinum meum de Holmedewe, et duos pedes infra fossatum gardini mei," &c. By the second charter he grants a spot of ground, being part of his lands at Brunehope, being in length sixty and in breadth forty feet, near Geoffrey de la Lidesdale's orchard, for the purpose of building a barn upon it: and by the third charter, if not a mere confirmation of the first, he grants a messuage or tillage, with its appurtenance, in his vill or township of Brunehope, being of equal breadth with Geoffrey of Lidesdale's garden, and in length with his own at Holmedewe. This last grant Mr. Jones thinks must have been made about the year 1190.ⁱ

About the same period the name of Baskerville appears conspicuous on the roll of benefactors to the convent of Brecon. Among the papers, says Mr. Jones, which I am now extracting, I find a Robert or Roger Baskerville (he is called by both names) who by a charter attested by William de Breos and Maud his wife, and Jordan archdeacon of Brecon, in consideration that the prior and monks would admit his son James into their order, at the intercession of De Breos and his wife, grants them lands, the names of which are horridly disfigured. De Breos adds, that, if he shall not be able to warrant these possessions to them, he will grant them sixty acres of land, "quinque solidatas terræ," being part of the lands brought him by his wife on their marriage, situated in the city of Worcester, and then in the tenure of Osbert the son of Gunnor; he likewise informs us that he and his wife, in full chapter, had fraternized with the monks, and that their bodies and such part of their property as ought to remain with or about them in the grave, were to be buried there, whether they died in Herefordshire or Breconshire, "et sciendum est quod ego et uxor mea suscepimus fraternitatem illius ecclesiæ in Capitulo suo, et in die obitus nostri corpora cum substantia quæ sequi debet ibidem sepelienda ubicunque in comitatu Herefordiæ vel in provincia Brech. nobis contingatur." Ralph, another of this family, about the same period gave to the monks lands at Bredwardine, by a charter attested by William de Breos and his wife and William de Breos the younger, which he afterwards confirmed by another in the presence of the elder de Breos and Maud de Saint Valeri his wife, and of Ralph abbat of Wigmore. By two more instruments of the same nature, the first attested by William de Oildebeof, then constable of Brecon, and William de Burchull, and the other, which he confirmed by the impression of his seal, before Peter bishop of St. David's, in the chapter of Brecon, where he presented it and caused it to be read before William de Breosa and many others, French, English, and Welsh, clerks and laity, before whom he placed it upon the altar of St. John, he gave to the convent a mesuage, tenement, and mill, called Trosdref mill, upon the river Llyfni, with the tolls taken for grinding there, &c. "meum molen-dinum de Trosdref cum moltura, &c. et gurgitem et situm suum super Livini." This grant was afterwards contested by Nest, the daughter of Griffith and widow of this Ralph Baskerville; but the dispute ended by her recognizing the right of the convent to the mill, discharging the monks of the arrears of the rent of a mark annually since the death of her husband, and granting them a pound of incense yearly to pray for her soul.^k

The original grant of Robert, or Roger Baskerville was again confirmed by Robert le Wafre, who married Alice, one of his daughters, who describes it by the name of the mill of Llandevailauc, meaning Llandevaillog tre'r graig, in which parish it was situated, and probably on the same spot where it continues to this day.^l

At a later period, though not long subsequent to these grants, Alice de Baskerville gave to the prior and convent a mesuage or tenement, together with a croft, which Adam the smith formerly held under her brother, in the village of Bredwardine.^m

In 1163 it appears there was another dispute, in consequence of the different and almost contradictory grants of Bernard Newmarch and his successors, between the monks of Gloucester and Brecon, which was compromised; and by a deed, dated Nov. 3d that year, the former by the consent of Hamel their abbat, and Walter abbat of Battle on the other part, acknowledged the right of the monks of Brecknock to the parish church of Melianach, they rendering to the abbat and monks of Gloucester three shillings, to be paid them at St. Peter's church on the feast of St. Denis yearly.ⁿ The same altercations, Mr. Jones observes, frequently occurred between the monks of Brecon and other ecclesiastical bodies about their possessions in England. One appears to have been settled by the award of William de Vere, who was consecrated bishop of Hereford in 1186, and died in 1199; by which he awarded to the prior and convent of Brecknock the tithes of Bodenham, claimed by the monks of Hereford. Another was settled by the prior of Acley, or Lyre Ocley, near Hereford, between the same parties, relative to the tithes of Humber; and a third by Geoffrey bishop of Coventry, by which he confirmed to the monks of Brecknock a pension of ten shillings annually from the church of Pattingham, to be paid by them to the canons of Landa, or Launde, in Leicestershire.^a

William de Waldebeof, a Brecknockshire knight, by a deed which, from the witnesses, appears to have been made about the middle of the twelfth century, gave the monks of Brecknock his bosage or underwood appurtenant to the land which had previously belonged to Bernard Unspac, above the highway leading from Brecknock to Aberyscir.^b

One or two grants to this monastery are also recorded, among Carte's papers, of the Burchull family. Payne de Burchull, who describes himself as nephew to the original donor, confirms the grant of Hugh his uncle of land in the vill of St. Michael, adjoining the road leading from Brecon to Llandevaillog and the river called Brunive broc, in length and in breadth between the lands of Roger son of Emmerod, and the lands of the said monks.^c William de Burchull, about the middle of the thirteenth century, gave five acres of his land at Benny: and by another instrument of nearly if not the same time, he promises upon oath that a permission which he had obtained from the prior of Brecknock for the celebration of mass in his chapel of Benni should not prejudice the rights of the mother church.^d

Richard Hagarnel gave to the prior and convent an annual pension of twelve pence at the feast of Saint Mary's in Quadragesima, payable by William Prest and his heirs, and also eight bushels of corn to be delivered at Bodeham at Michaelmas yearly.^e Maud and Margaret de Hagarnel, his daughters, gave small parcels of land to the monastery, chiefly upon the banks of the Honddu near Llanton.^f

Peter de Leia, who succeeded to the bishoprick of St. Davids in 1176, gave to the monks the church of St. David de Cwm, i. e. Llanddewi'r Cwm near Builth.^g

Richard Brett, or Bruto, gave the lands which were Gilbert's, and one acre thereto belonging.^h

William de Mara gave a right of water to a mill at Berrington, through his land of Little Hereford, three pounds of wax yearly being rendered to him for his life.ⁱ

Walter de Ebroc the younger gave twelve acres of land.^k

Isabella the daughter of Gilbert, and widow of Lawrence, gave thirty acres of land,^l somewhere about 1210.

There are also, says Mr. Jones, some other very brief concessions of lands to the priory of Brecon, among which is one of seven acres at Kilmanant, perhaps Cilmaharen in Garth-hrengi, by William Peyton, or Pictaviensis, as he is therein called; another by Walter de Riffe of an acre of land adjoining Bradfelde; another by William de Bradfelde of lands in Bradfelde, Petercroft, Laneglege, near Mara, Estlege, and in Weteroft near the chapel; and another in the latter end of the twelfth century by Nicholas de Machna, afterwards confirmed by Brian de Machna and Thomas his son, of the tithes of his lands to the church of Bodeham. John de Monmouth granted, about the year 1220, an exemption from tolls throughout the town and vale of Monmouth.^m

These papers, he adds, likewise contain several Confirmations by the bishops of St. Davids and Hereford, and others, of the donations of the pious and charitable to this church: among them, one about the year 1280, by John son and heir of Reginald Fitz-peter, of the gift of his grandfather, Peter Fitzherbert, of the churches of Mara, Talgarth, Kethedyn, and Llangeleu: another by Ralph bishop of Hereford, dated in 1237, afterwards confirmed by the dean and chapter, of two portions of the tithes of corn and hay in the township of Bruneshope: another by the same bishop of the gift of his predecessors, Gilbert and Giles, of ten shillings a year charged upon the church of Humber, with a confirmation by the dean and chapter of Hereford of the church of Bodenham, dated in 1240: another by the above-named bishop, of the church of Byford, given by Walter de Travle, dated in 1236: another, in the same year, of the tithes of Berrington and Hopton Wafre; and another of the advowson of Bodenham, in 1237.ⁿ

Madox, in his Formulare Anglicanum, has preserved Robert bishop of Bath's confirmation of a composition made between the monks of Brecknock (with consent of the abbat and convent of Battle) and the monks of Quarr in the Isle of Wight, relating to the church of Hardington, some time after 1135.^o

Stevens gives a Composition made between the prior of this house and the then vicar of the parish of St. John, in the year 1527, with the confirmation of the same by the bishop of St. Davids in 1529, and the further ratification of it by the dean and chapter of St. Davids in 1575.^p His transcript appears to have been taken from the collections of Mr. Hugh Thomas, who saw the original among the archives of the town of Brecknock.

PRIORS of BRECKNOCK.

WALTER, a monk of Battle, who has been already mentioned, was appointed the first prior by the founder, about the year 1095.

RALPH occurs prior in an instrument preserved in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum, some time after 1135.^q Mr. Jones, however, says, that

REGINALD was the successor of Walter. He adds, that Reginald presented to the living of Llangorse in the time of David Fitzgerald, who was elected bishop of St. Davids in 1152.^r

J. occurs as prior in a grant of Walter de Traveleia, about the year 1180.^s

REGINALD, the second of the name, occurs in 1248.^t

JOHN, A. D. 1315.^u

R. DE HORWOD occurs in the time of Henry bishop of St. Davids, probably some time after 1328.^x

JOHN HECKINGTON resigned the priorate in 1411: upon June 12th, in which year

THOMAS BECHE was elected.^y

JOHN BURGROVE was elected in 1426. In the Harl. MS. 3586, he is called JOHN BURGONE. Upon his death, WILLIAM WATTER, or WALTER, was chosen prior May 17th, 1434.^z

THOMAS FALDING occurs prior in 1487.^a

PHILIP RITHYNE, or RETHIME, occurs in 1492.^b He resigned in 1497; in which year, upon Nov. 15th,

JOHN LEWIS was elected.^c Upon his resignation,

WILLIAM WESTFIELD succeeded May 18th, 1499. In 1502 he was elected to the abbacy of Battle.^d

THOMAS REDYNG, or READING, succeeded in 1502: who in 1505 demised the tithes of Berrington to Roger Parsons and Matilda his wife for seventy years, and in 1521, two mesuages in the same parish to William Rowbery.^e prior. He surrendered his monastery to the king, according to Stevens, in 1539; Mr. Jones says in 1537; and had a pension of sixteen pounds per annum assigned to him for life.^a At this time the possessions of the monastery were valued, according to Dugdale, at 112*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*; according to Speed, at 134*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*

After the Dissolution, the priory of Brecknock was first granted in the 33d of Henry the Eighth to the bishop of St. Davids and his successors; but within a year after to John ap Rice,^b or Price, who was subsequently knighted.

The priors of Brecknock were always summoned to the election of the abbats of Battle, by whom they were nominated, and presented to the bishops of St. Davids.^c

At the time of the publication of Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, in 1744, Dr. Brewster, of Hereford, was in possession of an ancient REGISTER of the Priory of BRECKNOCK. Dr. Brewster afterwards bequeathed his manuscripts to the Bodleian library in Oxford: but this Register is not now to be found among them, nor can its present owner be traced.^d

The SEAL of BRECKNOCK PRIORY is appendant to the Acknowledgment of the King's Supremacy preserved in the Chapter House, Westminster, dated Aug. 5, 1534, and signed by Robert Halden the prior and five other monks. It is of white wax, and represents, under ornamented gothic work, a cock standing regardant, with its wings erect, upon a demi-wheel: underneath are five unornamented arches. The legend is SIGILLUM . CONVENTUALE . DOMUS . SANCTI LISTE . BRECONIE.

Of the PRIORY itself almost the only vestige now remaining is a portion of the wall with which its precinct was once surrounded.^e It was situated upon an eminence, on the bank of the Honddu. The last remains of the cloister, with the habitations of the prior and monks, appear to have been taken down about the year 1779.^f The mansion-house now called The Priory belongs to Marquis Camden, who makes it an occasional residence.

The Priory Church is remaining, and is now the principal parish church of Brecknock, still dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. Some part of Bernard de Newmarch's building may still be traced in it. Mr. Jones supposes the fabric, in its original state, to have been perfectly cruciform, and hence to have been sometimes called "Ecclesia Sanctæ Crucis," and the church of the Holy Rood. Considerable alterations, however, were afterwards introduced by the formation of guild-chapels in the interior, and the erection of oratories on the outside. The nave, from the west end to the entrance into the chancel, is a hundred and thirty-six feet six inches in length, and twenty-eight feet six inches in breadth. At the western end the fabric is intersected by a cross aisle; the north part of which is called the chapel of the men of Battle,^g the south part that of the Normans, or red-haired. The Battle aisle is in length thirty feet six inches, by twenty-nine feet in breadth; the Cappel cochiaid, as it is called, or Norman chapel, is thirty-eight feet three inches in length, by twenty-nine feet. The chancel, divided from the body of the church by a gallery, formerly the rood-loft, is sixty-two feet three inches in length, by twenty-nine feet and a half in breadth. The tower-steeple, a lofty and massive structure, ten yards square within the walls, is raised over the centre or intersecting point of the cross.

Nunnery of Armethwaite,

IN

CUMBERLAND.

THE Benedictine Nunnery of ARMETHWAITE, the site of which is now called NUNNERY, was founded by King William Rufus in the second year of his reign. It was situated in the parish of Ainstable, in Leath ward in Cumberland, twelve miles from Penrith, near the water of Croglin: and was dedicated to Christ Jesus and his mother St. Mary.^a

Sir William Dugdale has preserved three charters relating to this monastery; the charter of foundation by King William Rufus, a charter from King Edward the Third, and a general ratification of possessions from King Edward the Fourth.

The original endowment, according to the foundation charter, consisted of two acres of land, forming the site of the house and church; three carucates of land and ten acres of meadow, adjoining the monastery; two hundred and sixteen acres within the forest of Inglewood, north of the water of Tarnwadelyn; common of pasture throughout the forest, with livery of timber; and a yearly rent of forty shillings from two of the king's tenements in Carlisle, paid by the hands of the custos or warden of the town. The nuns had also exemption from toll throughout England; common of pasture for themselves and their tenants in Ainstable; and free warren throughout the whole of their possessions. Their privileges were to be the same as those of the monastery of Westminster; and their lands to be held as freely "as hert may it thynk or ygh may it see."^b

King Edward the Third's charter, in the 5th year of his reign, 1332, remitted to the prioress and nuns their yearly rent of ten pounds, in consideration of the losses they had suffered by the war with Scotland.^c

King Edward the Fourth's charter was granted, principally, in consequence of the monastery having been almost destroyed by Scottish invaders, who not only spoiled the nuns of their church ornaments, reliques, books, and jewels, but also of their charters and evidences. This charter was granted in 1473.^d

According to the General Ecclesiastical Survey, 26 Hen. VIII., as printed by Hutchinson, the total amount of the possessions of Armethwaite nunnery was at that time per annum 19*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.*; out of which there was a payment made to the priory of Wetherall of 12*s.* and the sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* for procurations at the visitations to the bishop of Carlisle, reducing the receipt to 18*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*; which was further reduced to 13*l.* by reason of an annual stipend of 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* given to a chaplain for celebrating divine service daily to the nuns.

A complete Survey of this monastery and its possessions, taken July 31st, 29 Hen. VIII. will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^e The annual value of the lands with which it was at that time endowed amounted to 20*l.* 2*s.* 4*d.* Tanner says only 18*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* per annum.

At the time of the Dissolution there were only three nuns in this house, beside the prioress.

King Edward the Sixth granted the priory of Armethwaite, with the manor and various lands thereto belonging, to William Grayme, alias Carleil, gentleman, by letters patent bearing date March 9th, in the 6th year of his reign. This, say the Messrs. Lysons, was William Greyme, or Graham, of Rose-trees and Netherby, in the parish of Arthuret, who settled the priory estate on his younger son, Fergus. The site of the priory, having acquired the name of Nunnery, continued to be the seat of this branch of the Grahams till about the year 1690, when George Graham, Esq., sold it to Sir John Lowther, Bart. Sir John Lowther exchanged it with John Aglionby, Esq. for Drumburgh castle. It is now the property and residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Bamber, widow, elder sister of the late Christopher Aglionby, Esq. the last heir male of that ancient family, who died in 1785.^f

Hutchinson says, the present house of NUNNERY was erected on the remains of the old house of Benedictine nuns, which, he adds in another page, was taken down in 1715.^g

Burn and Nicolson mention an inscription upon a bed-head at Nunnery, called the Nuns Bed: but Hutchinson could neither find nor hear of it from the Aglionbys.^h

At a distance, on a rising ground to the north-east of the house at Nunnery, in a field called Cross-close, is, or formerly was, an upright Pillar, having on one side a large oval stone with a cross in the centre, bearing the word SANCTUARIUM, in a very ancient character, round it. The date of 1088 had been added below the cross in later times. A wood-cut of this cross was inserted in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1755. Hutchinson conceives this was the boundary of the sanctuary at Nunnery that way.ⁱ This privilege is not mentioned by name in any of the few charters granted to Armethwaite now extant: but the monastery, it will be remembered, was to possess its privileges "simili modo sicut conceditur Monasterio de Westmynster," where sanctuary was one of the most important liberties.

PRIORESSES.

ISABELLA OTTELEY died in 1507: on the 20th of January in which year

ANNES ELVINGTON succeeded.^k

ANNA DARTWENTWATER was the last prioress. She received a pension at the Dissolution of 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*^l

Nicholson and Burn say, there is no presentation or

^a Tanner says, Notit. Mon. "This nunnery is in or near the forest of Inglewood, and probably the same which Gervase of Canterbury, or Sulgrave, and Stevens, i. 38, call 'Prioratus de Ingleswode S. Mariæ, moniales nigræ.'"

Bishop Tanner gives the two following references to Records relating to this monastery: "Pat. 11 Edw. II. p. i. m. 25, pro pastura in foresta de Inglewood. Rec. in Scacc. 20 Edw. IV. Trin. rot. 9."

No Register of this nunnery is now known to be extant; nor have the Editors of the Monasticon yet discovered an impression of the conventual Seal.

Mulebroc, or Milbrook; and Moddry,

AFTERWARDS CALLED

A Cell to the Monastery of St. Albans.

IR William Dugdale, who calls this monastery by the name of BEAULIEU only, places it in Bedfordshire, in which he is followed by other writers. The Messrs. Lysons, however, in their Magna Britannia, noticing MILBROOK in that county, a village about a mile from Ampt-hill, say, “At this place was a cell of Benedictine monks belonging to the abbey of St. Albans, which was re-moved about the year 1119 by Geoffrey the sixteenth abbat of that monastery to MODDRY, otherwise BEAULIEU, in Hertfordshire.”^a

Tanner, speaking of Mulebroc, or Milbrook, says the monks were removed hence by abbat Geoffrey to the hermitage of Moddry, which was given to St. Albans by Robert de Albini and his mother Cicily about A.D. 1140:^b and this latter is the more probable date.^c

Newcome says the Priory of Beaulieu was situated in the parish of Clophill, in Bedfordshire.^d

Two charters of Robert de Albeneio, or Albini, as the founder of Beaulieu, will be seen in the Appendix of Instruments. The first^e contains his donation to St. Albans of a church dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, which had been built by one Ralph within the hermitage of Moddry, together with the mill of Turnehale or Turville, the church

^a Lysons, Magna Brit. vol. i. p. 117.

^c Newcome, Hist. St. Albans, p. 478, speaks of this Cell as having probably been first founded in the time of abbat Paul; but upon what data does not appear. Mat. Paris, in the Lives of the Abbats of St. Albans, edit. 1684, p. 1005, says, in the Life of Richard the successor of Paul, “Concessa est insuper Ecclesia de Hatfeld, cum Ecclesia de Melebroc huic ecclesie in cellam, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus.”

Mat. Paris, speaking of abbat Geffrey, says, “Hujus quoque tem-pore, datum est heremitorium de Modri, quod fuerat Radulphi here-mitæ, cum ecclesiis, decimis, et pluribus rebus aliis. Et sciendum quod dictus abbas transtulit Monachos de Mulebroc ad heremitorium præ-fatum de Modri. Fundataque ecclesia illic, monachorumque ædificiis, inibi eos fecit regulariter cohabitare.” Ibid. p. 1008.

of Melebroc, ten acres of land at Stepehell, the church of Rhinthele, the church at Clophell,^a and some other inferior possessions. The second charter^b speaks of the church of St. Mary Magdalen of Beaulieu as situated in his park of Turnehale; it adds a further grant of land called Guhardeslie, the wood of Haselden, the domain of Walhege, land "juxta Eugewerram," and other possessions of less note, the site and extent of which are minutely detailed.

Except a Pleading in Quo Waranto respecting the claim of the prior of Beaulieu to view of frank-pledge in Clophull, Millebrok, and Cotes,^c we have no instruments which throw light upon the history of this cell till the time when John Whethamstede became abbat of St. Albans.^d That abbat is stated at first to have been a benefactor to Beaulieu:^e but its low and impoverished state led him at last to the thought of its suppression, or at least of uniting it to the parent monastery. Newcome says, at this time the number of monks was but four, and their yearly income no more than eight pounds.^f Abbat Whethamstede's Supplicatio pro unione,^g however, states that its revenues were scarcely equal for the support of two monks, though he rates them at eighteen pounds. The proposition was to transfer the revenues to the fund for supporting students, from the Monastery, at Oxford. Reginald de Grey, Lord Ruthyn and Hasting, who, as descended from Robert de Albini, was the patron of the priory, gave his consent to the change by instrument. At the end of the Supplicatio it is said, "Supplicatio ista expedita erat in Curia et consignata per Papam." Tanner says, this Cell was finally suppressed and united to the parent abbey by a bull from Pope Eugenius the Fourth. The annexation appears to have taken place in the sixth year of Henry the Sixth.^h Newcome records that the abbat and convent stipulated on their part to solemnize an anniversary for the Lord Ruthyn, and to pay him twenty shillings yearly as an acknowledgment.ⁱ That the soul of Robert de Albini was also to be prayed for appears from a Rental of St. Albans of 1436, in which, under the head of "Onus annuale Magistri Operariae," we have "Item cuilibet scholari studenti Oxoniae ad orand. signanter et in specie pro anima Roberti de Albeneio fundatoris de Bello Loco, et pro animabus patris, matris, et avunculi dicti abbatis [sc. Joh. Whethamstede] xiiij. iv.^d Summa, liij. iv.^d." ^h

Newcome relates, that, soon after, a popular clamour arose against this act, saying that it tended to overthrow religion, and exterminate devotion. And in a short time the king's escheator came down, and required the abbat to show his title to the land; and obliged him to show his title of right by giving answer in the king's exchequer: but as nothing more is said of this suit, it is probable the escheator dropped it.

No impression of the Seal of this priory has been discovered.

PRIORS of BEAULIEU.

Of these the mention is casual only. They were monks of St. Albans, appointed and removeable at the pleasure of the abbat and convent.

WALTER DE STANDON is recorded in the bishop of Lincoln's Registers to have been admitted Prior on the ides of March, 1233.¹

ROGER was admitted Prior in the third year of Bishop Grosthead's pontificate, A. D. 1238.^k

RICHARD DE MYSSSENDENE, whose family name was SMYTH, occurs in 1405.^m

Whethamstede, in his Supplication to the Papal court, speaks of the cell of Beaulieu as "per sinistros eventus diminuta." It appears to have been burnt sometime in the fourteenth century. Among the names of benefactors to St. Albans monastery, already printed in the preceding Volume of this work, we find Margaret countess of Norfolk mentioned, with the addition of "Item dedit cellae nostrae de Bello Loco vastata per incendium xx. marcas." See vol. ii. p. 222.

Newcome informs us, that the site of Beaulieu, together with its neighbouring lands, are now comprehended in the great Kent estate, with Wrest, belonging to the Lady de Grey.ⁿ

^a It is worthy of remark, that in this part of the Charter mention is made of a monastery, of which no other notice occurs. "Item in Clophella, sive Caenho, pastura decem bobus, &c.—necnon mansio quaedam de dominio domini juxta Monasterium de CLOPHELLA, quam monachi sibi ipsis aedificent." The Messrs. Lysons, Mag. Britan. vol. i. p. 71, say, "It is probable that it was a cell to St. Albans, and was of short duration."

^d A composition made at Westminster by the bishop of Salisbury and the abbats of Westminster and Waltham, between the bishop of Lincoln and the abbat of St. Albans, in 1219, relating to the cells of Belvoir, Hertford, and Beaulieu, has been already printed in the Appendix to St. Albans Monastery, Num. XXII. See vol. ii. p. 233.

faciendum cum loco illo juxta suae arbitrium voluntatis." Abbat Whethamstede's own expenditure, in procuring the annexation of Beaulieu to his monastery, has been already noticed as amounting to seventy pounds. See vol. ii. p. 201.

[Ex Registro Abbatiae S. Albani in Bibl. Cottoniana, fol. 128 b.]

HÆC est donatio et confirmatio cellæ de Moddry. Robertus de Albeneio gratia Dei, et assensu consilioque Seciliae matris suæ, necnon suorum fidorum hominum, et amicorum, dedit Deo et sancto Albano ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ, quam Radulfus heremita confluxerat in heremitorio de Moddry; dedit, inquam, et confirmavit ipsam ecclesiam sancto Albano in cellam, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus quæ videlicet, hic scripta sunt.

Imprimis heremitorium de Moddry totum, in assartis, et bosco, et cæteris quæ ad illud pertinebant die qua Henricus de Albeneio, pater hujus Roberti fuit vivus et mortuus, cum bosco, quod ipse Robertus et mater sua Secilia dederunt supradictæ ecclesiæ quando dedicata est, in dotem, cum molendino de Turnehale cum terra et prato ad illud pertinentibus, et cum bosco quod postea addiderunt, et una insula prati, quæ est inter prædictum molendinum, et domum quæ ad illud pertinet. Item ecclesia de Melebroc, quam prius dederat Nigellus del Waste, et postea Henricus de Albeneio concesserat, cum una hida terræ, et dimidia virgata; ista libertate, quod pecunia viva campestris de propria curia monachorum de Melebroc pascentur cum dominica pecuniâ Domini, et habebunt quietum pasnagium porcorum suorum illinc. Item decem acræ terræ de Stepehell quas ipse Robertus obtulit super altare memoratæ ecclesiæ de Moddry in die festi sancti Machuti. Item ecclesia de Rinethella cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus. Item ecclesia de Clophella, cum duabus virgatis terræ et cæteris omnibus quæ ad eam pertinent, præter illa quæ sunt monachorum de Warengsford, id est, duæ partes totius decimæ de dominio domini; et in bosco de Clophella pastio quædraginta porcis, sine pasnagio. Item in Clophella, sive Caenho, pastura decem bobus cum dominicis bobus domini, et centum ovibus cum dominicis ovibus domini, et communis pastura cæteræ pecuniæ monachorum, si quam habuerunt, vel ipsi, vel homines illorum; necnon mansio quædam de dominio domini juxta monasterium de Clophella, quam monachi sibi ipsis ædificent. Item quindecim acræ terræ propter servitium capellæ de Caenho, tribus diebus in hebdomada. Item una virgata terræ, cum dimidia unius cotlandi tota, sicut fuerat Walteri Fabri, quam Radulfus filius Roberti vendidit monachis pro quatuor marcis argenti, et una marca auri, et una sue, et sex summis bladi, et juraverunt super altare ipse, et filius ejus Richardus, quod nunquam deinceps pro illa terra aliquid à monachis requirerent. Item dimidia virgata terræ quæ fuit Wincardi, cum ipso Wincardo.

Et si aliquando, Dei aspiratione, ipse dominus Robertus, vel aliqui ex hominibus ejus honoris, dederint prædictæ ecclesiæ, sive de terris suis, sive de aliis rebus, hac eadem confirmatione firmum erit et stabile. Et ipse quidem Robertus et Nigellus frater suus, et Secilia mater eorum effecti sunt fratres ecclesiæ sancti Albani pleniter ut monachi ejusdem ecclesiæ. Hoc etiam sciendum, quod homines monachorum Modriensium, erunt quieti ab operibus tam regis quam domini, nisi ipsi monachi sponte voluerint eos præsentare. Hæc omnia, cum omnibus ad ea pertinentibus dedit et confirmavit ipse dominus Robertus Deo et sancto Albano in capitulo sancti Albani, et post capitulum, obtulit super magnum altare, per unum cultellum, soluta et quieti ab omnibus consuetudinibus et servitiis regis et suis,

Priory of Wallingford,

IN

BERKSHIRE.

A Cell to St. Albans Abbey.

THE foundation of the priory or cell of Wallingford is ascribed by Newcome^a and Clutterbuck^b to Robert D'Oyley, a Norman chief, who came over in the time of the Conqueror. Matthew Paris, however,^c and the Catalogue of Benefactors to St. Albans in the Cotton manuscript Nero D. vii.^d speak of Geoffrey the chamberlain as the person who gave the cell, that is the church of the Holy Trinity of Wallingford, to St. Albans in the time of abbat Paul, between 1077 and 1093, by whom a few monks were sent to it as a colony from the parent monastery.

King Richard the Second endowed this priory with a grant of the church of Garsington, in Oxfordshire;^e and King Henry the Sixth confirmed to it a grant of 8*l.* per annum to be paid by the town of Wallingford, and also the advowson of the church of Chinnor, in Oxfordshire.^f

The following list of the

where other references are not given, has been taken from Willis's History of the Mitred and other Abbies.

NICHOLAS, monk of St. Alban's, prior of Wallingford, was made abbat of Malmesbury in 1182.^g

JOHN occurs in 1195, in which year he was made abbat of St. Albans, and was hence called JOHN WALLINGFORD, or DE CELLA.^h

SIMON, anno 1205.

RALPH WARRINGTON is the next who occurs; and then

GEFFREY, A. D. 1250. Willis says, the next in my List is

THOMAS, and then

GREGORY, A. D. 1288.

WILLIAM DE KIRKEBY occurs prior at the latter end of the thirteenth century;ⁱ though Willis says that Gregory was succeeded by

GERMANUS; and he by

STEPHEN DE WITTENHAM, who occurs A. D. 1315. After him,

WILLIAM DE HUNTINGDON; and then

WILLIAM DE HERON. He presided in the years 1338 and 1357; as did

WILLIAM DE STENINGTON, A. D. 1359 and 1367; though, according to the St. Albans Register, William de Heron occurs A. D. 1380; in which also we find

WILLIAM DE BINGHAM, or BYNHAM, A. D. 1389. He was alive in 1396, but was hindered at that time by extreme weakness of body from attending the election of John Moote as abbat of St. Albans.^k

JOHN STOKES is mentioned as prior in the time of Henry the Fourth. He was chosen abbat of St. Albans in the 19th Hen. VI. A. D. 1440.^l

HENRY HALSTEDE, his successor here, occurs in King Henry the Sixth's charter to this priory, A. D. 1444.^m

JOHN PEYTON, LL. D. occurs as prior here in 1451, when John Whethamstede was first elected abbat of St. Albans.ⁿ

WILLIAM WELLS occurs in 1453.^o Willis, by mistake, calls him John Wells. He is probably the same with WILLIAM WALLIS, mentioned by Peck from the Obituary of the priory of Belvoir.^p

JOHN DE BANBURGH occurs A. D. 1458, and

WILLIAM DE HARDWICK, D. D. an. 1472, to whom succeeded, A. D. 1473,

WILLIAM RYSBOROW; and to him

ANTHONY ZOUCHE, who occurs A. D. 1484. The next upon record is

JOHN THORNTON, B. D. He presided here A. D. 1497 and 1503. Willis thinks it probable that he was succeeded by

JOHN CLARE, who occurs A. D. 1515, 7th Hen. VIII., and whom he presumes to have been the last prior.^q

Peck, in one of his manuscripts already quoted in a Note below, names ELIAS as the name of a prior of Wallingford, but without any date attached to his name.

Tanner says the yearly revenue of this cell is not to be found in the valuations of the religious houses, 26 Hen. VIII., because Cardinal Wolsey, commendatory abbat of St. Albans, had before that time procured the pope's bull for the dissolving of this, with other small monasteries,^r and had their lands bestowed on him by the king, 20 Hen. VIII., with intent that he should settle the same on the new College which he was about to build at Oxford.^a Upon his attainder, however, this priory again reverted to the crown, and was granted in 1547, 38th Hen. VIII., to John Norris, Esq.^b It afterwards belonged to the family of Molins.

At the Chapter-House, Westminster, are accounts of this priory from the 10th to the 16th year of Richard II.

In Cardinal Wolsey's Book [as it is called] in the Augmentation Office, 18 Hen. VIII., the leaf which contained an account of the revenues of this priory is unfortunately lost, but there are some entries as to the expenditure; by which it appears that the wages of the servants amounted per annum to 8*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*; the expenses of housekeeping, in oxen, sheep, calves, pigs, &c., salt fish and other fish, spices, and other necessities, 40*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*; the expenses of husbandry, in making of hay, cutting of grain, &c., were 14*l.*; and the repairs amounted to 16*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* that year. The church ornaments remaining are thus expressed:

"Remanere Jocalium infra Prioratum Walyngford prædict.

- iiij. Calices et deaurat.
- j. Crux argenti et deaurat.
- ij. Pere de les cruetts.
- ij. Candelebris argenti.
- j. Turibulum.
- j. Pixid. argenti.
- ij. Siphii mirrei.
- j. Crat^r.
- vj. Cocliaria.
- j. Ciphus cornu argent. circumplexus."

The Messrs. Lysons in their Magna Britannia say, from one of Symonds's manuscripts, that some part of the buildings of this Priory remained in 1644, near Clapcote House, the seat of that family.^c Hearne, in a manuscript Note in a copy of the first edition of Tanner's Notitia Monastica, says the remains of the Priory walls were pulled down in 1723. No vestiges whatever are to be at present seen. It was originally but a small building, just within the west gate of Wallingford.

The priory estate is now the property of William Hucks, Esq.^d

The following references to collections and instruments relating to the priory of Wallingford are all which are given by Bishop Tanner:

Peter de Blois, or Blesensis, who was invited to England by King Henry II. and was afterwards made archdeacon of Bath by him, in a letter to the abbat and convent of St. Albans, complains greatly of the want of hospitality, on the part of the prior of their cell of Wallingford, to him, on one of his visitations. See the "Opera Petri Blesensis quondam in Anglia archidiaconi et apud Cantuariensem archiepiscopum cancellarii," 4^o. Mogunt. 1600, epist. 29. He begins,

"Nuper de archidiaconatus mei visitatione redibam, præmittens servientes meos apud Weralingeforde, qui mihi hospitium præpararent: ipsi vero à priore illius domos ibi vacantes ad usum unius noctis mihi commodari, peterent, et jam illius omnia, quæ nobis et jumentis erant necessaria comportassent: prior eis in multa superbia et abusione respondit, et pene usque ad verberum contumeliam prorumpens, eos ignominiosa verborum turpitudine laccessivit."

Priory of Belvoir,

IN

LINCOLNSHIRE.

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Albans.

R. Nichols has been so copious in his Account of Belvoir Priory, in the History of Leicestershire, that little of primary importance can be added to his detail.

Robert de Belvedeir, otherwise called Robert de Todenei,^a it appears, began the church of Our Lady near to his castle of Belvoir about the year 1076: but being by secular employments so hindered that he could not attend to the finishing of it according to his mind, he, by the advice of Archbishop Lanfrank, gave it to the church of St. Alban, upon condition that Paul, the then abbat, should perfect it, and place therein four monks of that convent, to pray for the souls of Robert earl of Moretaine and King William, as also for his own soul, and the soul of Adela his wife, their children, and parents; whereupon he and his wife were admitted into the fraternity of St. Albans monastery, with a promise that after their respective deceases, in case they should die in England, their bodies should by leave of the abbat be buried either at St. Albans or Belvoir; their bounty being so great to those places, that wheresoever either of them should die, the church of St. Alban, and this of Our Lady at Belvoir, were to have part of their estates, to be disposed of as the abbat and monks of St. Albans should appoint.

The lands with which Robert de Todenei endowed his church were, first, the town of Horninghold with its appurtenances; four carucates of land adjacent to his castle, with the meadows thereto belonging; and twenty acres of land near the church whereon to erect out-houses and other buildings for the convenience of the monks: all of which were to be as free from any exaction as he himself held them from the king. He moreover gave for the endowment of the priory the tithes of all his vineyards, and the site of a mill upon the next river; as also the tithes of ten towns; these were, Hortune, Frantune, Sapertune, Risendune, Stokes, and Wilbertone, with one man in each, with a garden and one oxgang of land; in Segentune the whole tithes, and eight acres of land (four lying on one side of the road and four on the other), with one garden; in Medbourn the tithe only; in Wivelle, the tithes and one oxgang of land, with one man and his garden; and the tithes of Ulestane-thorp: all these free, and exempt from any custom whatsoever, with a command that in each town the church should have the meadow near unto it, and pasturage, in the same manner as he had himself held it. After the death of Adela his wife, Robert de Todenei also granted to the church of Belvoir, with the consent of his sons William and Geoffrey, one carucate of land in Sapertune, for the health of her soul.^b

William de Albini, called also Brito, son of Robert de Todenei, confirmed in the chapter-house at St. Albans all that his father and mother had given to the church of our Lady at Belvoir; desiring that he might be admitted into the fraternity of the parent monastery, as his father and mother had been: which being granted, he presented his confirmation upon the altar of our Lady there, freely offering up himself as a brother and monk to the church of St. Alban, and giving thereto, as well as to Belvoir, a portion of his temporal estate after his decease. After this, he gave to the church of Belvoir the land which Waleran his purveyor held in Hungreton, with the tithe of the rents of all his lands, of what sort soever, payable to himself or his heirs for the time to come.^c William de Albini also obtained for the priory from King Henry I. the grant of an annual fair at Belvoir.^d

Robert de Todenei, a younger son, gave to this cell of Belvoir thirty stikes of eels, to be paid yearly on St. Matthias day, out of his mills at Aburne.^e

Agnes de Rya, a daughter of the founder, ratified the grants which her father had made to the monks, of one oxgang of land in Aslakeby, and two parts of the tithes of the demesnes there, in corn, calves, lambs, wool, cheese, pigs, beer, and apples, and of whatsoever else was titheable, that lordship being her marriage-portion.^f This was confirmed by a mandate from Henry de Rya, her son.^g

The second William de Albini, sometimes also called Brito, but usually distinguished by the name of Meschines, gave, about the year 1155, to the priory of Belvoir, the church of Redmile with its appurtenances, and also the manse which had before that time been his own chapel, with the houses and lands belonging to it.^h The same William, by another deed, commanded his vassals of Sabridgeworth in Herts, and the officers of his household there, whether French or English, to pay a proper respect to the monks who were to perform divine service in his church of Sabridgeworth, that none of them might sustain any injury; and, if any matter of difficulty should arise, that it should be stayed till the cause could be regularly brought before himself. These monks, Mr. Nichols thinks, were most likely the chaplains of his own household, whom he brought with him from Belvoir priory.^a

About the time of these donations, a dispute between the monks of Belvoir and those of Redford, relative to tithes at Bradley, Solcefort, Melve, and Seleham, was referred, by order of Pope Adrian, to the decision of Theobald archbishop of Canterbury and Richard bishop of London.^b

A dispute between the prior of Belvoir and the abbat of Croxton, relative to some tithes arising in the village of Howes in right of the advowson, was amicably adjusted at St. Albans in 1228.^c

The third William de Albin, about the year 1230, for the health of his soul, and the soul of Agatha his then wife, and the soul of Margery his former wife, gave to the monks of Belvoir one sheaf of every kind of grain arising out of all the lands belonging to his lordships of Belvoir, Wolstthrop, Botelsford, Uffington, and Stokes.^d He gave them, also, the church of Redmile by a new grant; and all the trees growing within certain limits of Belvoir warren, particularly described in his deed of gift.^e

In 1258, Robert lord Ros and Isabel his wife renounced to the prior and convent of Belvoir all their claim of right of presentation to the church of Redmile, for the consideration of thirty-five marks. The lady Isabel gave and confirmed to them two parts of all the tithes in her demesne at Bottesford and Normanton. Baldwin Dapifer and Hugh Flandrensis also gave them a portion of tithes in Bottesford.^f

In 1277, Archbishop Kilwardby, having inspected the proper documents, declared the right of the priory to the several advowsons of Claxton, Howes, Plungar, Barkston, Talintone, Auburne, and Horninghold.^g

In 1288, Thomas Bouche gave thirteen selions of land in Barkston; and Roger prior of Belvoir recovered, by a suit at Westminster, some lands belonging to his convent at Aslacton in Nottinghamshire.^h

In 1308, the church of Wolstthrop was appropriated to the priory of Belvoir by William lord Ros.ⁱ

The church of Norton by Twycross was appropriated to the priory of Belvoir in 1391.^k

Thomas lord Ros, in a charter dated April 23d, 1430, enumerating the benefactions to this priory, confirms the several grants of his different ancestors.^l

Such is the substance of the more important instruments granted to the priory of Belvoir. A large assemblage of grants of a less important nature are preserved in Peck's Manuscript Collections for a Continuation of Sir William Dugdale's Monasticon, the titles of which will be found in the Note.^m

The whole of these are inserted by Mr. Nichols in his Appendix to the Account of the Belvoir Priory.

Mr. Nichols, Hist. Leic. vol. ii. P. i. p. 76, enumerates, as among the duke of Rutland's Evidences at Belvoir Castle:

1. A deed of the time of Henry the First, in which Robert Poker gives to the church and monks of St. Mary at Belvoir a house and toft in the village, to pray for the souls of William de Albini the elder and William his son.

2. Another deed of Robert Poker, granting to the monks a piece of land betwixt the castle ditch and the king's highway, called Westgate.

3. A grant, of the year 1132, 33 Hen. I. from William de Ros, lord of Hamlake, to the priory, of a croft at Belvoir, lying betwixt Pekok croft and Long croft, in exchange for two acres of meadow lying in Belver warren.

^a Hist. Leic. ut supr. p. 78.

^b Ibid.

* Ibid. In Sir Robert Atkyns's History of Gloucestershire, p. 636, there is mention of a plow tillage belonging to this priory at Saperton, in that county; in Martin's History of Thetford, p. 153, of a pension of xij^s. out of the rectory of Yoxford: in Thoroton's Nottinghamshire, p. 110, of lands at Granby; p. 114, at Saperton; p. 119, at Thoroton.

Mr. Nichols has given the following list of the partly from the additions to Browne Willis's list in Tanner's Notitia Monastica; partly from Bishop Kennett's manuscript additions to Dugdale's Monasticon, now in the Bodleian library, among Mr. Gough's books; and partly from certain original charters of the priory of Wallingford, formerly belonging to Anthony Wood, now in the Ashmolean Museum. It is remarkable that a great many of the priors in this list have already appeared, a few pages back, as priors of Wallingford, sometimes with a variation of dates, and sometimes with dates which show that the two priories were often successively governed by the same person. Wallingford and Belvoir were, both, Cells to St. Albans, the abbat of which monastery appointed or removed the subordinate priors at his pleasure.

NICHOLAS, prior of Belvoir, resigned in 1195.

SIMON was prior in the time of Herbert, prior of St. Neots. He died Feb. 4th, 1204, 5 Joh.

RALPH called the Simple.

ROGER DE WENDOVER, who was prior here, was deposed by William abbat of St. Albans for having wasted the effects of the church in careless prodigality.^a Roger, whom Bishop Tanner, in his Bibliotheca Britannica Hibernica, also calls ROGER WENDORE, or WINDLESHORE, was the celebrated historian of that name, so particularly noticed in Dr. Watt's Preface to Matthew Paris's History. He died about three or four years after his deposition; Tanner says, on the 2d of the nones of May, 1236.

MARTIN DE BODMERSHAM, or BORDESHAM, was the next prior.

GEOFFREY occurs in 1251, 35 Hen. III.

WILLIAM DE HUNTINGDON in 1277.

MINION DE BARTON was succeeded, in 1284, by

ROGER DE HENRED, who, as prior of Belvoir, agreed to celebrate the anniversary of Roger abbat of St. Albans, 1288. He died May 6th, the year unknown.

THOMAS occurs 1288.

GREGORY, 1289, 17 Edw. I.

JOHN LANGLEY occurs in 1292, 1299, and 1302. He died Feb. 18th.

GERMANUS is named t. Edw. II.

STEPHEN DE WITTEHAM, or WITTENHAM, occurs in 1316, 9 Edw. II.

JOHN KENDALE occurs in 1228—1332.

WILLIAM DE HERON occurs in 1340, 13 Edw. III., and again in 1349. He died August 17th, 1361, and was buried in the church of Belvoir.^b

WILLIAM DE STENINGTON, who succeeded in 1361, was also buried in the church in 1367.

RICHARD occurs in 1367 and 1381.

SIMON SOTHERY, who was afterwards prior of St. Albans, flourished, according to Tanner, in 1382. He died, according to the Belvoir Necrology, on Nov. 28th.

WILLIAM DE BYNHAM occurs in 1390, 13 Ric. II.

JOHN STOKE was prior from 1397 to 1427. He was afterwards abbat of St. Albans.

JOHN WYTEBY occurs in 1430 and 1441.

JOHN DE BANBURGH, 1459.

WILLIAM HENDWICK, S. T. B., 1474, 13 Edw. IV.

JOHN THORNTON, S. T. D., occurs 1498.

ROBERT ASHBY, or ESEBY, occurs ult. Jul. 1498, and April 12, 1499. He died April 5, 1513.

JOHN CLARE, 1516.

RALPH EYTON, 1520 and 1530. He died Dec. 10th.

THOMAS occurs 20 April, 1531.

. . . . RANDYLL.

. . . . HAMTYL.

The names of the five following Priors are added from the Belvoir Necrology, though the exact years in which they presided cannot be discovered.

1. "ANDREAS, prior hujus ecclesiæ, obiit tricesimo die mensis Aprilis.

2. JOHANNES BIWELL, prior hujus ecclesiæ, obiit tricesimo die mensis Augusti.

3. Dominus JOHANNES HATFIELD, prior de Belvero, obiit vicesimo quarto die mensis Novembris.

4. Magister JOHANNES REVES, professor theologiæ, quondam prior hujus ecclesiæ, obiit 15^o. die Decembris.

5. JOHANNES GYLDFORDE, quondam prior hujus ecclesiæ, obiit decimo nono die mensis Decembris."^d

At the Dissolution, this priory was valued, according to Dugdale, at 104*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* per annum; according to Speed, at 129*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*: Leland says, at 135*l.* The site was granted, according to Tanner, in the 33d of Henry VIII. to Thomas earl of Rutland and Thomas Tirwhit, esq.^e Mr. Nichols refers to a patent of the 34th Hen. VIII. p. 1, and says, that in 1542 the earl of Rutland being constituted warden of the marshes, he accompanied the duke of Norfolk, then general of an army consisting of 20,000 men, in his invasion of Scotland, where in eight days they burned twenty towns and villages; and being much in the king's favour, he, on his return, obtained in that year (jointly with Robert Tyrwhit) a grant of the priory of Belvoir, and also of Egle, in Lincolnshire, which had been a commandery of the Knights Templars.^f

In 1553 there remained in charge, paid out of this priory, the sum of 5*l.* in annuities.^g

Peck, in the volume of his Collections, in continuation of Dugdale's Monasticon already quoted, has preserved a rude drawing of a fragment of the

SEAL of BELVOIR PRIORY, the device representing the Virgin and Child, appendant to an instrument dated April 12th, 1499.^h

Belvoir priory was the burying place of Robert de Todenei,ⁱ and of the Albinis his successors, and of the hearts only of some, the bodies lying at Newstead abbey near Stamford, or at Croxton abbey. The family of Ros also buried there, and sometimes only the heart, their bodies lying at Kirkham, in Yorkshire, with which they were connected. Several other benefactors, priors, &c., were buried in the church, whence, at the Dissolution, many ancient monuments of the Albinis and Rosses were, at the direction of Thomas earl of Rutland, removed to Bottesford.

^a See Mat. Paris, in the Account of abbat William, edit. 1684, pp. 1052, 1053.

^b Mr. Nichols says, that, after discharging the priory of a debt of 73*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, he built the chapels of St. Mary and St. Nicholas, planted a thousand trees round the priory, and gave the monks a hundred marks, with many other tokens of his benevolence. Two years previous to his death he resigned his office of prior, and is said to have subsequently lived in one of the chambers of the Infirmary. He was buried in the chapel of St. Mary.

^c Mr. Nichols says he succeeded in this year. Though not mentioned by Dugdale in the list of interments from the Belvoir Register, he appears to have been buried in the Lady chapel, where a flat white stone was found in 1792, with the following inscription cut upon it, on a scroll, "Will'm Halle quondam Prior istius Eccl'ie." His skeleton was visible when the stone was taken up.

ⁱ He was buried in the chapter-house, the place where founders of religious houses were most generally deposited. His coffin, of brown stone, six feet and a half, by two feet and a half tapering to sixteen inches, and eight inches thick, was dug up in 1726, and seen by Dr. Stukeley; and twice again in 1792, in the presence of Mr. Nichols, Mr. Gough, &c. On one side of the lid were the words, ROBERT DE TODENEI LE FYDEVYR. Close to it was the coffin of William de Albin II.

view of the ground on which the priory stood, and a laborious tracing of the foundations, Mr. Nichols has given a Plan of the Church of Belvoir. It appears to have consisted of a western tower, a nave separated from its aisles by eight pillars, with a chancel, and a presbytery beyond. At the south-west end of the chancel a chapel to St. Osyth; and on the south side of the presbytery a chapel to St. Nicholas. Parallel with the whole length of the chancel on the north side was the chapel of St. Catherine, and beyond, parallel with St. Catherine's chapel and the north side of the presbytery, the chapel of the Virgin Mary. On the north side of the nave, adjoining the west end of the Lady chapel, stood the Cloister, with the chapter-house in the centre. The original site of the nave Mr. Nichols says was readily determined by the position of its eight pillars, all of which, except one to the south-west, were dug up. Large masses of ruin, indicating the tower, were removed from the west end. The foundations of the chancel eastward of the nave were also visible. The chapter-house was fixed as being to the north of the body of the church by the coffins of the founder and his son, who were buried in the middle of it; as well as by those of Ropesley and Deincourt, whose monumental stones pointed out the situation of the door. The chapel of St. Mary was discoverable by the inscription of William Halle the prior, and by the monumental stones of at least two of his brethren. It had a Cloister in common with St. Catherine's chapel, which was therefore without hesitation fixed to the north side of the church. The chapel of St. Nicholas appears to have been a portion of the plan which could not be completely ascertained. The position assigned to St. Osyth's chapel was justified by foundations discovered at the east end of the south aisle of the nave.^a

Behind the inn stables, Mr. Nichols says, which are built upon a part of the ancient burying ground of the priory, in a close called the Dovecote close, of about twelve acres, held by the master of the inn, the site of the conventual buildings may still be traced, with strong marks of foundations. No walls, he says, remain; but the fragments, in various places, bear evident indications of their destruction by fire. In digging among the ruins in 1791, various cornices and capitals of pillars, paving tiles, coats of arms, &c. were found.^b Among these were two tiles, each bearing a bell with a sword and key at the sides, probably some device of Belvoir.

Bishop Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, notices a CHARTULARY of this Priory as, in 1680, in the possession of the Duke of Buckingham: it was probably the same manuscript noticed by Peck in 1731 as then in the possession of the Duke of Rutland. Excerpts from this, or some other Chartulary, are preserved among Dodsworth's manuscripts in the Bodleian library, vol. lv. fol. 140; vol. lxvii. fol. 203; vol. lxxviii. fol. 70; and in the Harleian MS. 2044, fol. 96.

Bishop Tanner also notices "Apographa quarundam Cartarum ad hunc prioratum spectantium MSS. in Museo Ashmol. Oxon. Wood, xxxii. fol. 65;" together with the following references to public records:

NUM. I.

Fundatio Cellae de Belvero.

[Ex Registro Cartarum Abbatiae de S. Albano in Bibl. Cottoniana, fol. 120.]

HÆC est conventio inter abbatem Paulum, et Robertum de Belvedeir. Robertus inceperat ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ juxta castellum suum, quam quia ipse, sæculi curis obstantibus, ad perfectum pro velle suo producere non poterat, consilio domini L. archiepiscopi, concessit illam ecclesiæ sancti Albani, Anglorum protomartiris, in cellam, tali pacto, quod abbas Paulus eam perficeret, et post ibidem quatuor ex conventu monachos statueret, qui, suscepto beneficio, pro animâ Roberti comitis et Willielmi regis, ejusdemque Roberti et uxoris suæ A. necnon et filiorum et parentum suorum dominum exorarent.

Qua ex re effecti sunt uterque Robertus et A. ejus uxor in capitulo, fratres ecclesiæ sancti Albani, pleniter ut monachi; concedentes, ut post obitum eorum apud sanctum Albanum, corpora illorum sepelirentur, si in Anglia more-rentur, vel apud ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ, quam juxta castellum suum fundaverunt; et hoc tamen non nisi licentia abbatis ecclesiæ sancti Albani. Dederunt etiam, et concesserunt singuli post mortem eorum ubicunque morirentur vel sepelirentur portionem totius suæ substantiæ ecclesiæ sancti Albani, et sanctæ Mariæ in potestate abbatis et fratrum.

Beneficium autem quod Robertus, concedente A. uxore sua, præfatæ ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ tunc ad præsens donavit, hoc est; sed postea plura se daturum ex conventionem spopondit, nam omnium terrarum quascunque per Dei adjutorium, et concessum regis, in suum dominium adquirere quoquomodo posset, dedit et concessit decimas eidem ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ. Imprimis itaque dedit ad præsens villam unam quæ vocatur Horingwald, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, tam liberè et quietè sicut ipse habebat illam à rege. Juxta castellum etiam suum concessit et dedit quatuor carucas terræ, cum pratis ad illas pertinentibus, et viginti acras terræ juxta ecclesiam, ad construendas officinas, cæterasque domos monachis necessarias, et hominibus eorum, quietas et solutas ab omni consuetudine sicut ipse tenebat eas à rege. Dedit etiam et concessit decimas vinearum suarum omnium, et sedem molendini in proxima aqua, et concessit decimas decem villarum ad præsens, ex suo videlicet dominico, annonæ omnium rerum, de quibus decima danda est, et datur, semota quidem tertia parte presbiteri villæ.

Hæ sunt villæ, quarum decimas tunc ad præsens dedit, et concessit, et sicut dictum est, postea se daturum spopondit. In Hortuna itaque dedit decimam, et unum hominem cum suo orto et terram et unum bovem. In Frantuna verò et Sapertuna dedit decimas et unam hominem tantum, cum suo orto, et terram ad unum bovem. In Risenduna dedit decimam, et unum hominem, cum suo orto et terram ad unum bovem. In Stochis autem et Wihbertestona dedit decimas, et unum hominem, cum suo orto, et terram ad unum bovem. In Segetuna dedit decimam, et octo acras terræ, quatuor ex una parte, et quatuor ex altera parte villæ, et hortum tantum. In Medburna dedit decimam tantum. In Wiwella dedit decimam, et terram decem boum, et unum hominem, cum suo orto; in Wlstanestorp decimam.

Has terrulas dedit et concessit esse liberas et quietas ab omni consuetudine, præcipiens, et concedens, ut in unaquaque villa habeat ecclesia prata adjacentia supradictis terrulis, et pasturam sicut ipse dominus Robertus habet, ad suum opus. Hujus doni et conventionis testes sunt isti, Beringerius domini Roberti filius, Robertus de Aquila, Ivo de Tigerivilla, et filius ejus Beringerius, Ascelinus de Vals, Willielmus de Boisrohard, Rogerus Calvus, Richardus de Lintod, Willielmus filius ejus. Odardus de Hottot, Walterus filius Willielmi de Walterivilla. Ex hominibus Beringeri Radulfus de Tuito, Reginaldus de Aitona, Gilbertus de Branstona, Odardus de Lintod. Ex hominibus sancti Albani, Turstanus dapifer, Wlbaldus, Amalgerus, Aschellus cocus. Hugo de Lasp, Serlo camerarius, Willielmus Longus.

Mortuâ verò A. uxore Roberti, concessit Robertus ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ, pro anima uxoris suæ unam carucatam terræ in Sapertuna, eadem conventionem et quietudine qua dederat alia superius, consensu et voluntate filiorum suorum Willielmi et Galfridi, coram supradictis testibus.

Defuncto etiam post aliquantum temporis intervallum Roberto, Willielmus filius ejus, et hæres Honoris renovavit apud sanctum Albanum, in capitulo fratrum conventionem patris et matris suæ, et confirmavit, et concessit ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ, et sancti Albani omnia quæcunque pater et mater ejus antea dederant et concesserant, desiderans et postulans dari et concedi sibi, in ecclesia sancti Albani, eandem societatem, quam pater ejus et mater habuerant.

Quâ devotè suscepta, donum parentum pariter, et suum confirmavit, prius in capitulo, deinde super altare sancti Albani, et postea super altare sanctæ Mariæ posuit, concedens seipsum ecclesiæ sancti Albani plene fratrem, et monachum, dans et concedens ecclesiæ sancti Albani et sanctæ Mariæ suam porcionem totius suæ substantiæ, post suum obitum, ubicunque moriretur, et si in Anglia contigisset eum mori, delegit apud sanctum Albanum, vel apud ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ juxta castellum suum sepeliri, et hoc licentia abbatis ecclesiæ sancti Albani, erat enim frater ecclesiæ eadem conventionem, qua pater ejus fuerat. Postea Willielmus concessit ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ terrulam illam, quam tenebat Walrannus præbendarius suus in Hungretona, et decimam omnium denariorum suorum qui sibi reddentur de terra sua, quoquomodo reddantur sibi vel suis hæredibus semper in posterum.

IN ESSEX.

A Cell to St. Alban's Abbey.

NGELRICA, the wife of Ranulph Peverell, who had been mistress to King William the Conqueror, to atone for her past vices, is stated to have founded here, in the time of King William Rufus, a college of secular canons, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. Here, also, she is said to have passed the remainder of her days, till her decease, about the year 1100.

William Peverell, her son, in the time of Henry the First, converted this foundation into a Priory of Benedictines, which he dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and made subordinate to the abbey of St. Alban.^a

He confirmed all that had before belonged to the church, and which had been given to it by his father and ancestors; adding thereto his own mansion, and all his other houses, for habitations for the monks, with three fields near the church; lands at Alvelwood, Haiod, Copincho, and Colingar; a mill at Aichaham; the tithes of Meldon, and Done; the churches of Achaton, Aselona, and Christesaie, with their tithes, and the tithes of Weston.^b One of these churches, Morant says, the names of which are so strangely disfigured, was Assington in Suffolk.

On the 14th of March, 1231, the greater part of this priory was destroyed by fire. The particulars are detailed from Matthew Paris's History, in the Note below.^c

In the thirteenth of Edward the First, upon a controversy concerning the advowson of the Priory, between Humphrey de Bohun earl of Hereford and Essex plaintiff, and Roger abbat of St. Albans defendant, it was finally agreed in the king's court at Chelmsford, before Solomon de Roffa and others the king's justices itinerant, that the advowson should remain with the abbat, and that it should be freed from any other claim by the said Humphrey de Bohun and his heirs.^d

Another suit was carried on in the eighteenth of the same reign, respecting the patronage of the church of Assington already mentioned, between Sir Andrew de Ne-vil knight, and the prior and convent, before the king's justices at Westminster: till, at length, Sir Andrew, by an instrument dated at London in the month of May that year, for himself and his heirs, quitted all his right and claim which he had or should have to the said advowson or patronage to the abbat and convent of St. Albans and the prior and convent of Hatfield Peverell, and their successors; for which he, his wife, and children, were to be commemorated by the said abbat and monks, and their successors, in their public prayers.^e

Newcourt mentions a third suit, in the time of Henry the Eighth, between this Prior and Convent and the abbat and convent of Bileigh, concerning the tithes of certain lands in Hatfield Peverell and in the neighbouring parish of Ulting.^f

King John, in his charter confirming all their possessions to the monks of St. Albans, calls this cell HETHFEUD;^g and in the bull of confirmation by Pope Honorius III., in 1218, it occurs by the name of Hethfeld.^h

Of the

PRIORS of this HOUSE

the names of very few are recoverable.

ALEXANDER DE BURGO occurs prior in the early part of the thirteenth century. He was succeeded by RICHARD DE BRANTFIELD.ⁱ This was in the time of William de Trumpington, abbat of St. Albans, who died in 1233.

WILLIAM TRENT, prior here, occurs among the persons buried at St. Albans in the Harleian manuscript num. 3775: some time in the fourteenth century. He was interred in the cloister, before the lowest step of the door entering into the chapter-house.

WILLIAM EVERS DON, prior of Hatfield in the time of Edw. III. is said to have left his house to join Henry Spenser bishop of Norwich in his military expedition into Germany and France.^k

..... WHITCHURCH, once prior here, has been already named in a Note to the Account of the Cell of Wallingford.^l

JOHN WHYTB Y occurs prior in the time of abbat Whethamstede.^m

JOHN MOUSTON occurs prior in 1396, at the election of John Moote abbat of St. Albans.^a

WILLIAM occurs, summoned to a convocation of the clergy in the diocese of London, as prior, on May 1st, 1437.^b And

JOHN in 1439.^c

GREGORY WYNWYK was prior at the re-election of John Wethamstede to the abbacy of St. Albans in 1451.^d

RICHARD SNOWDALL was the last prior.^e

Morant says, the crown becoming possessed of the revenues of this house, King Henry VIII., on the 5th of February, 1537, in pursuance of indenture of agreement made between him and Giles Leigh, Sir John Alleyn, and others, did grant to the said Giles the priory of Hatfield Peverell; and also the rectories vicarages, and advowsons, of Hatfield Peverell, and of Acton, and Assington in Suffolk, with all their rights and appurtenances; and all portions or pensions, viz. 11*l.* per annum out of the vicarage of Acton for a ferm, and 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* out of the vicarage of Assington; with all manors, messuages, lands, tenements, pastures, and woods, in as full and ample manner and form as they had been previously enjoyed by the prior.^f

This priory was endowed at the Suppression with lands, according to Dugdale, to the amount of 60*l.* 14*s.* 11*d.*; according to Speed, to 83*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*

The present parish church of Hatfield Peverell is that which belonged to the Priory. An ancient statue in one of the windows is mentioned by Weever as the image of Ingelrica the foundress.^g

The site of this priory was sold in 1768, under an order of Chancery, to John Wright, Esq. This gentleman pulled down the mansion-house, formerly a part of the conventual buildings, which adjoined the Church, and erected a more elegant house upon an eminence at a little distance, now the residence of his grandson, Peter Wright, Esq. This building is also called The Priory.

From Newcourt's Repertorium it appears that the monks of Hatfield Peverell had the tithes of certain demesnes in Bradwell juxta Mare in Essex;^h a yearly pension of six marks from the church of Debden;ⁱ tithes in Hatfield Peverell and Ulting, which have been already noticed, with others in Little Badow;^k and the advowson and patronage of Waltham Parva.^l Priory of Hertford.

A Cell to St. Alban's Abbey.

ALPH de Limesey is recorded in the Registers of St. Alban's abbey to have given to that Monastery as a cell, in the time of abbat Paul, the church of Hertford which he had recently built, endowing it with one hide of land in Hertford, the church with two hides and a half, a mill, and certain pastures in Piritone, two parts of the tithe of his demesnes in Cavendish and Hoccetun, two parts of his tithe with a carucate of land in Ychentune, &c. His posterity were to remain patrons of the Cell or Priory: and the abbat of St. Albans, within a year, was to send six of his monks to serve the church of Hertford, and if more lands were given to the priory by Ralph, to add to the number of the monks proportionately.^a

Hadewise the wife of Ralph de Limesey, with her husband's consent, gave to the church of Hertford the land which had previously been Nigel de Bradewell's, appertaining to her dower, upon certain conditions; one of which was, that, upon her death, an additional monk should be received into the priory to pray for her husband's soul and hers, his office to be continued in succession for ever.^b

Alan de Limesey, the son of Ralph and Hadewise, confirmed his father's grants, further empowering the monks to hold courts.^c

Gerard de Limesey, the son of Alan, gave them the church of Ichentune.^d

John de Limesey, son of Gerard, confirmed the donations of his successive ancestors: further giving them two parts of the tithe of his pannage, as well as of his demesnes in Hulverley.^e

Richard de Puteo gave the monks of Hertford eight acres of land in Bibbesworth, toward the support of their kitchen: John de Limesey, from whom he had originally received this land, being one of the witnesses to his charter.^f

In 1278, when King Edward I. by his Justices caused numerous Inquisitions to be made concerning the privileges of his crown, and actually seized into his hands many of the liberties belonging to the religious, the abbat of St. Albans was summoned to answer by what warrant he claimed to possess divers liberties in different manors and places, as well in what belonged to the principal Monastery as to the Cells. This was the case at the Cell of Hertford;

at which place the abbat was brought before John de Ryegate and others, on the morrow of All Souls in the 6th of Edw. I. to answer to the claims of some other persons on the lands held by this priory: but the abbat claimed, under the grants of King Henry the Second, King Richard I. and King John, view of frank-pledge, chattels of felons and fugitives, and free-warren in all the lands belonging to the priory; and on view of those grants the abbat's rights were approved.^g

In the 12th of Edward II. a great dispute arose between the monks of this cell and the burgesses of the town of Hertford, about right of common. It was agreed that the latter should release all right and claim to the pasture of a meadow, called Wildmarsh, and that the monks should grant them common in two moors, called the Holms; and that in all other commonable lands they should pasture together.^h

Gilbert Mareschall earl of Pembroke, who was killed by a fall from his horse at a tournament held at Ware on the 5th of the kalends of July, 1241, died at the priory of Hertford, where his bowels were afterwards interred before the high altar. Matthew Paris, who notices this occurrence, under the year 1245, makes the following mention of his brother Walter Mareschall in relation to this priory: it is in chronicling his death: "Hujus etiam sequebatur vestigia fratrum penultimus Comes Marescallus Walterus. Qui cum certissime promississet redditum sexaginta solidorum Domui Sanctæ Mariæ, scilicet Monachorum de Hertfordia, et inde scriptum confecisset: eo quod ibidem mortuus est frater ejus Comes Gilebertus, et ibi remanent ejusdem viscera sepulta: oblitus est fidei et promissionis suæ, quam fecerat pro redemptione fratris sui; et post multas prioris dictæ domus inutiles vexationes, illusor est et transgressor manifestus inventus."ⁱ which the Editors of the new Monasticon have been able to recover.

RALPH is stated to have been the name of the first prior.¹

JOHN DE ST. ALBAN was admitted prior in 1223.^m JOHN prior of Hertford, probably the same person, occurs again in 1235:ⁿ in which year he was made abbat of St. Albans.^o

NIGELLUS was prior about A. D. 1240.^p

THOMAS MARTEL was elected A. D. 1253.^q

WILLIAM DE HERTFORD was admitted prior in 1270.^a

JOHN LONGNEY occurs in 1338.^b

WILLIAM WYNSLOWE, prior of Hertford, was present at the election of John Moote abbat of St. Albans in 1396.^c

NICHOLAS occurs in 1400.^d

THOMAS WALDEN.^h

JOHN BENSTED, 1 Hen. VII. 1483.ⁱ

WILLIAM DIXWELL, 10 Hen. VII. 1495.^k

JOHN CHILLINGWORTH occurs prior 2 Hen. VIII. 1511.^l He was succeeded by

THOMAS HAMPTON, who, according to Willis, was elected about the 5th Hen. VIII. 1514.^m A manuscript note, however, of Mr. Thomas Baker's, in a copy of the Mitred Abbies, says, "An. 1512-13, conceditur magistro Thomæ Hampton, monacho, Priori de Hertford, licentiatum ad prædicand. per privilegia Monasterii sui, ut possit uti bireto quum prædicat extra Universitatem propter infirmitatem capitis sui, sic quod solvat Universitati xl^s." ⁿ

This priory, which, according to Newcome, maintained twelve monks and a prior, was valued in the Exchequer, as Stevens informs us, at 86*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* though Sir William Dugdale rates it at no more than 72*l.* 14*s.* 2½*d.* It was dissolved in the 26th Hen. VIII. when the manor coming to the crown, the king, by his letters patent, dated in the 29th of his reign, granted it, together with the site of the monastery, &c. to Anthony Denny, Esq. afterwards Sir Anthony Denny, and Joan Champernoun, with remainder to the heirs of the said Anthony.^o Stevens says, from Chauncy, that his sons sold it to Martin Trots, Esq. Afterwards it came to Richard Willis of Horingsly in the county of Cambridge. His son Thomas Willis rebuilt the church belonging to the priory, an. 1629, and dedicated it to St. John Baptist. Afterwards he sold it to Sir John Harrison, about 1638.^p "The reader may here observe," Stevens adds, "how short a time this estate, got by sacrilege, continued in any family."^q

A few original charters belonging to this priory are preserved among those formerly presented to the British Museum by Lord Frederick Campbell. An enumeration of them will be found in the Note.^r

That there was an appropriate SEAL belonging to the prior and brethren of this cell, is evident from the close of more than one of the instruments relating to its possessions. The Editors of the new Monasticon, however, have not yet been fortunate enough to meet with an impression.

amicis, Francigenis, et Angligenis, tali pacto, ut ecclesia prius dicta ædificetur, et in nullo penitus minuatur. Et abbas P. de sancto Albano, et sui monachi debent eam extruere, et honorare, et exaltare, in quantum melius poterint, secundum illud beneficium, quod ipse Radulfus de Limesey donavit prius nominatæ ecclesiæ: beneficium autem hoc est, quod dedit illi ecclesiæ, scilicet unam bonam hidam terræ apud Hertford, ubi illa ecclesia ædificata est, et ecclesiam de Piriton, cum tota decima sua, et hominum suorum, infra et extra villam manentium. Et duas hidas terræ, et dimidiam ibidem, molendinum etiam unum, et pasturam bobus de carucis monachorum, pariter cum bobus dominicarum carucarum prædicti Radulfi in Piritone; et porcis eorum pastionem pariter cum dominicis porcis prædicti Radulfi in quemcumque boscum suum illos pascendos miserit; et duas partes omnium decimarum de dominico suo in Cavendish, et Hoccetun, et duas partes decimæ suæ de Ychentune, et unam carucatam terræ, cum bobus et servis ibidem; et decimas suas de Hulverleie, in bosco et in plano, et decimas hominum suorum, scilicet de Ichetune, et decimas Ansgoti de Caldecote, et decimas Walteri de Bibbesurd, et de terra sua juxta Piriton, et decimas Hugonis Samson de Aperstone, et de Torp, in perpetuam elemosinam, honorificè, liberè, et quietè in omnibus, et per omnia. Debet etiam prædictus Radulfus de Limesey, et omnes posteri sui, cellam de Hertford, cum omnibus rebus, quas donavit, defendere contra omnes homines, et protegere, et diligere, et promovere, sicut puram et liberam elemosinam, et concessum regis facere habere, qui confirmet suam donationem prænominatæ suæ ecclesiæ de Hertford.

Sciendum est autem quod, pro hoc beneficio, debet abbas sancti Albani, post primum annum providere sex monachos, de sua congregatione, ad serviendum Deo et sanctæ Mariæ in præfata ecclesia de Hertford, pro anima Radulfi de Limesey, et uxoris suæ, et omnium posterorum suorum. Si verò, Deo inspirante, Radulfus ibi plus donaverit, secundum illud et abbas plures inveniet ibi Deo servientes. Pro qua re abbas P. et monachi sancti Albani susceperunt Radulfum in fratrem, et monachum, et uxorem suam, similiter in sororem, filium verò eorum in beneficio ecclesiæ. Sciri etiam debet quod ipse Radulfus debet jacere ad sanctum Albanum, et pariter uxor ejus, nisi præfata eorum ecclesia ad tantum honorem perveniat quod ibi melius velint jacere: ubicunque tamen jacuerint, licentia abbatis jacebunt, et tantum facient monachi pro eis, quantum facere debent pro monacho suo. Hujus donationis testes sunt, Radulfus prior, E. dapifer regis, W. Marmiun, W. camerarius. Testes verò Radulfi de Limesey sunt, Fulco de Mustervell, R. filius Turoldi, Hugo, Sampson, Oilardus, Angotus.

Priory of Tinnmouth,

IN

NORTHUMBERLAND.

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Alban.

tery it will be found that the Editors have been much indebted to the Collections of the late indefatigable Mr. Brand.

A religious House is said to have been erected here in the earliest ages of Christianity, soon after the introduction of the monastic institution into our island. Leland, from one of the Chronicles of St. Albans monastery, states that Edwin, king of the Northumbrians, sometime between 617 and 633, erected here, of wood, a place of residence for nuns; in which his own daughter, Rosella, afterwards took the veil. Brand, however, conjectures that it was a religious house for persons of both sexes. Oswald, a succeeding king of the Northumbrians, who began his reign in the year 634, soon afterwards caused this structure of wood to be taken down, and raised upon the site a new edifice of stone: a circumstance which doubtless gave rise to the opinion of those writers who assert this Oswald to have been the original founder of Tinnmouth monastery.^a

Mention occurs of an Oratory dedicated to St. Mary at this place, soon after it had been rebuilt of stone, where a great number of persons of distinction assembled under a regular rule for the performance of divine service. The monastery had, by this time, acquired such a reputation for local sanctity, that persons dying in the neighbourhood were usually brought to be interred in it:^b and amongst them Oswin king of Deira, one of the provinces of the then divided kingdom of Northumberland, is particularly noticed, who was slain by Oswy king of Bernicia on the 13th of the kalends of September, 651.^c

Egfrid, king of Northumberland from 671 to 685, is another personage to whom the foundation of Tinnmouth has been ascribed.^d The Danes certainly committed great ravages in Northumberland during his reign: and Brand conjectures that, in the confusion, the monastery of Tinnmouth might have been destroyed; the restoration of which by Egfrid's munificence would reconcile the apparent discordancy of the accounts, and leave his claim unimpeachable as a re-founder.^e

Osred, king of the Northumbrians, appears to have been interred in this monastery in 792.^f

The monastery of Tinnmouth now underwent a succession of misfortunes. It was plundered by the Danes in the year 800;^g and entirely destroyed in the irruption under Inguar and Hubba in 866.^h Nothing occurs of the rebuilding at this period; but, in 870, a monastery of nuns is mentioned at this place as having been also plundered.ⁱ Lambarde says that Tinnmouth was again ravaged by Halfden the Danish king in 876.^k The last mischief done to this monastery by the Danes is stated to have been in the reign of Athelstan king of the West Saxons, between 924 and 940.^l

Brand says it is no wonder that, after having been so often plundered and destroyed, this place should have lain so long in ruins, that the remembrance of King Oswin, the sainted patron thereof, was utterly lost.

After some respite from the invasions of the Danish pirates, to whom its exposed situation on the sea coast rendered it an easy and defenceless prey, and who, by their repeated depredations, appear to have left nothing that could induce them to return, the then bishop of the diocese obtained it of the earls of Northumberland; and, after filling it anew with religious, restored therein the celebration of divine service. It was not, however, till the latter end of the reign of Edward the Confessor that the bones of the royal martyr, St. Oswin, were discovered. Leland says they were discovered on the 5th of the ides of March, 1065.^m been ascribed.* The Danes certainly razed great villages in Northumberland during the reign of Eadgar, and it is conjectured that, in the confusion, the monastery of Tynmouth might have been destroyed: the restoration of which by Egfrid's munificence would reconcile the apparent discrepancy of the accounts, and leave no claim unimpeachable as a re-founder.

Matthew of Westminster relates the circumstances of a vision, in which Oswin himself appeared to one Edmund, the sexton of this place, to whom he pointed out the place of his own interment. Judith, wife of Tosti earl of Northumberland, giving credit to the sexton's vision, ceased not to exert her influence with Egelwine, then bishop of Durham, till he had ordered search to be made for the royal bones, which are said to have been discovered in an oratory, according to the saint's directions, on the day above mentioned.

Oswald, king of the Northumbrians, appears to have been interested in this monastery in 792.¹

The monastery of Tynmouth now underwent a series of misfortunes. It was plundered by the Danes in the year 800;² and entirely destroyed in the irruption under Ingwar and Haste in 866.³ Nothing occurs of their landing at this period; but, in 870, a monastery of nuns is mentioned at this place as having been also plundered. Leland says that Tynmouth was again ravaged by Haste, the Danish king, in 876.⁴ The last mischief done to the monastery by the Danes is stated to have been in the reign of Allecton, king of the West Saxons, between 924 and 925.⁵

Leland says it is no wonder that, after having been so often plundered and destroyed, this place should have been long in ruins; and the remembrance of King Oswin, the saintly patron thereof, was utterly lost.

After some respite from the invasions of the Danish pirates, to whom the exposed situation on the sea coast rendered it an easy and defenceless prey, and who, by their repeated depredations, appear to have left nothing that could induce them to return, the then bishop of the diocese repaired it of the earls of Northumberland; and, after filling it anew with religious, restored therein the celebration of divine service. It was not, however, till the latter end of the reign of Edward the Confessor that the bones of the royal martyr, St. Oswin, were discovered. Leland says they were discovered on the 5th of the ides of March, 1065.⁶

Matthew of Westminster relates the circumstances of a vision, in which Oswin himself appeared to one Edmund, the sexton of this place, to whom he pointed out the place of his own interment. Judith, wife of Tosli earl of Northumberland, giving credit to the sexton's vision, caused her to exert her influence with Egilwine, then bishop of Durham, who had ordered a church to be made for the royal bones, which are said to have been discovered in an ecstasy, according to the saint's directions, on the day above mentioned.

Engraved by Byrne.

Dunmow Priory.

From a drawing by Richardson, 1813, communicated by Major George Anderson, F.S.A.

The royal remains, after having been enclosed in a coffin, and honoured with every kind of funeral pomp, were re-committed to the earth.^a

Tosti earl of Northumberland, according to some writers, rebuilt this monastery from the foundation :^b Tanner only says he repaired and endowed it.^c

About the year 1074, Waltheof earl of Northumberland gave the church of Tinmouth, with all its lands and possessions, together with the body of St. Oswin, to the monks of the neighbouring monastery of Jarrow, to which place they removed the sacred remains of the royal saint.

Albrey, appointed earl of Northumberland, on the murder of Walcher bishop of Durham, A. D. 1079, confirmed the above grant of Tinmouth, made by his predecessor, Waltheof, to the monks of Jarrow, who, by this time, had been removed to the church of Durham.

Finally, A. D. 1090, Robert de Mowbray, earl of Northumberland, having re-endowed the monastery of Tinmouth, and filled it with black monks whom he had brought from St. Albans in Hertfordshire, on account of some displeasure which he had conceived against the then bishop of Durham, took it from that Church, and made it a Cell to the said Monastery of St. Alban for ever.^d A minute statement of the particulars attending this last change will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, in the words of Simeon of Durham.^e

In 1093, the body of Malcolm, king of Scotland, and, according to Brand (who dates this occurrence in 1094), the body of his son Prince Edward, both slain on St. Brice's day, were interred in this monastery.^f

In 1095, Robert de Mowbray entering into a conspiracy against King William Rufus, his property became forfeited : notwithstanding which, the king confirmed the grants both of him and his homagers, north and south of Tyne, to the church of St. Oswin. The royal charter on this occasion is dated at Newcastle.^g

On the 13th of the kalends of September, 1110, the body of St. Oswin was removed from Jarrow to the monastery of Tinmouth ; the latter being called the new monastery of Tinmouth.^h

Matthew Paris, in his account of the life of Richard de Albini, abbat of St. Albans from 1097 to 1119, states that that abbat decreed, with the unanimous consent of his convent, that the church of Tinmouth should pay annually to the church of St. Alban (on the feast of that saint) the sum of thirty shillings : the subordinate convent to be free from any other demand. The abbat of St. Albans was to keep in his own hands Anebell and Coket-island, with the churches of Bywell and Woodhorne : and when he chose to come down to Tinmouth, with twenty attendants, they were to be supported by that house for fifteen days ; but, if the abbat's journey was on business particularly concerning Tinmouth, then he and his retinue were to be supported solely at the expence of that monastery.ⁱ

King Henry the First, by a charter dated at Brantone, addressed to the bishop of Durham and to all his other barons in Northumberland, confirmed to God, the Virgin Mary, and St. Oswin, to the abbat of St. Albans and the monks of Tinmouth, all the tithes in Northumberland which Earl Robert and his homagers had given them : these were the tithes of Corbridge, Ovington, Wylam, Newburn, Dissington, Callerton, Elswick, Bothall, Warkworth, Anebell, Rothbury and Wooler.^k

By another charter, dated at Westminster, he granted to the monks of Tinmouth the court and customs which Robert de Mowbray had held in the time of William Rufus, previous to his forfeiture.^l

Simeon of Durham, under the year 1121, gives an account of an attempt made that year by the monks of Durham to recover possession of the monastery of Tinmouth from the church of St. Alban ; on which occasion they urged the repentance of Earl Mowbray for having taken it out of their hands, as an argument to prove the injustice of not restoring it. It need hardly be added that the attempt was ineffectual.^m

Richard of Hexham informs us, that on the 4th of the ides of January, 1138, William son of Duncan, nephew of David king of Scotland, invaded England : and, after him, that King David himself, with his son Henry, ravaged Northumberland, and committed the most horrid barbarities. Tinmouth bought off its destruction on this occasion with the sum of twenty-seven marks of silver, which the prior and convent paid to the king of Scotland.ⁿ King David's charter of protection to the monastery, dated on the day of St. Barnabas in that year, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^o

Robert de Gorham, who was elected abbat of St. Albans in 1151, visiting his Cell of Tinmouth, is said to have presented it with a cloak or pall of the value of ten marks.^p

King Henry the Second, by a charter granted (according to Brand) after the year 1175, restored and confirmed to the monastery the lands which he had seized on account of the flight of one Adgar into Scotland, and the war of the Scottish king : these were Eglingham, Bewicke, and Lilburne, which the said Adgar had held of the monks of Tinmouth, and which, by an inquisition taken by the king's order, were found to be their escheat and demesne. The king also confirmed at the same time what the abbat and monks of St. Albans had provided and appointed concerning their churches of Eglingham and Apelton, appropriated to hospitable purposes for ever, as appeared by their charter in that behalf.^q

In 1189, King Richard the First, by a charter dated at Canterbury Nov. 4th, confirmed to the monks of Tinmouth all their lands and privileges.^r

Brand says, by a grant remaining in the Augmentation Office, about the date of 1190, it appears that Henry de Bulemer gave, in frank-almoigne, and confirmed to St. Os-win of Tinnmouth, and the monks serving God in that place, for the health of his soul and the souls of his ancestors, twenty-eight acres and a half of land in his demesne in the fields called Jesemuth, near Newcastle-upon-Tyne.^a The same Henry de Bulemer gave also in frank-almoigne to the prior and convent of Tinnmouth the moiety of a fishery called Accusyare in the water of the Tyne.^b

In 1196, Hugh Pudsey, bishop of Durham, confirmed to the monks of Tinnmouth all their tithes in Northumberland and the bishoprick of Durham.^c

Madox, in his History of the Exchequer, p. 275, informs us, that many towns and persons, at various times, in the reigns of King Richard the First and King John, were fined in various sums, for grants and confirmations of divers sorts of liberties, franchises, and exemptions, according to the tenor of the respective records; and instances the abbat and monks of St. Albans, who, in the year 1204, were fined twenty-five marks and a palfrey, for the monks of Tinnmouth, for the confirmation of a charter granted to the latter by King John; and that the monks of Tinnmouth paid fifty marks on the same account.^d The Charter of King John, here alluded to, confirmed to the monks of Tinnmouth all their lands and possessions: these were Tinnmouth, with its appurtenances, Seaton, Preston, both the Chirtons, Millington, Whitley, Erdesdon, the two Backworths, Seghill, Morton, Bebside, both the Dissingtons, Ulsington, Bewick, Eglingham, Lillburne, Anibell, Hawkeslaw, Elswick, Wylam, Welton, half the vill of Copun, Carleberry, and Morton in bishoprick, Helleshaw, and the land of Royley and Denum; with the churches of Tinnmouth, Woodhorn, Whalton, Bolum, Bewick, Eglingham, Hertburne, and Connyscliff; Hereford on Blyth, the tithes of Hertnes, with those of Middleton on Tees, of Corbridge, Rothbury, Warkworth, Wooler, and Newburn; together with the liberties granted them by a former charter of King Richard his uncle.^e

In 1205, King John granted to the monks of Tinnmouth an exemption from the payment of cornage.^f Mr. Brand says, it appears from the records of this house, that several villages in Northumberland paid cornage both to the abbat of St. Albans and to the prior of this house.^g

Somewhere about, or soon after this time, two thirds of the tithes of Bothal were given by Richard Bertram to Tinnmouth monastery.^h

Brand says, in the time of John abbat of St. Albans, who was elected in 1235, and died during the reign of Edward the First, the church of Norton appears to have been given to the monastery of Tinnmouth, for the purpose of mending their ale, and for extraordinary acts of hospitality. The church of Eglingham, which had been given to this house by R. de Marisco, bishop of Durham, to mend their ale, was at the same time made their private property. At this time, also, Walter bishop of Durham gave them two thirds of the church of Hertburne, worth a hundred and fifty-three marks, to enable them to increase their hospitality. The abbat of St. Albans kept the church of Norton in his own hands, and the prior of Tinnmouth paid him yearly two hundred and forty marks for the churches of Eglingham and Hartburn.ⁱ

In 1243, the prior of Tinnmouth contributed five marks to the aid which was levied by King Henry the Third to marry his eldest daughter.^k

The substance of a compromise which took place respecting the cell of Tinnmouth in 1247, between the abbat and convent of St. Albans, in conjunction with the prior and convent of Tinnmouth, on one part, and the bishop and chapter of Durham on the other, has been already stated in the Account of St. Albans monastery. The bishop had demanded obedience from the Prior. It was finally determined, upon an appeal to the Pope, that the Priors, though appointed by the abbey and removeable by its authority, should be presented to the bishop for institution, and swear canonical obedience.^l In 1248, however, the bishop of Durham, in violation of this compromise, appears to have renewed his vexatious claims: but the king being appealed to, he commanded the bishop to desist, upon pain of his displeasure.^m The bishop's attempt on this occasion was to extort money from the church of Tinnmouth, either to repair or raise some new fabric in the church of Durham.ⁿ

In 1255, an agreement was made, the tenor of which is not exactly explained, between the prior of Tinnmouth and Sir John de Baliol, knight: the latter is stated to have exercised great rapacity and injustice towards the monastery.^o

In 1269, King Henry the Third granted a charter to the monastery of Tinnmouth for a market to be held at Bewick: and another of general liberties in 1271.^p

In 1279, judgment was given in the King's Bench against the prior of this house, who claimed a market at Tinnmouth.^q

In 1292, there appear to have been great disputes between the burgesses of Newcastle upon Tyne and the prior of Tinnmouth, concerning which judgment was given in Parliament in 1306: when the prior of Tinnmouth, having built a shore at North Shields within the flood-mark of the Tyne, was ordered to remove it at his own cost.^r

King Edward the First's claim to the advowson of this monastery in 1293, directed to the sheriff of Northumberland, has been already noticed in the Account of St. Albans.^s The king, however, not only dropped his suit, but granted the abbat a charter of confirmation for it in the same year.^a

By a grant from John Lord Greystock and Sir Robert Somervill, made in the year 1296, the monks of Tinmouth monastery had carriage roads for themselves and their tenants through Benton moors, with liberty of pasture for twenty-four beasts of any kind. This grant was confirmed by Ralph Lord Greystock in 1391, 14 Rich. II.^b

King Edward the First, after his victory over the Scots in 1298, visited and remained for some time in Tinmouth monastery.^c

In the next year, by a charter dated at Westminster February 20th, King Edward the First confirmed to the prior of Tinmouth all pleas within his liberty of Tinmouth, as well those of the crown as others, concerning his men, lands, and tenements, to be pleaded and determined by his own justices, the king's justices not being permitted to enter the said liberty; restoring, at the same time, other liberties and free customs which had been seized into the king's hands. In this Charter the body of St. Oswin is mentioned as resting in a certain shrine within the church of Tinmouth.^d

A. D. 1303, the queen of Edward the First resided at Tinmouth monastery while the king was on his last march to Scotland.^e

In 1303, also, a charter was granted to this monastery for an annual fair at Tinmouth; but, the year following, on a petition from the town of Newcastle, it was revoked.^f About this time, likewise, a Quo Waranto occurs to the abbat of St. Albans and the prior of this house, to show on what authority they claimed the reception of all felons coming within the grith of Tinmouth.^g

March 15th, 1307, King Edward the First, for a certain fine, pardoned the prior of Tinmouth for acquiring possessions in Herford, Bebbeset on Blythe, Coppon, East Backworth, West Backworth, Tynemuth, and Preston, without a licence of mortmain.^h

This year, also, on the morrow of the feast of the apostles Peter and Paul, Simon, the prior of this monastery, caused a pillory to be erected in the village of Tinmouth.ⁱ

In 1315, a chantry was founded at Tinmouth for the soul of John Lord Greystock, who died in the year 1306. The founder was Ralph, son of William Fitzralph, lord of Grimethorp, in the county of York, a kinsman of the deceased.^k

In 1317 the priory of Tinmouth appears to have suffered much from the depredation of persons of the neighbouring country, who originally took up arms in retaliation for the incursions of the Scots; and who, in the absence of an English force to defend the border, made their warfare the pretext for general plunder. One of their captains, Gilbert de Middleton, did much mischief to the priory and its possessions. Such is Walsingham's account.^l Brand, from the Tinmouth Chartulary and the Annals of John de

Trokelow, calls these persons Shalvadores, or Savaldores; at the head of whom he says occur Sir William de Middleton Knt. and Walder de Seleby, who committed great depredations on the priory of Tinmouth; but having been taken prisoners and sent up to London, they were there tried and condemned, and suffered death upon the gallows.^m

From a wardrobe account of King Edward II. it appears that in 1322 the queen of that monarch resided for some time at Tinmouth monastery:ⁿ it appears also, on the same authority, that upon the last day of September, 1323, the body of Ada, a bastard son of King Edward the Second, was buried in the conventual church.^o

A. D. 1326, King Edward the Second granted licences of mortmain to the church of Tinmouth, for mesuages and lands in Backworth, Moreton, Whitley, and Milnton:^p as also in Newcastle upon Tyne, the last of which are said to be situated "super les stathes" in that town.^q

From a charter of Edward the Third, granted in 1328, it should seem that some of the reputed liberties of this house had been adjudged in the beginning of his reign to the king; but which he then regranted to the abbat of St. Alban and the prior and monks of Tinmouth in as ample a manner as ever, from the especial devotion which he bore to the two martyrs St. Alban and St. Oswin.^r

In 1336, mention occurs in the Tinmouth Chartulary of the new chapel of St. Mary at Tinmouth.^s

In 1347 the prior of Tinmouth lent the king twenty marks toward defraying the expences of the siege of Calais.^t

June 26th, 1349, the king granted a licence of mortmain to Henry de Burnetoft, chaplain, &c. to assign to the prior and convent of Tinmouth lands and tenements in East Moreton, Milnton, and Backworth, Tinmouth, Preston, and East Chirton: as also to Richard Scot, of Newcastle upon Tyne, to assign to them sixty-six acres of land and pasture for twelve oxen in Elstewyk, worth 26s. 8d. per annum.^u

May 24th, 1355, the king granted a licence of mortmain to this convent for tenements in West Morton, East Backworth, West Backworth, Preston, &c.^x

In the year 1357 an inquest was taken at the suit of the prior of Tinmouth, who claimed Fenham as part of his manor of Elswick. By this inquest, which is of record in Chancery by return of the justices of record, and was taken before the chief people of Northumberland, it was found that that village had been all along parcel of the town of Newcastle upon Tyne, and was held by farm of the crown.^y

May 6th, 1361, the king granted a licence of mortmain for tenements in Wolsington, Morton, and Middle Chirton to the prior and convent of this house.^z

Feb. 20th, 1379, King Richard the Second granted a licence of mortmain to the prior and monks of Tinmouth, to hold possessions, to the value of twenty pounds per annum, to enable them to repair the walls of their fortifications, which had been damaged by encroachments of the sea. The Priory is described in this curious grant as having been, and being to the then king and his progenitors, "a

May 4th, 1380, the king granted a licence of mortmain to Ada de Fenrother, clerk, William de Meryngton, chaplain, Hugh de Brandon, William de Chevyngton, and William de Seton, to assign to the prior and convent of Tinnmouth the manor of Denton and Redewode near Mewburn, excepting out of the said manor an annual rent of ten marks, and another of one mark. As also to Alan Whitehed, vicar of Tinnmouth, and Robert Fenrother, to assign to the said prior and convent eight mesuages, eight tofts, and three hundred and sixty-two acres and a half of land in Tynemouth, Monkseaton, Est Chirton, Middle Chirton, Preston, East Mureton, Backworth, Coupon, Wylom, and Eglyngham, worth 4*l.* 16*s.* 0½*d.* per annum.^b

In 1381, some of the monks of St. Albans, who had been concerned in the insurrection of Wat Tyler, are said to have made their escape from thence, and to have fled to Tinnmouth priory.^c

In 1385, King Richard the Second granted to the prior and convent a charter for the appropriation of the church of Haltwhistle in Tyndale.^d

On Nov. 13th, 1392, the same king, for a fine of twenty marks, granted a licence of mortmain to Alan Whitehed vicar of Tinnmouth, John de Dalton chaplain, Robert de Anebell chaplain, &c. to assign to the prior and convent of Tinnmouth eight mesuages, &c. in the town of Newcastle upon Tyne.^e

A similar license was granted, in the year following, to the prior and convent for tenements in Elswick, Newbigging, Widdrington, Cuppon, &c.^f

Roger Thornton, by his will, dated the Thursday before Christmas, A.D. 1429, bequeathed a noble to every monk of Tinnmouth.^g

Brand says, in 1523, Robert Lambert and others having murdered Christopher Radcliff at Shereston, in the diocese of Durham, and the former having taken sanctuary in the priory of Tinnmouth, Cardinal Wolsey, then archbishop of York, being struck with the heinousness of the crime, and offended at so shameful an evasion of justice, wrote to Lord Dacre, warden of the marches, to use every exertion to get him out from thence, in order to his suffering condign punishment. Hearne, in his edition of Otterbourne and Whethamstede, vol. ii. p. 579, has given the letter as follows: "My lord, I commaunde me hertelay unto you: and wher of late an heynous murdre was committed at Shereston within my bishopricke of Duresme by one Robert Lambert, Richard Littlefare, William Turnour, Robert Johnson, and other, which (as I am informed) murdred one Cristofer Radcliff, and after the same murdre committed the said R. Thus I committ you to God. From my place at Westminstre the 12th daye of June. Your lovyng frende T. Car^{lis}. Ebor."^h

By an inquisition taken at Whalton, Nov. 20th, 1535, it appears that the church there paid yearly to the monastery of Tinnmouth 8*s.* 4*d.* that the prior and convent of Tinnmouth had presented last to it, but that William Blythman was patron for that turn (it being then vacant) by right of advowson granted to him by the prior and convent of Tinnmouth, under the common seal of their house.ⁱ

PRIORS OF TINMOUTH.

ST. HEREBALD, the companion of St. John of Beverley archbishop of York, who died in 721, appears to have been a monk, and afterwards prior of Tinnmouth.^k

RUELENDUS prior of Tinnmouth, without any date, occurs in the extracts which will presently be given from Leland's Collectanea.^l

REMIGIUS was prior in 1092.^m

GILBERT is named as prior of Tinnmouth in the time of Henry the Second in the Placita de Quo Waranto. He was succeeded by WILLIAM DE BEDFORD occurs, according to Willis, in 1124:° but this is probably a mistake for 1224, as in the latter year (as will presently be shown) a prior of this name was certainly existing.

RALPH GUBIUN resigned the priorate in 1216. The circumstances attending his resignation are curious, as they afford a remarkable instance of the ancient use of trial by duel in cases of decision of right. The prior having failed in his cause, determined upon relinquishing his office. Abbat William de Trumpington, however, entertained him thenceforward at St. Albans, as his chief counsellor and companion.^p He was succeeded at Tinnmouth by

It was in the time of Ralph Gubiun that abbat William de Trumpington settled the ceremonial for the abbats of St. Albans in their visits to Tinnmouth. Matthew Paris says,

"Et incidenter nostræ occurrit memoriæ dicendum arbitror quid agendum cum venerit abbas de Thinemua. Quando abbas Thynemum adierit, habebit sex de terra sancti Albani armigeros, qui, propter hoc, optime et honorifice de substantia ecclesiæ infeodantur. GERMANUS:^a who afterwards became abbat of Selby in Yorkshire.^b

WILLIAM DE BARTON occurs prior in 1223.^c There seems some ground for suspecting that he may be the same with William de Horton, mentioned by Mr. Brand as having been prior of this House some time in the reign of King Henry the Third.^d

WILLIAM DE BEDEFORD occurs Oct. 4th, 1224. Brand says he died Oct. 29th, 1242.^e

RALPH DE DUNHAM is conjectured by Mr. Brand to have been the next prior. He mediated a peace between the king of England and the king of Scots in 1244.^f "Radulphus," probably this prior, occurs in the Belvoir obituary. His death is noticed on August 13th, but without the addition of any year.^g

ADA DE MEPPERDESHALE was probably the next prior.^h His successor in the office was

WILLIAM BERNARD.ⁱ Mr. Brand says, that in the Tinmouth Chartulary, fol. 203 b,

SIMON occurs as prior of Tinmouth in 1293.^k In 1295, however,

ADA DE TEWYNG occurs prior.^l He appears to have aided King Edward the First in the claim set up by that monarch to the advowson of this monastery. Newcome, who relates the seizure and banishment of this prior by John de Berkhamsted abbat of St. Albans, calls him Adam de Telbing.^m

SIMON was, in all probability, restored to the priorate upon Tewyng's removal, as he again occurs in that office in 1301. Brand supposes him to have been the same with SIMON DE WALDEN, whose death on April 17th, without the year, is mentioned by Peck from the Belvoir Obituary.ⁿ

RICHARD DE TEWYNG occurs prior in 1320, 14th Edw. II.^o and again in 1339.^p He has been already mentioned in the Account of St. Albans: see vol. ii. p. 197. The Cottonian manuscript Nero D. vii. gives him a great character for his prudent administration of Tinmouth.^q He died, according to the Belvoir Obituary, on September 29th.

THOMAS DE LA MARE, or MORE, occurs prior in 1340.^r He was chosen abbat of St. Albans in 1350.^s In 1347, as prior of Tinmouth, he lent the king twenty marks towards defraying the expences of the siege of Calais.^t

CLEMENT OF WHETHAMSTEDE is stated by Newcome, in his history of St. Albans, to have been the immediate successor of DE LA MERE in this priory.^u

JOHN WHETHAMSTEDE occurs prior in 1396, among the persons who attended the election of John Moote abbat of St. Albans.^x Upon Whethamstede's own election to the abbacy in 1420, he presented the priory of Tinmouth with a massive chalice of pure gold.^y

ROBERT DE RHODES is said to have been prior of Tinmouth in the time of Henry VI.^z His death is placed on the 25th of July.^a

JOHN LANGTON occurs prior in 1451, among the persons who voted at the re-election of Whethamstede as abbat of St. Albans.^b He was afterwards suspended for contumacy and disobedience.^c He died Aug. 21, the year unknown.^d

NICHOLAS BOSTON was made prior, according to Newcome, in 1478.^e Brand says he occurs in 1483.^f Newcome names

WILLIAM DURWELL as succeeding him about 1481.^g An entry, however, in a Chartulary of St. Albans among Dr. Rawlinson's manuscripts at Oxford, quoted by Brand, makes it probable that BOSTON was restored.^h

JOHN occurs prior of Tinmouth in 1504.ⁱ This was JOHN BENESTEDE, who, in August, 1505, succeeded to the abbacy of Whitby in Yorkshire, on the death of William Evesham.^k

THOMAS GARDINER occurs abbat in 1528.^l Cole, in one of his manuscripts now in the British Museum, vol. xxvi. fol. 227 b, says, "In an old MS. Visitation of the North by Thomas Tong, Norroy king at arms, in the year 1530, lent to me by the late worthy Dr. Zachary Grey, p. 8, is the following entry relating to this prior. 'These be the armes of My Lorde the Prioure of Tynmouthe, whose name ys Gardener; and the seide prioure is descended of the noble Queene Katheryne wyff to King Henry V. and daughter to Charles king of Fraunce: for the said Queene Katheryne was after maryed to Owen Tudor, by whome he hadde yssue Edmonde erle of Riche-monde and Jasper duke of Bedforde; which Jaspas begott a bastarde daughter called Ellyn marryed to William Gardener, who was father to my lorde the priour. ^b The circumstances attending Germanus's election to the abbacy of Selby are thus related in another part of Matthew Paris's History:

"Dum autem talia feliciter consummarentur, et apud Deum et homines ecclesia hæc [sc. S. Albani] gratiose prosperaretur, bonæ recordationis dominus Germanus monachus hujus ecclesiæ, et Prior de Thinemue, electus et creatus est in abbatem de Seleby, ad reformationem ordinis qui ibidem deperierat (Elya abbate cedente) per archiepiscopum Eboracensem Henricum Mordac, in cujus diocesi dicta ecclesia de Seleby esse dignoscitur. Præfuerat enim idem Elya abbas dictæ ecclesiæ suæ, pastor nescius et remissus, sed archiepiscopo defuncto Henrico, memoratus Elya, expulso Germano irreverenter se intrusit in abbatiam de Seleby; se faciens abbatem exclamari. Germanus vero ad domum suam, scilicet sancti Albani rediens, honorifice ab abbate Roberto et toto conventu (ut decuit) susceptus est. Misit igitur abbas Robertus, unum monachum de nostris, Romam festinanter, super tali injuria querimoniam domino papæ repositurum. Qui audita tali presumptione, commotus est valde; talem tantamque abusionem terribiliter compescuit et punivit: similiter et Osbertum, archidiaconum, hujus rei incentorem: et sic honorifice restitutus est Germanus in domum suam de Seleby, Elya cum confusione repulso." ^e Ibid. p. 83. Whether William de Bedeford retained his priorate at Tinmouth after 1224 seems problematical, as, according to the Annales Ecclesiæ Wigorn. Angl. Sacra, tom. i. p. 486, he was preferred in that year to the Priorate of Worcester. "In crastino S. Edmundi præ-

Gardiner continued prior of Tinnmouth till very near the time of the dissolution of the house. His name occurs among the "Comperta" communicated by certain of the visitors to Lord Cromwell previous to the Suppression.^b

ROBERT BLAKENEY was the last Prior. He occurs in 1539, in an Instrument in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum, p. 367, by which the house, in distress for want of money, borrowed a hundred marks of Sir Thomas Clifford, Knight:^c in which year, also, on January 12th, with fifteen monks and three novices, he surrendered his priory to the king.^d In the List of Pensions remaining in the Augmentation Office the pension which was allowed to the abbat on this occasion is first put down at 86*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and afterwards apparently corrected to 80*l.* The novices had forty shillings a year each.^e

HENRY occurs among the names of the priors of Tinnmouth in the Belvoir Obituary, but without any date of year.^f

According to Dugdale, the separate yearly revenue of this priory, subordinate to St. Albans, in the 26th of Hen. VIII. amounted to 397*l.* 10*s.* 5½*d.* Speed says, to 511*l.* 4*s.* 1½*d.* The former appears to have been the clear value.

^a See also MS. Harl. Brit. Mus. num. 1499, fol. 49. Sandford, in his Genealogical History, edit. 1707, calls Stephen Gardiner bishop of Winchester, by mistake, lord prior of Tinnmouth: confusing him with this Thomas Gardiner.

The possessions of the monks of Tinnmouth are thus enumerated by Mr. Brand. They had twenty-seven villis, or manors, in the county of Northumberland, with their royalties; viz. They had a manor-house in the village of Benwell.^m They returned the king's writsⁿ within these respective lordships, and were exempt from cornage. They had the lands of Royeley and Denum. They had the tithes of Corbridge, Ovington, Wylam, Newburn Dissington, Callerton, Elswick, Bothall, Warkworth, Ambell, Rothbury, and Wooler, in Northumberland; with those of Hertnes and Middleton upon Tees, in the bishoprick of Durham. ⁿ In Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, p. 514, is preserved a copy of an ancient Roll in the Exchequer, of what abbeyes or priories the king ought to have a corrody and pension, either or both; by which it appears that in the abbey of Tinnmouth was one pension.

suages in Newcastle upon Tyne^a were also their property.^b They had a weekly market at their town of Bewick, and an annual fair at Tinmouth; also a harbour called the Prior's harbour.^c

In an ancient manuscript account of Castles and Towers in Northumberland, preserved in the Cotton library, MS. Julius F. x. fol. 155, Tinmouth castle, the tower of Whitley near it, and that of Coquet-island, are said to belong to the prior of this House. "Castrum de Tynmouth, Prioris de Tynmouth; turre de Whitle juxta Tinmouth, Prioris de Tinmouth; Coketelande, Prioris de Tynemouthe." Newcome, in his Hist. St. Albans, p. 244, speaking of the invasion of England by the Scots in 1346, while the English were fighting at Cressy, says, from another MS. in the Cotton library, that Ralph Neville, then keeper of the Marches, intended to send all the Scots prisoners to Tinmouth, under pretence of confining them there in the Castle, but in reality to eat up the prior and live upon the church; but Thomas de la Mare, then abbat of St. Albans, hastened away to the king, who had just arrived at Langley, and petitioned him that he would protect the cell and church of Tinmouth, and suffer no one, not even the Prior, to lodge prisoners in the castle.

It was, in all probability, partly owing to the security afforded by this Castle, and partly to the general remoteness of the situation, that Tinmouth Priory was frequently used as a prison-cell, to which the abbats of St. Albans were accustomed to send their refractory monks. William Pignon was confined here for clandestinely affixing the abbey seal to a forged grant in the time of abbat John de Cella;^d and Reimond, the prior of St. Albans, was banished here, after having been spoiled of his books, and stripped of every thing, in the time of abbat William de Trumpington, A.D. 1214.^e

Of the muniments formerly belonging to the priory of Tinmouth, the CHARTULARY in the possession of the Duke of Northumberland has been frequently quoted in the preceding account.^f No other Register of this monastery is at present known.

Bishop Tanner has the following references to public records, chiefly in addition to those which have been already quoted.

The ARMS of this priory, given in the initial Letter of the present Account of Tinmouth, were Gu. three crowns, or coronets, Or. This coat is still remaining, in stained glass, in a window of St. Nicholas's church at Newcastle.^g

Of the COMMOM SEAL of this priory an oval impression in green wax, nearly perfect, is still appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office; the deficiencies of which may be in some degree supplied by a fragment of the same seal appendant to another instrument. The area represents the Virgin Mary and child and St. Oswin, within two pointed niches of Gothic workmanship. In the upper part, between the canopies of the niches, is a head of a larger size, unknown. The inscription, SIGILL NE . PRIORATVS . SCE E . ET . BĪ . OSWINI . D HA .

The deficiency in the legend, which may be thus supplied by the fragment above mentioned, is in the latter part of the inscription, which runs thus, . . . EMVTHA. The instrument to which this fragment is appended is a conventual lease, dated 27 Hen. VIII.

Brand says, in a deed in the same repository, dated January 28th, 1490, a writing of a still older date is described as having been sealed with a double Seal: "unum scriptum sigillatum per Priorem et Conventum de Tyne-mouth sigillo Capituli sui, videlicet, in cera viridi cum ymagine SANCTI OSWYN et in dorso ejusdem cum ymagine SANCTÆ MARIE VIRGINIS."^h

By the attainder of the Duke of Northumberland in the reign of Queen Mary, Tinmouth, with its adjacent possessions, reverted to the crown, in which it remained ungranted till the 10th of Queen Elizabeth.ⁱ The manor of Tinmouth, at this time, belongs to the Duke of Northumberland: but the site of the monastery is said to belong to the crown. Colonel Henry Villars, who was governor of Tinmouth castle during the whole of King William's and a part of Queen Anne's reign, had a lease of the site, upon a part of which he obtained permission to erect a light-house, barracks, a residence for himself, and other edifices; receiving, as a remuneration for the expense of supporting the light-house, one shilling for every English and sixpence for every foreign vessel anchoring in the harbour of Shields. These several buildings were constructed much to the injury of the priory remains. Colonel Villars also stripped the church of the lead with which, till then, it had been covered.

Escaet. de anno 10 Eliz.

Wallis's Hist. of Northumb. vol. ii. p. 263.

The situation of this priory must have rendered it, when in a perfect state, extremely conspicuous at sea. Its remains stand upon a high rocky point, on the north side of the entrance into the river Tyne, about a mile and a half below North Shields. The buildings are of a reddish stone, the work of different periods; many of the arches being circular, and some pointed. Grose describes an oratory or chapel, which, in his time, remained remarkably perfect, at the east end of the ruins of the church. This has been since converted into a magazine for military stores; the windows walled up; and the ornamental parts considerably mutilated. The military arrangements here at the time of the threatened invasion from France, during the last war, contributed greatly to the downfall of what, at that time, remained.^a

What this priory must have been in its best days may be in some degree gathered from a "Platte" or Plan of the peninsula on which it stands, made in the time of Queen Elizabeth, "after 160 fote to one inche," still preserved in the Cottonian manuscript Augustus I. vol. ii. art. 6. From this we learn, that, entering from Tinnmouth town, over a wide moat and "draw-brydge," stood "the Ward House;" with what was called "the Vtter Forte" to the right; a neck of land projecting from which, and rounding off parallel with that part of the peninsula on which the abbey itself stood, formed "the Priour's Haven." A little to the left of the draw-bridge already mentioned was "the Gate House," in the way from which to "the Great Court," right and left, were the "Kylne" and "Constable Lodgyng," the "Backhouse," and "Mylne." To the left, near the brink of the cliff, was the "Gonners Lodge" and "the Pultre Yard:" then "the North Walk," with two barns, a barnyard, a "garner," three sets of stables, and a cow-house. In the centre of the area which formed the complete site was the "Abbey kyrke," to the east of which was "the Gardyn place." The west end of the abbey church, somewhat narrower than the main building, as being apparently without ailes, is marked as the "parysh kirk." North of this, apparently fronting to the Great Court already named, was the "Priors Lodgyng." The "Chapter House" and "Dortor," or dormitory, (continuing from which was the edifice named "Lords Lodgyng") adjoining the south side of the choir of the abbey church, forming the east side of the cloister; part of the parish church formed the north, the "Common Aule" the west, and the "Newe Aule" the south sides. South of the common hall were the "Boterye Aule and Ketchyn:" and then "the South Courte," occupying the remaining space to the cliffs which overlooked the Prior's haven. North of the buttery hall and kitchen was "the Ender Cowrt," with the "New Lodgyng" and "Bru house." The whole precinct of the abbey was surrounded by a strong wall: that part of the site toward Tinnmouth, being unprotected by the sea, appears to have been rendered doubly strong by a wall and ditch. Adjoining the ditch to the south-west of the town of Tinnmouth were the "olde Fish Pownds, now an olde dyke."

Another "Platte" or Plan of Tinnmouth, a kind of bird's-eye view including the Castle, occurs in the same volume of the Cottonian manuscripts, art. 7, but without any explanation of the different parts of the building.

COQUET, or COQUEDA, in Coquet island, was a CELL to Tinnmouth monastery. At what time it was made so does not appear. The island itself was famous for monks even in St. Cuthbert's time, as early as the year 684.^b The Cell to Tinnmouth, of which some small ruins still remain, was granted as parcel of that priory, in the 5th of Edward the Sixth, to John earl of Warwick.^c

Oswaldus Enfridi frater, ex Accha sorore regis jam dicti Edwini progenitus, devicto Ceadwallæ exercitu apud Denishburnam non solum fratris Enfridi successor fuit in regno Berniciorum, sed, quasi Edwino avunculo suo ab intestato succedens, per ix. annos, utramque in unam Northanhumb. redigens, summa cum æquitate rexit.

Interfecto Oswaldo à Penda rege apud Maserfelde, successit ei frater ejus nothus Oswi juvenis, xxx. agens annum, regnumque per annos xxvij. laboriosissimè rexit.

Oswinus, teste Beda, aspectu venustus, statura sublimis, affatu jucundus, moribus civilis, et manu largus.

Oswinus regno Deirorum vij. annis max. rerum omnium affluentia præfuit. Aidanus pont. Lindisfarn. familiarissimus Oswino. Divisio reg. Northumbr. causa odii inter Oswi et Oswinum.

Exactis in regno vij. annis quietis, duos postremos inquietos habuit. Nam Oswi omnibus modis agebat, ut, extincto Oswino, solus in Northanhumb. regnaret.

Oswinus cum exercitu occurrit Oswio in Wilfaresdune: sed postea volens declinare effusionem sanguinis, noctu solo comitatus Tondhere Tilsii filio in Gethlingum secessit ad domum Stuwaldi ducis, cui prædictum vicum et multa alia prædia donaverat, atque ob hoc fidum sibi autumaverat.

Hunwaldus Oswinum prodidit Oswio.

Oswius clam noctu Ethelwinum, domus suæ procuratorem, ad Hunwaldi domum cum armata manu misit: qui eo veniens Oswinum interfecit.

Tilsius, Tondheri pater, Oswinum impotem juvenem in domo sua nutrit et docuit.

Oswinus, à latere perfossus lancea, obiit anno regni ejus nono, xij. kal. Septemb. in loco qui dicitur Gethlingum, anno Domini DCLII.

Tondhere Tilsii filius, obtulit se pro Oswino percutiendum, et postea cum rege suo occisus est.

Sic Lilla, regis Edwini miles, sicarii dolum prævidens, sese mucroni fideliter opposuit, dominum suum liberans viriliter occubuit.

Regina Eanfleda, propinqua Oswini, postulavit à rege Oswi ut donaret ibi locum monaster. construendo.

Quo concesso, constructum est in Gethlingo monasterium cui præfuit Trumhere jure abbatis, vir natione Anglus, sed ordinatus et edoctus à Scottis, qui et propinquus erat regis occisi. Qui vero postea sub rege Wulphero rege in provinciis Merc. Lindisfarnorum, et Mediterraneorum Anglorum episcopus effectus est.

Corpus Oswini ab eis qui truncaverant delatum est ad ostium Tinæ fluvii, ibique in oratorio sanctæ Mariæ sepultura traditum.

In quo loco virorum illustrium magna multitudo congregata erat, qui, sub ordine regulari, divino cultui serviebant: qui quidem in tantam excreverat honoris eminentiam, ut si quis per infra-jacentem provinciam in fata concessisset, ad eundem locum, pro reverentia et honore religiosæ gentis tumulandus deferetur.

Hinguar et Hubba hoc monasterium destruxerunt. Monachi metu persecutionis fugerunt ad quandam ecclesiam in fundo suo quam sanctus Cuthebertus dedicaverat. Quo comperto, Dani ipsam ecclesiam et omnes qui in ea erant igni succederunt, et omne loci nobilis ædificium in campi planitiem redegerunt.

Sanctus Aidanus episcopus non plusquam duodecim dies post occisionem regis Oswini, quem amabat, superfuit, id est prid. cal. Septemb. de seculo sublatus.

[Mat. Par. Hist. Major, edit. 1684, p. 13.]

A. D. 1090. CIRCA hos denique dies Robertus de Molbraio Northambrensis comes, divina inspiratione tactus, volens ecclesiam beati Oswini de Tenemutha jamdudum desolatam restaurare, atque ibi Deo et sancto martyri Oswino monachos servituros constituere, consilio amicorum suorum, Paulum ecclesiæ sancti Albani abbatem convenit, petens obnixius et devote ut ex monachis suis aliquos illuc transmittere dignaretur: promittens omnia quæ ad victum et vestitum necessaria sunt se eis affatim suppeditaturum. Petitioni quidem abbas prædictus non defuit: nam quosdam illuc ex sancti Albani monachis mitti procuravit: quos cum Comes præfatus maneriis, ecclesiis, redditibus, piscariis, molendinis, et rebus omnibus locupletasset, et literis suis prædicta omnia ab omni sæculari servitio exempta et penitus libera confirmasset, dedit prædicto abbati Paulo ejusque successoribus, et ecclesiæ beati Albani Anglorum prothomartyris, ecclesiam Tinemuthanam cum omnibus appendicibus suis, pro salute propria et omnium antecessorum suorum, sive successorum, in perpetuum possidendam: ita quidem ut abbates sancti Albani qui pro tempore fuerint cum consilio ejusdem loci conventus liberam habeant dispositionem Priorum et Monachorum, tam in illis constituendis quam removendis, prout viderint expedire.

[Ibid. in Vit. Abbat. scilicet PAULI xiiij. abbatis.]

—EJUSDEM quoque tempore; Robertus de Mumbray, vir illustris, comes scilicet Northanhimbrorum, de religione ecclesiæ S. Albani certificatus per abbatem Paulum, in ecclesia sanctæ Mariæ de Thynemue (in qua corpus beati Oswini regis et martyris requiescit) monachos ecclesiæ sancti Albani fecit collocari, et ipsam cum omnibus pertinentiis, regis et archiepiscopi Lanfranci benevolentia, Cellam fore sancti Albani constituit.

SCIENDUM est, quod Robertus de Mumbray miles

strenuissimus Comes Northanhimbrorum antequam moreretur aliquot annis visu privabatur; annosus nempe fuit Deoque devotus, effectus est monachus apud sanctum Albanum; ubi multo tempore sanctissimè vivens, migravit ad Dominum, et sepultus est honorificè in loco non multum remoto a capitulo. Ubi postea Symon abbas sancti Albani capellam construxit sancti Symeonis. Ita videlicet, quod corpus jacet intumulatum in medio capellæ, sed propius altari. Iste Robertus, cum esset vir audacissimus et bellipotens, vicit et interemit Malcolmum regem Scotiæ, quem de licentia regis Henrici Angliæ primi audacter diffiducavit. Et, propter regiam excellentiam, fecit corpus regis occisi honorificè intumulari in ecclesia de Thynemue; quam idem Comes construxerat. Scotis tamen postea corpus sui regis frontosè postulantibus, concessum est et datum corpus cujusdam hominis plebei de Sethtunc; et ita delusa est Scotorum improbitas. Fundavit autem Comes iste magnificus Prioratum de Thynemue; et ibidem monachos congregavit de domo sancti Albani, tanquam ab electissima domo inter omnia cœnobia Angliæ, ubi etiam se vovit monasticum habitum suscepturum, et sepulturam in loco memorato. Quæ omnia, Deo sibi propitio, feliciter consummavit.

TEMPORE regis Willielmi primi post Conquestum Angliæ habuit Robertus de Mubray comitatum Northumbr. In quo tempore idem comitatus fuit membrum regni Scotiæ; et tunc fuit quidam Egelricus episcopus Dunelm. et postea frater ejus Egelwynus factus est ejusdem loci episcopus: et in eodem tempore, Paulo existente Abbate de sancto Albano, data est Cella de Tynem. a dicto Roberto comite ecclesiæ sancti Albani; et in eodem tempore quidam nobilis de Novo Castello qui venit ad Conquestum Angliæ dedit ecclesiam de Cumnesclive ecclesiæ sancti Albani et sancti Oswyni de Tynem. ut dominus et verus patronus, quam tempore dicti regis et postea tempore filii sui Willielmi Rufi quodam Willielmo existente episcopo Dunelm. monachi de sancto Albano habuerunt et pacifice possederunt. Quidam Jacobus dicti G[ospatrici] nobilis filius dat et confirmat donum patris sui super collatione dictæ ecclesiæ de Conesclive. Gilbertus filius dicti Jacobi dat et confirmat donum patris sui super eadem collatione; et sic usque in hodiernum diem sunt monachi de sancto Albano et sancti Oswyni de Tynem. in pacifica possessione advocationis dictæ ecclesiæ de Conesclive sine alicujus hucusque reclamacione; ita quod statum suum in hujusmodi nunquam postea mutaverunt. Post magnum tempus postea Henricus rex Angliæ fecit escambium de tribus villis pertinentibus ad manerium suum de Corbrigge pro villa de Conesclive et quibusdam aliis villis, et habuit unam amicam de genere Guydonis de Baylol seu antecessorum suorum quam maritaggio conjunxit cuidam antecessori Willielmi baronis de Greystok, et cum eadem amica sua villam de Conesclive donavit eidem, excepta ecclesia ejusdem villæ quam dare non potuit, eo quod antequam villam habuit de Conesclive, ecclesia monachis sancti Albani sicut dictum est data fuit tempore Roberti prædicti comitis Northumbr. Istis rationibus videtur quod nullum jus super advocationem ecclesiæ de Conesclive ad baronem de Graystok, nos injuste vexantem, debeat pertinere. Quærantur matriculæ episcopales, et invenietis quot rectores ad dictam ecclesiam de Conesclive per nos sunt præsentati, et nullus per ipsum baronem vel per suos antecessores.

Deinde præfati antistitis Willielmi tempore comes Northanimbrorum Albrius hoc donum renovavit, ipsamque ecclesiam cum suo presbitero ecclesiæ sancti Cuthberti perpetuo possidendam adjecit. Quæ cum jam per quindecim annos velut deserta sine tecto durasset, eam monachi culmine imposito renovarunt, et per tres annos possiderunt. Cum vero postea Robertus de Mulbreio in comitatum Albrio successit, propter inimicitias quæ inter episcopum et ipsum agitabantur, sancti Cuthberti monachos de ipsa ecclesia expulit, eamque Paulo abbati monasterii sancti Albani martyris tradidit. Qui videlicet abbas a Dunelmensibus monachis frequenter admonitus, rogatus, et prohibitus ne aliena invaderet, audire noluit quia potius suos illuc ad habitandum misit. Quos non multo post ipse secutus, repente ibi infirmitate corripitur: et dum domum redire tentaret, moritur. NUM. IX.

De Monachis Dunelmensibus.

[Simeon Dunelm. sub. an. M.CXXI. coll. 243, 244.]

MONACHI Dunelmenses facta de ecclesia quæ est in Tynemutha proclamatione in capitulo sancti Petri Eboraci præsentibus episcopis Turstino prædicto, Ranulfo Dunelmensi, et Homo sancti Ebroini aliisque multis, hanc sui juris fuisse conquesti sunt ex concessione Waltheofi comitis, quando consobrinum suum, scilicet materteræ suæ filium, Morkarum puerum parvulum eis ad nutriendum Deo in Gyrwensi monasterio contradidit. Quem sic eis in ipsa ecclesia de Tynemutha commendatum, inde ad Gyrvum navigio ipsi monachi perducentes, diligenter nutrire, et in Dei servitium educare studuerunt. Ab hoc, inquit, tempore nostri fratres monachi Gyrwenses curam illius loci susceptam gesserunt, Edmundo ac postmodum Eadredo monachis illorum ipsi ecclesiæ deservientibus cum presbytero Elwaldo, qui et canonicus Dunelmensis ecclesiæ fuerat, unde et ad Dunelmum quotiens suæ vicis ebdomada imminabat, ad celebrandas per ebdomadam missas transire consueverat. Wlmarum quoque nostræ congregationis monachum, aliosque per vices fratres qui ibidem officia divina peragerent, illuc de Girwa transmissos meminimus. Ossa sancti Oswini etiam ut placuit pro tempore ad se in Girvum fratres nostri transtulerunt, indeque in priorem locum cum voluerunt reportarunt. Postremo cum Albrius honorem comitatus suscepisset, ipse quoque nobis in Dunelmum translatis, eundem locum donavit. Unde mox ex capituli totius sententia monachus noster Turchillus illuc mittitur, qui renovato ecclesiæ ipsius culmine, per multum tempus habitavit ibidem, donec postea a Rodberto de Mulbreio comite, propter odium quod contra episcopum Willielmum habuerat, per ministros ipsius comitis Gumerum et Rodbertum Taca violenter expelleretur. Non multo post abbas monasterii sancti Albani Paulus prædictum ecclesiam a comite impetravit, quam visurus cum venisset Eboracum, Turgotus qui tunc Dunelmensis ecclesiæ prioratum gerebat, missis illuc monachis et clericis, in præsentia archiepiscopi Thomæ senioris, multarumque magnæ reverentiæ personarum, canonica illum auctoritate prohibuit, ne locum juris ecclesiæ Dunelmensis sibi usurparet, et sic sacrorum canonum et fraternæ caritatis violator existeret. At ille indigna respondens illud prohibitum nihili pendit. Sed cum illo pervenisset, correptus infirmitate, dum rediret, non longe ab Eboraco in Seterintun vitam terminavit. Taliter ecclesiam de Tynemutha amisimus.

Quæ quidem libertates pro eo quod compertum fuit in curia nostra prædicta quod prædictus prior et prædecessores sui prædicti aliquas libertates coronam nostram tangentes, super nos et coronam nostram prædictam occupaverant minus justè, nobis per considerationem ejusdem curiæ tanquam forisfactæ fuerunt adjudicatæ et cum aliis libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus quas clamabant infra libertatem prædictam, ad ipsos per cartas prædictas pertinere, in manum nostram captæ:

Volentes et concedentes pro nobis et hæredibus nostris prædictis, quod iidem abbas prior et monachi et successores sui prædicti libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus prædictis adeo plenè utantur de cætero sicut ipsi libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus illis rationabiliter uti et gaudere consueverunt à tempore confectionis cartarum earundem usque ad diem captionis dictarum libertatum et liberarum consuetudinum in manum nostram, sicut prædictum est. Monastery of Wymondham, or Windham,

IN

NORFOLK;

Anciently a Cell to the Monastery of St. Alban, but afterwards an independent Abbey.

WILLIAM de Albini, or Daubeney, chief butler to King Henry the First, was the founder of the priory of Wymondham. Dugdale, in the former edition of the Monasticon, upon the authority of John de Oxenede, a monk of St. Benet of Hulme, gives the year 1139 as the date of the foundation.^a Tanner, however, considers that it could not have been so late; not only a year, and all other acknowledgment. Richard de Albini a near relation of the founder, was at this time abbat of St. Alban's, and, with his convent, consented to the arrangement.^c

William de Albini, by a second charter, granted at the time of the interment of his wife Maud, gave to the monastery the manor of Happisburgh; confirming his donation by the delivery of a cross of silver filled with relics, which, with a gold ring and a cup of silver for the eucharist, he offered upon the altar of the church. William de Curciona, of Curson, one of the witnesses to this charter, is also stated to have given at this time to the monks twenty acres of land and all his tithe in Stanfield.^d

King Henry the First's Confirmation is the next charter to be named, recognizing William de Albini's grants, and adding numerous privileges and immunities. By this charter the tenants of the convent were permitted to buy and sell toll free in all cities and places in the kingdom where previous charters to the contrary had not been granted: the king's officers were also prohibited by it from entering or intermeddling with the priory lands unless by consent, the prior being allowed his own officers to keep his liberties.^e

Soon after this the founder granted a third charter to the convent, bestowing upon them the wood called Snitswood in Wymondham, the vivary of Tipford, and certain meadow-land before the door of the church.^f

A separate charter of Henry the First is extant, confirming the manor of Hapesburgh;^g and another, granting to the monks a fair in Wymondham for three days, on the eve, the day, and the morrow of the Nativity of the blessed Virgin.^h

William de Albini, earl of Sussex, grandson to the founder, confirmed the different grants of his grandfather to this monastery, together with those of William earl of Arundel, his father; adding the confirmation of various gifts of land of a smaller kind, which are minutely specified.ⁱ

because the founder's gifts to it were confirmed by King Henry the First, but because Roger Bigod, who occurs as a witness to the charter of foundation, died in 1107. Richard abbat of St. Alban's, moreover, who is mentioned in the charter died in 1119.^b The actual time of the foundation of Wymondham monastery must therefore be placed very early in the reign of Henry the First.

The foundation charter gives the minute particulars of the endowment, both as to lands and privileges; adding, that on vacancies in the priorate the monks were to elect a new Prior out of their own convent, and present him to the founder or patron, who was not to refuse confirmation of the choice unless he could show sufficient cause. By this charter, also, the Priory was made subordinate to St. Alban's abbey; whenever the abbat came to Wymondham, it was directed that he should be honourably entertained; and in token of the dependence of the Priory, as a cell to St. Alban's, the Prior of Wymondham was to pay a mark of silver every year, on the chief festival of St. Alban, to the abbat. The charter further covenanted, that if William de Albini himself, or the King, or any of his successors, should convert the Priory into an Abbey, that then it should become independent altogether, free from the mark

Soon after the death of William de Albini, the founder, the abbats of St. Alban's monastery began to extend their jurisdiction over that of Wymondham. At first they confined their claim to the confirmation of the Prior elect; but about the year 1300 they assumed the power of presenting the prior to it; usually admitting, contrary to the foundation charter, the monks of their own abbey. The descendants of William de Albini, who were the legitimate patrons of Wymondham, were, in consequence, continually embroiled in quarrels with the abbats.

Matthew Paris has given a long detail of circumstances relating to the struggle between William earl of Arundel, the son of the founder, and abbat Robert de Gorham, which at last ended in a compromise.^c

^b Blomef. Hist. Norf. fol. edit. vol. i. pp. 731, 732.

^c See Num. XII.

Connected in some degree with this assumed jurisdiction was a subsequent quarrel between the same abbat and Thomas bishop of Norwich; the former denying the canonical subjection to the bishop of the priories both of Bingham and Wymondham. By a composition, however, made in 1228,^a episcopal obedience was to be in future yielded by the respective priors for their parish churches and vicarages; the priors were to be presented to the bishop, and to attend his synod; but in point of visitation, the monasteries were to be both subject to the abbat of St. Albans only, Bingham priory paying annually twenty, and Wymondham forty shillings to the bishop in lieu; the abbat reserving power to elect the respective priors, remove the monks, and do every thing in the two priories, exclusive of the bishop, which was allowed by the rule of the order of St. Benedict.^b

After this, Isabel de Albini countess of Arundel claimed the sole power of confirming the Prior, agreeable to the founder's charter. Blomefield says, at the death of prior William de St. Alban, in 1262, she not only claimed the presentation, but sued for it at Rome. In the month of October, 1264, however, the countess entered into a compromise with the abbat, on condition that he made William de Horton, a monk of St. Albans, prior; and in future, on every vacancy of the priorate, the countess and her heirs were to name two monks of St. Albans, one of whom the abbat was to present to the bishop.^c

At a subsequent period, when Sir Robert de Tateshale came to be patron, hearing that the abbat of St. Albans designed to visit Bingham, he entered the monastery, and shut up its different gates, preventing the Prior from meeting the abbat, and alleging that the monks of St. Albans had forfeited all their right there, if they had ever had any, by reason that John de Berkhamstede the abbat had refused to deliver a certain quantity of bread and ale from the convent, which they were obliged to do, having always done it to his ancestors; that is to say, four loaves and four flaggons of ale every day, whenever he came to his manor of Wymondham. The abbat, fearing the power of Sir Robert de Tateshale, at last acceded to the demand, and then was received into the priory. John Maryns, the next abbat of St. Albans, suffered this allowance (estimated to be of the value of 8*l.* per annum) to go unpaid; in consequence of which, at the death of Adam Polein prior of Wymondham, in 1303, the king's escheators seized and took possession of the monastery, placed a guard upon the gates, and summoned the tenants of the priory manor the next day to do their homage; but the Prior not being buried it was respited; and afterwards, the tenants refusing this homage as not customary, their goods were seized and detained, on the pretence that Robert de Tateshale, heir of Sir Robert de Tateshale, was a minor and in the king's custody, and injured by the non-payment of bread and ale, and that a prior could not be presented: but the abbat of St. Albans sent, with the king's consent, John de Stevenache to be prior, who was accordingly received as such, and the tenants' goods restored.^d

PRIORS of WYMONDHAM.

NIGEL, the first prior, is named in the charter by which William de Albini, the founder, gave to the monastery the manor of Hapisburgh.^e Blomefield erroneously places the date of 1130 against his name.

ALEXIUS was prior in 1136.^f

GALIENUS.^g

RALPH DE NUERS is said to have been the first prior who was chosen and presented by the abbat of St. Albans.^h He held the priorate at the time of the great struggle between William earl of Arundel and Robert de Gorham abbat of St. Albans. Blomefield assigns to him the date of 1160.

NICHOLAS.ⁱ

REYMUND, prior of Wymondham, occurs in an instrument dated in 1187.^k

DONATUS.^l

RALPH DE DUNSTABLE, A. D. 1200.^m According to Blomefield,

RALPH DE STANHAM was presented to this priorate, in 1210, by William de Gisney governor of Montjoy priory, by leave of the abbat of St. Albans and the founder. But this Ralph de Stanham appears to have been the same person with Ralph de Whitby, according to Matthew Paris, who succeeded

ALEXANDER DE LANGLEY here, in 1217. In the account of William de Trumpington abbat of St. Albans, Matthew Paris says, "Alexandrum vero de Langeleia, instantia comitis Harundellie patroni cellæ de Wymundham, promovit abbas Gulielmus in Priorem illius ecclesiæ. Quò cum pervenisset, ita sibi alienus infatuatus est, ut penitus inutilis, cito post remitteretur. Loco vero Alexandri RADULPHUM DE WITEBIA subrogavit." "Radulphusque cognomento DE STANHAM ad Prioratum de Wymundham est vocatus, in temporalibus et spiritualibus vir providus et circumspectus. Nostræ tamen non erat monachus professionis, fuerat enim monachus de Witebia, et prior domus illius. Et persecutionem ibidem aliquando passus, ad sinum protectionis beati Albani, ubi et receptus, sapienter confugit. Habuit etiam idem Radulphus (quia aliquando Prior extitit domus memoratæ) quandam Cellulam vel Heremitorium, sibi specialiter (ob sui reverentiam personæ) assignatum, quod ad Domum de Witebia pertinebat. Ut ibidem a facie persequentium, sibi vacans, tutius latitaret; ibique sanctè et irreprehensibiliter, antequam in claustrum sancti Albani se recepisset, per aliquod tempus habitavit."ⁿ

RALPH DE WHITBY had not held the priory of Bingham a great while, when he was accused to the abbat of St. Albans, at his visitation, of wasting the revenues of the cell, and (which was probably in the eye of the abbat a greater enormity) of courting the favour of the Earl of Arundel, the patron of the priory, too much. The abbat, having enjoined amendment, departed, but soon after recalled the prior. Matthew Paris, in his account of abbat Trumpington, just quoted, tells us:

"Tandem ad cellam de Wymundham usque pervenit. Ubi facta inquisitione diligenti de statu interiori et exteriori, dictum est ei quod prior illorum (videlicet dominus Radulphus de Witebya) domum de Wymundham enormiter damnificando, Cellulam suam de Witebye de qua venerat, et ad quam quandoque redire disposuerat, de bonis Ecclesiæ de Wymundham clanculo surreptis, instauravit. Et quia extraneus fuit, ad aliena anhelavit: similisque erat pastori tentoria inhabitanti, qui in crastino tendit ad ulteriora. Dicebatur insuper quòd supra modum gratiam Comitum de Harundel suorumque captavit, et in damnum Ecclesiæ, non modicum comparavit. Quem plùs, ut dictum erat, diligebat, quàm vel Deum, vel Abbatem, vel aliquem fratrum suorum. Quæ omnia conferebat abbas in corde suo, usque ad tempus retributionis dissimulans; tamen ad horam corripuit eum super talibus excessibus, et dimisit in pace."^o

"Igitur sine strepitu citò post hoc revocatus est prior de Wymundham, Radulphus de Witeby, qui non excessus pristinos ut decuit, emendavit. Qui veniens ad sanctum Albanum, abbatem et conventum decenter sed breviter salutavit; gratias agens eis de sibi impensis beneficiis et honoribus. Postea ivit ad Heremitorium suum, sive Cellu-

WILLIAM DE FESCHAMP was appointed prior upon Ralph de Whitby's recall, by the abbat of St. Albans, but was objected to by the earl of Arundel, the patron of the house. In consequence,

THOMAS MEDICUS was appointed. Newcome calls him THOMAS MEAD. He had travelled into the Holy Land with the earl's father, who dying there, this Thomas had carefully brought the dead body to England, and given it interment at Binham.^b Blomefield says Thomas was made prior about the year 1224.^c

STEPHEN LONDON, D.D., 1446;^c who, in 1448, became the first of the

ABBATS of WYMONDHAM.

Weever says, John, the seventh of that Christian name, abbat of St. Albans, could not endure a certain monk of the house whom he had made archdeacon, whose name was Stephen London, because he would tell him of his faults: therefore, to be rid of his company, his admonishments being distateful, he persuaded the archdeacon to take upon him the charge of the priory of Wymondham, then void of a prior. The archdeacon accepted of it, and was admitted Prior by the bishop of Norwich in 1446, and, being a worthy man, pleased both his flock and Sir Andrew Ogard knight, his founder, very well; which more displeased the abbat, who within a year sent express commandment to discharge him of his priorship. This was but ill taken by himself and his patron, insomuch, that in 1447 the prior and Sir Andrew petitioned the King that they might have his licence to obtain a bull from the pope to erect Wymondham into an abbey; and set forth that the founder, William de Albini, had reserved liberty in the foundation deed for the King, and the Patron or Founder, to do so at any time. They complained also that the Abbats of St. Albans had presented monks of St. Albans to the priorship, contrary to the founder's intention, which had tied the office to the election of the monks of Wymondham out of their own number. The premises appearing true, the king licensed Sir Andrew Ogard to procure a bull from the pope, which he did from Pope Nicholas the Fifth in 1448, when WYMONDHAM was converted into an independent ABBEY. Stephen London, then prior, was made the first abbat. The future abbats, agreeably to the charter of foundation, were to be elected out of the monks of the convent, unless all consented to the contrary: they were to be admitted as the Priors had been, by the bishop of Norwich, and presented to the founder or patron, who could refuse none unless for notorious crimes.^d

The different privileges and immunities which this monastery enjoyed as a cell to St. Albans it afterwards continued to enjoy in its own right, as an independent abbey;

ELIGIUS or ELISHA FERRERS, D.D., the last abbat, was elected in 1532.ⁱ Cole says he was prior of St. Albans in 1529.^k After the Dissolution he became archdeacon of Suffolk and prebend of Norwich. He died in 1548.

In 1534, this abbat, with Thomas Lyn, Edmund Shawe precentor, and eight other monks, subscribed to the king's supremacy. At the Dissolution the abbat had a pension assigned to him of 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*^l

At its Suppression, the monastery of Wymondham was found in a regular state; no crimes being laid to the charge of the abbat or any of the monks, except four, who, it was pretended, owned themselves incontinent. These were Thomas Lynne, Richard Cambridge, Robert Colchester, and John Wyndham.^m

After the Dissolution, the site of this abbey, together with the manor, was given by the king, in 1545, to Henry Howard earl of Surrey, during the life of Thomas duke of Norfolk his father, if the earl so long lived; paying into the Court of Augmentations 9*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* a year.ⁿ The grant was subsequently made to the earl in fee simple.^o Afterwards this site and manor belonged to Queen Mary. Queen Elizabeth, in 1564, granted both to Sir Walter Haddon, knight, to be held by the fee-farm of 11*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* per annum.^p

The revenues of this monastery are very differently estimated by Dugdale and Speed. Dugdale places the amount at 211*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*: Speed at only 72*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* So also in Stevens's Supplement, vol. i. p. 28, "Summa inde 72*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* Summa clara, 55*l.* 18*s.* 0*d.*" Bishop Tanner, from a manuscript Valor in the Registry at Norwich, however, confirms Dugdale's estimate, with a slight variation, making the sum 211*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* This, he adds, seems most reasonable, not only from the number of the religious maintained here, but from the amount of the pension granted to the abbat at the Dissolution.^q The Ministers Accounts of the 26th of Hen. VIII. estimate the revenues of Wymondham at 263*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.*^r

Bishop Tanner refers to another Register, formerly in the possession of Sir William Le Neve, and afterwards of Sir Edward Walker.^a

The Cottonian manuscript Otho B. iv. destroyed in the fire at Westminster in 1731, contained a metrical account of the change of Wymondham from a Cell to an Abbey, from the pen of Whethamstede, the literary abbat of St. Albans. Weever has given some extracts from it in his account of Wymondham in the Funeral Monuments.^b

Of the FABRIC, Blomefield says, "The founder of the monastery, at the foundation, had his seat or manor house by the stream that runs southward of the church, all which he gave to the monks, who inhabited in it while the monastery was building, the earl removing his seat to another place north-west of the church. It seems he pulled down the old parish church, and in its place built the present one, with the quire which is now in ruins. It was at first in shape of a cross, and consisted of a quire or chancel, with the chapel of Our Lady on the north side of it; a tower at the west end between the nave and chancel, which is still called the abbey steeple; a nave; north aisle; and south aisle, over which, till the Dissolution, the monks lodgings were joined to the south side of the church. The two transepts, or cross chapels, made the cross; that on the north side was the chapel of St. Margaret, and that on the south side the chapel of St. Andrew and the abbey vestry. The monastery itself was a large square court, the church making its north side, and the high wall or gable, now standing on the east side, was the chapter-house. When it was demolished, the south aisle of the church, which was leaved, was demolished also; but the king gave the parishioners ground out of the scite to make the present south aisle on, viz. eighty feet in length and twenty eight in breadth, the old aisle being only eleven feet broad.

"In the 31st year of King Henry the VIIIth, the parishioners and inhabitants of the town, desirous to save their noble church from destruction, petitioned the king to have the following parts of the church, which was to be destroyed by the late act, as belonging to the monastery, granted to them, they paying for the bells, lead, &c. according to their value. First, the Abbey Steeple as it stands, with the bells as they hang, giving weight for weight for the bells: the lead being twenty one foot broad, and as much long, containing, at twenty feet square to each fodder, one fodder sixteen feet: the Vestry belonging to the abbey, with all the right-up aile on the south side of the steeple and parish church, to the cross-aile, the lead being forty four feet long and eleven broad: the Monks Lodgings builded over the south aile of the parish church, seventy six feet long, and eleven broad, all leaded: the Chapel of St. Margaret on the north side of the abbey steeple, the lead being twenty eight feet long, and twenty one broad: the Choir and Our Lady's chapel, with all the whole work as it standeth, to be taken down at pleasure, the lead sixty eight feet long, and thirty broad. Item, the whole chapel of Bishop Becket, standing in the midst of the town, with two little bells there hanging, to give warning to the people of every chance of fire, or other sudden business happening; the lead being seventy one feet long and thirty broad. The whole being seventeen fodder and thirty one feet of lead: all which the inhabitants paid the king for at the rate of four pounds the fodder, and the king gave them the timber-work of the roof of the chapter-house within the late abbey, with such stone, glass, and old windows there, as should be fit for the building of the new aile."^a

By this, says Blomefield, it appears that the tower and bells at the west end, the nave, north aile, north porch, and vestry over it, (with the land on the north side near the present church-yard,) at that time belonged solely to the parish; whose good intent (though they had paid the money) was frustrated by Serjt. Flowerdew, who stript the south aile and abbey-vestry, and all the lodgings, the town-vestry, and part of the abbey steeple, of all their lead, and carried away all the freestone from the south cross aile, the chapel of our Lady, and the quire (which he demolished in a good measure), and all the freestone from the foundation of a wall which the inhabitants had built between the rest of the abbey ground and the ground given by the king to enlarge the parish-church. Thus, he adds, the choir being demolished, and the beauty spoiled, the inhabitants pulled down the rest, and new built the present south aile.

The site of the abbey contained thirty-three acres. The old wall at the west end of the tower was part of the charnel-house, which, with Becket's chapel, the abbey steeple, St. Margaret's chapel, the cross aile, and vestry, with St. Mary's chapel, were granted to Connell and Pistor, as concealed lands, but to no purpose, the inhabitants showing they had a right to them already.^b

Blomefield says, after the inhabitants, by agreement with the prior, had quitted their common right in the quire, and had the nave and north aile appropriated to them for a parish church, unwilling to have no other bells for their parish use than those in the abbey steeple belonging to the monks, they began to raise contributions, with consent of the lord of the town, to erect a tower at the west end of the church, and what by contributions and legacies given by persons that died here, in 1410 they took down a porch at the west end of the gable, and began the foundation of the noble tower which is now standing there, it being no less than fifty-six yards high. Upon this the prior and monks indicted the townsmen for breaking the porch and wall, and erecting a tower and three bells, and stopping up the door between the nave and chancel, alledging that the church and all was theirs, and that the townsmen ought to come there at the sound of the abbey bells. This made great confusion, which lasted about a year, and then Thomas archbishop of Canterbury came hither in his metropolitical visitation and settled the matter between them; licensing the townsmen to build their tower and hang what bells they pleased in it, on condition they never rang them to disturb the monks, that is to say before six in the morning nor after six at night, it being their resting time, and that in the day-time they should be rung for divine service, or the dead only, unless on Christmas day, Easter day, at the coming of the king, archbishop, or bishop, or in case of any public enemies, thieves, fire, or robbery. Upon this Sir John Clinton, knt. went upon the work, and, with the assistance of many benefactors, not only built the tower but the upper part of the whole nave, as the different coats of arms cut on the outside of the north windows show. Blomefield says, it was a long time before this work was finished and the bells hung; from 1410 to 1476. In 1461, Nicholas Dote gave 6s. 8d. toward it. In 1464, William Cobald, chaplain, gave five pounds toward the building of it, by his will. In 1468, John Langforth of Wymondham was buried in the church, and gave 20s. to the tower. In 1472, John Westgate gave five marks. In 1473, John the official of the bishop was buried in the church, and gave 13s. 4d. to the tower.

Previous to the Dissolution there were Gilds in this church, of the Holy Trinity, St. Peter of Sutton, Our Lady, St. Margaret, St. Andrew, Watlefield gild, the gild of the Holy Cross, of St. John Baptist, of St. George, and of All Saints, all of which were endowed and supported lights.^c

The present church of Wymondham consists of a nave with its ailes, a large western tower, and another at the intersection of the nave by the transept. On the former of these, according to Camden, William Kett, one of the two incendiaries of the Norfolk insurrections, was executed in 1549.^d From the circular arches of the nave, the older parts of the building may be deemed coeval with the foundation of the monastery.^e At the east end and on the south side of the church are some fragments of walls.

The SEAL of this abbey was large and handsome: an impression of it, on red wax, is appendant to the Acknowledgment of Supremacy in the 25th of Henry the Eighth still remaining in the Chapter-House at Westminster. The device is on one side only, and represents, under a canopy, the blessed Virgin with her Child, sitting on an ornamented seat. On each side is an angel praying; and, in a niche below, a monk, also praying. Much of the legend is lost: the part which remains runs thus, SIG

The priory de MONTE JOVIS, MONTEGAUDIO, MOUNTJOY, or MONGE, in the parish of Haverland in Norfolk, was originally a CHAPEL or CELL belonging to the Convent of Wymondham.

In Snetesham unam carucatam terræ, cum falda propria, et omnes homines quos habent de feodo meo cum tenementis eorum: ecclesiam quoque ejusdem villæ, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, et decimis, tam de molendinis, quam de bladis, et de aliis rebus omnibus quæ decimari debent. Et in Uthuna, ex dono Ricardi Noth, de quadam salina redditum duorum solidorum.

Porro in Fliccheham. in Grimestun, et in Pikeham, duas partes omnium decimarum totius domini quod fuit avi mei, tam de molendinis, quam de aliis rebus, et omnibus quæ decimari debent, cum uno mesuagio, et una acra ex dono Rogeri de Verli. In Helingeta tenementum, unde eis duo millenaria, et dimidium anguillarum annuatim eis persolvuntur, et unum marescum in Reddeham, et quinque acras, quæ vocantur Lenedelond, unam acram et unam rodam juxta crucem Levedu, et unam acram et unam rodam juxta Kepparderhou. Tres acras et dimidiam juxta Langheg. Ecclesia quoque Northwtun, cum omnibus suis pertinentiis, et advocatione ipsius.

Volo igitur et præcipio quatinus prædicti monachi omnia supradicta tenementa, cum omnibus dignitatibus, libertatibus, et consuetudinibus, et omnibus rebus cum quibus Willielmus avus meus ea unquam melius et liberius in vita sua tenuit, habeant et teneant benè et in pace in perpetuum. Causa inter Abbatem S. Albani et Comitem de Arundell pro Cella de Wymundham.

IN narrationem gestorum abbatis Roberti, utimur ordine artificiali; id primò narrantes quod posteriùs gestum est; secundum eminentiam rerum earundem quæ contigerunt. Domuit indomitum Willielmum Comitem Harundellæ, qui quasi fræneticus, in multos consuevit desævire. Est autem beato Albano cella monachorum apud Wymundham, ut prædictum est; quam fundavit Gulielmus de Albaneya pincerna regis Henrici primi; pater jam dicti Comitis Willielmi, in honore sanctæ Mariæ et sancti Albani. Contigit itaque Roberti abbatis tempore, quod prior de Wymundham (Radulphus scilicet de Nuers) vir quidem religiosus, sed in iram secùs quam deceret præceps; aliquando apud Hapesburc, prædium pertinens ecclesiæ de Wymundham, ut à suis ibi ecclesiæ suæ auxilium exigeret, pro incumbente aliqua necessitate; divertit. At illi in exactione, Priori resisterunt in faciem; unde Prior ira accensus in adiutorium exactionis suæ, vocavit comitis servientes. Qui diruerunt ostia, seras confringentes et repagula; servosque ecclesiæ crudeliter contractantes et nonnullos compedibus et cippo constringentes, prædam abegerunt. Servi autem confugientes ad beati Albani præsidium; in argumentum injuriarum, tulerunt secum seras confractas; vestibis conscissis, quærimoniam lacrymabilem coram Abbate deposuerunt. Abbas vero interrogavit, de quo potiùs conquererentur, quasi auctore injuriæ; servantibus Comitibus, vel Priore. Servi responderunt, dolo Prioris illatam fuisse violentiam sub nomine Comitis. Abbas vero cogitans super hoc, in id consilii devenit; ut accederet ad locum; et cum fratribus et servantibus loci tractaret secretiùs ac districtiùs super hujus casus articulo. Et ecce properanti Northfolciam, octoque milliaribus distanti a Wymundham, occurrit Prior loci cum suis; et abbati suggessit, quod ab apparitoribus comitis didicerat, qui jam Wymundham venerant, ut abbati obstarent, et introitum ad cellam suam violenta manu negarent. Abbas autem seorsum suos convocans; quid facto opus sit super hoc consuluit. Dicente uno consultius fore transire ad Norwicum, et inde legatum ad comitem mittere, qui quæreretur utrum hoc auctoritate comitis factum esset. Ait quidam fratrum junior, nondum vis illata est abbati, nec occasio querimonie locum habet, nisi præcesserit corporalis violentia. Eapropter eat dominus abbas ad cellam suam, et ingrediatur; audiatque et videat apparitionem vim facturum. Placuit Abbati junioris consilium; et ad cellæ suæ domicilium properavit. Et ecce nuncius occurrit nuntians cocum Abbatis spoliatum equo suo; qui Abbatem de more præcesserat, ut refectiones pararet. Quod monachi audientes qui ibidem erant, in prædonem irruerunt, et colaphis turpiter affectum, equum liberaverunt. Nec idcirco abbas lora retraxit, veniente occurreret extra valvas totus loci Conventus, profitens unanimi voce, patrem spiritualem et dominum illius cellæ temporalem; et persecutus est eum usque ad portam atrii domus Dei. Ibique volenti introire, obstitit Robertus de Millers abbat, cum multa satellitum turba. Cui abbas, "In qua potestate, Rogere, vetas me ingredi domum meum? Ea die qua suscepi curam regiminis in ecclesia sancti Albani, suscepi etiam curam domus hujus, quippe ex illius pendet cura, et comitatur tanquam filia matrem. Scio te regis hominem esse: et tu scis me illius Abbatem. Ex ejus auctoritate tibi interdico, ne vim nobis inferas." Et urgens calcaribus equum, ingressus est per medios apparitores, nullo resistente. Cui redeunti ab oratione, accessit jam dictus Rogerus et qui cum eo erant, supplicantes abbati ut recederet, ne iram comitis incurrerent, quàm intollerabilem sæpius præsensserant. Quibus ille dixit, "Ecce advesperascit, et quò recedam tardè sic? Sustinete me et fratres qui mecum sunt, et uniuscujusque monachi ministrum; et omnes alios dimittam: donec ab ore comitis per nuntios proprios accipiam, utrum ipse an furor aliorum, contra me fecerit quod actum est. Quod cum ab ipso acceperim, vel hic securus in domo nostra permanebo, vel recedam, ut nostræ indemnitati prævideam; et factum quod petiit et promisit." Redeuntes à Comite Prior loci et Richardus de Sancto Claro, et Henricus de Gorham patruus Abbatis, quos Abbas ad comitem miserat pro colloquio habendo inter abbatem et comitem; sequenti quarta feria apud Athelburnam^a comite expectante abbatis adventum, abbati suggesserunt. Die ergo statuto, venit comes illuc agmine stipatus numero; venit et abbas cum paucis. Seditibus itaque partibus ex adverso, Comes primus sic orsus est, "Domine Abbas, ad hoc convenimus ego et tu, ut in communi consilio tractemus de cellæ meæ de Wymundham emendatione: quatenus videamus quid mihi, quid tibi, quid Priori meo competat, in prædicta cella. Ne si usurpaveris tibi quod meum est, vel ego mihi quod tuum est, fiat confusio in domo Domini, atque inter nos odii fomes utrobique damnosa. Ostende, proinde, imprimis chartam patris mei, et quicquid tibi donaverit chartæ auctoritas tuum sit. Quam si non habeas, vellem scire quo auctore vendicas tibi in terra mea aliquid domini?" At Abbas, "Ad hoc equidem venimus, ut emendemus in monachis nostris de Wymundham pariter et illis de Binham, ea quæ cura exigit spiritualis: hoc enim nobis est primum, quærere, scilicet, regnum Dei. Deinde, ut non omittamus in exterioribus, quæ nostra indigent dispensatione. Pridie venientibus nobis Wymundham, ad officii nostri executionem, resisterunt nobis quos miseratis, et introitum negaverunt procaciter. Misimus ad vos, ut de ore vestro acciperemus si vestra auctoritas intercessit, et inficiati estis. Colloqui vobiscum erat ardens desiderium: de die colloqui significastis, nosque in omnibus morem vobis gesimus. Ecce assumus: querimoniam lachrymabilem deposuerunt in auribus nostris rustici ecclesiæ de Wymundham: quod Officiales vestri irruerunt in eos, et tulerunt prædam eorum, confregeruntque seras arcarum, et contenta asportaverunt. Quod quàm detestandum sit in tempore pacifici regis, et in diebus pacis, facile est deprehendere. Illud imprimis eget emendatione: deinde procedendum est in aliis, juxta rerum exigentiam. De carta verò patris vestri non est modo quæstio, nec ad hoc modò venimus. Nulli quippe dubium est, quòd abbas sancti Albani habeat in ecclesia de Wymundham; omnibus enim notum est, quod Priores ponit: et cum rex exegerit, deponit: ipse quoque fratres loci visitat semel in anno, et si casus se ingesserit, pluries. In visitatione, protractiorem facit moram: ut ex deliberatione morosa possit mederi animabus infirmis, providere in rebus exterioribus, si res ita disponantur ut expediat." Ad hoc Comes, "Si rusticis Ecclesiæ meæ, et hominibus Prioris mei, aliquid feci quod facere non debui, nihil ad te, mihi et Priori meo, bene conveniet. Tu enim in ecclesia de Wymundham, nullum omnino habes dominium, nisi quòd in signum subjectionis et ordinis debet tibi successoribusque tuis Prior loci reddere annuam marcam. Si volueris visitare fratres tuos de Binham, debetur tibi in eundo unius noctis, et in redeundo alterius hospitium apud Wymundham: ita quod tredecim equorum numerum non debent excedere, qui te comitantur. Ita data est Cella à patre meo, abbati Ricardo: juxta quod taxatum est in carta patris mei, et ita faciam observari omnibus diebus meis." Abbas respondit; "De hominibus Ecclesiæ tuæ, vel Prioris tui de Wymundham, totum ad me, Priorem quippe hunc quem tuum perhibes, ego creavi, et jus quod habet vel in monachis, vel in rebus monachorum de Wymundham, me auctore possidet." Et conversus ad Priorem, ait; "Domine Prior, cujus es Prior? à quo habes curam tam extrinsecam quam intrinsecam, in hac ecclesia de qua loquimur de Wymundham?" Et ille; "Domine pater, à vestra paternitate." Tunc Abbas persecutus est quod cœperat. "Si à me habet Prior nomen Prioris, et officium meum est quicquid possidet, meum est hominibus illi creditis, in justitia non deesse: meum in omnibus defectum Prioris supplere. Et hujus rei argumentum est annuæ markæ solutio; quam etsi in signum subjectionis solvit, aut nomine suo, aut nomine Ecclesiæ solvit. Quod nomine ecclesiæ solvit, patet, quia successivè solvit. Et si nomine ecclesiæ solvit, subjecta est ecclesiæ quæ solvit illi cui solvit. Si illam visitaturus advenero, mora mea non est taxanda vel dierum vel equorum numero. Quia Ricardus cujus tempore ecclesia de Wymundham in patrimonium S. Albani devoluta est, nec tredecim equorum numero contentus est, vel unius noctis hospitio veniens, nec alterius noctis recedens: neque cæteri qui nos præcesserunt Abbates. Alioquin unius diei spatio, non poterunt nobis a Wymundham detegere secreta cordis sui cuncti fratres nostri: quorum salus spiritualis pendet à consilio nostro. Ea propter oportet sapientem animarum medicum expectare et reexpectare; ut quod prima non poterit, secunda, vel tria, vel aliis sequentibus diebus, mederi valeat. Oportet enim sanctos et mundos esse, qui acceptam Deo hostiam pro animabus antecessorum vestrorum et omnium fidelium, sunt oblaturi. Clamant enim ad nos, et præcipuè quos in hoc mundo habuerunt speciales." Tunc comes iratus nimis, et furore solito actus, ait: "Quod dicis nunquam fuit, nunquam erit, quamdiu cingulo militari accinctus fuero." Surgensque invectus furia, infecto colloqui negotio, recessit. Porro abbas ad sua rediens, et apud Wymundham moram faciens, quantum res noviter emersa exigebat; Harpesburgum ire disposuit. Quod comitem non latuit. Et mittens apparitores, de quorum crudelitate magis confidebat, et impetu præsumebat; fidei interpositione astrictos adjuravit, ne permitterent abbatem portas de Harpesburc intrare vel quempiam de suis. Quod quidem factum est. Veniens quidem abbas cum suis illuc, non est permissus intrare. Quamobrem communicato cum suis consilio, misit sæpe dictum fratrem Nicholaum, ad comitem Legriæ qui præerat (ut dictum est) causis cognoscendis in Angliā: et in auribus illius quærimoniam injuriarum à Comite illatarum, deposuit. Et citatorias meruit ad Præsidentem provinciae, quibus Comitem jam dictum citaret. Ut copiam sui et omnium fautorum in facto qui interfuerant illatæ abbati sancti Albani injuriæ apud Harpesburc faceret apud Northamptonam, die statuto responsurus abbati, super violentia, ut quærebatur sibi illata. Citatus itaque comes venit Northamptonam; et ante litis contestationem mediantibus qui utramque partem diligebant, promisit Comes se satisfacturum Abbati super violentia ad gratum ipsius in ecclesia de Wymundham: tamen Comiti Legriæ supplicaret, quatenus ejus interveniret licentia. Fidemque suorum interposuit: quod sine malo dolo pacto staret. Impetrata est ergo ab Abbate licentia: et veniens Norfolkiā Abbas, Comitis expertus dolum, infecto rediit negotio. Iterata est itaque querimonia ad Judicem Angliæ; et citatio similiter iterata. Convenerunt ergo Londoniæ: ibique iterata est pacis prolocutio, et in chyrographum redacta, ne Comes pro altero verbo ut consueverat resiliret. Iterum Abbas Norfolkiā rediit, infecto negotio; Comite non exhibente chirographi testimonium. Et tunc tandem confugit ad ecclesiasticæ justitiæ remedium. Sanctus enim Tho. Doroberniensis archiepiscopus, comitem citavit, et utraque pars copiam sui fecit die statuto coram se et Comite Legriæ. Abbate itaque allegante rhethoricè (utpote vir nobilis et urbanæ eloquentiæ) de damnis et injuriis illatis, de dilationibus frustratoriis: Comes patuit discrimini anathematis. Sed detulit ei abbas, ex consilio optimatum regni. Dicebant enim quòd si Comes percelleretur anathemate, ecclesia de Wymundham, occasione ipsa quæ sub alis patrocini ejus latitabat, grave pateretur dispendium. Proinde adhuc tractabatur, efficacius: de pace reformanda inter ipsos, et in eum casum deventum est, quòd comes carta sua confirmare debuit ecclesiæ de Wymundham, quicquid ei pater suus de suis prædiis concesserat. Et quia hoc verbum captiosum erat, abbas sæpius mediatoribus reformandæ pacis, dixit: "Si recesserimus ab hoc Consistorio, in hoc verbo Comes cartam patris sui sibi exhibere exiget; ut secundum formam Cartæ condatur. Ideo nolo vos latere, quod temporibus primi H. regis Angl. Monasteriis sive Ecclesiis Conventualibus noviter institutis, non exigebatur alia Carta nisi solius regis. Nullus enim prævalebat illis diebus congregationes in regno Angl. instituere, nisi ex regis permissione. Regis enim intercedat permissio, nisi patronus in manu resignaret ipsum monasterium vel ecclesiam, ut de cætero nulli nisi soli Regi, responderet de temporalibus. Inde contigit quòd aliam cartam quàm regis, nunquam (ut aliqui affirmant) habuimus de ecclesia de Wymundham. Proinde si Comes voluerit confirmare monasterio de Wymundham omnia quæ in regis carta continentur, et præterea, alia quæque bonorum testimonio virorum sunt collata à patre suo prædicto Monasterio de Wymundham; omnem injuriam ei remitto; et quicquid restitutionis ab eo exigo; atque insuper, quadraginta marcarum summam donabo." Hoc dicebat abbas, ut ambitione simul et paupertate refertum Comitem, muneribus obcæcasset; et de cætero, quia præ manibus non habebat Cartas omnium quæ possidebat monasterium pro quo contendebat. Mediantibus igitur Gaufrido de Magnavilla juniore, scilicet Comite de Essexia, et Ricardo de Lucy, et aliis utriusque partis amicis, in hunc modum reformata est pax inter tam discordes viros. Comesque cartam suam fecit, et per sacramentum virorum in corde et corde loquentium, excepit ecclesiam de Resinges, et nonnullas decimationes, quæ quidem in carta regis continebantur; sed è monachis de Wymundham nunquam corporaliter possessæ fuerant; et idcirco amicitia, ut putabatur, reformata, simulatè est concepta, non in veritate solidata. Comes quidem rubore suffusus est non modico, quòd in tanto discrimine victus est à viro mediocri, et qui invincibiles edomuit, à simplici se victum confitebatur. Unde semper Comes postea cautè seria commutans in jocosa ait, "Per lanceam Dei, nomen tuum de cætero mutabitur, et vocaberis Robertus Mafelton: nomen adeptus, et tenens, ab effectu."

UNIVERSIS præsentibus literas inspecturis, Martinus decanus Londoniensis, R. archidiaconus Middlesexiae, et Magister de Arcubus, gerens vices episcopi Roffensis, salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra, quòd cum mota esset controversia coram nobis auctoritate literarum domini papæ inter venerabilem patrem Thomam episcopum Norwicensem ex una parte, et de Binham et de Wymundham priores ex altera; super obedientia et reverentia dicto episcopo à prædictis prioribus ratione parochialium ecclesiarum quas habent in episcopatu suo præstanda; et super visitatione, procuracione, et ordinatione vicariarum in eisdem ecclesiis. Tandem interveniente consensu et voluntate domini Norwicensis episcopi, et prioris et capituli Norwicensis, et domini abbatis sancti Albani et ipsius capituli, et dictorum priorum de Binham et de Wymundham, et ipsorum similiter conventus; in forma perpetuæ pacis inter partes, auctoritate nostra sub forma subscripta amicabiliter est compositum; videlicet, quod prædicti priores de Binham et de Wymundham præsentabuntur episcopo Norwicensi, qui pro tempore erit, et eidem facient canonicam obedientiam, et ad synodum venient, vel procuratorem aut excusatorem literatoriè mittent, et inter alios priores sedebunt. Habitu tamen itineris non mutato nisi valent; videlicet, in cappis et calcaribus, Item convenit, quod vicarii ad præsentationem dictorum priorum, instituuntur per episcopum in singulis ecclesiis parochialibus, quas habent dicti priores in episcopatu Norwicensi. Videlicet, in ecclesiis parochialibus de Wymundham, de Binham, de Sneatesham, de Dersingham, et Hapesburge, quos vicarios ad dictas ecclesias præsentatos episcopus Norwicensis pro tempore sine difficultate aliqua admittet; ita videlicet, quod taxationi vicariarum in ecclesiis de Hapesburge et de Sneatesham, jam factæ, stet. Vicariæ autem ecclesiæ de Dersingham, erit vij. marcarum in obventionibus altaris, secundum justam æstimationem bonorum virorum et juratorum de capitulo. In ecclesiis de Binham et de Wymundham ita fiat æstimatio vicariarum, quòd considerata æstimatione quæ facta fuit tempore vicesimæ assignabatur sexta pars illius æstimationis, in obventionibus alteragiorum perpetuis vicariis in dictis ecclesiis et episcopo pro tempore instituendis, vel octava pars æstimationis in certis portionibus illarum ecclesiarum de novo faciendæ, per viros fide dignos et juratos de capitulo. Ita quod episcopus inde habeat optionem. Item convenit quod pro visitationibus in prædictis ecclesiis parochialibus, ab episcopo vel ejus misso annuatim faciendis, habeat episcopus de Prioratu de Binham viginti solidos, et de Prioratu de Wymundham quadraginta solidos, per annum, in Synodo Paschali Norwicensi. Et facta est compositio, ita quod occasione ejusdem, non derogetur privilegiis Monachorum Sancti Albani in aliquibus aliis articulis salvo etiam jure cujuslibet alterius, et salva sit domino abbati sancti Albani, potestas excessus monachorum corrigendi et amovendi, et substituendi Priores: secundum quod viderit expedire secundum regulam sancti Benedicti, et ordinis sui institutionem. Ad majorem autem securitatem, una cum sigillis nostris apposita sunt presenti Scripto sigilla Episcopi et Conventus Norwicensis, et Abbatis et Conventus Sancti Albani, et Priorum de Bingham et de Wymundham et eorum Conventuum. pore fuerit, qui integre omnes prædictas decimas percipiet imperpetuum; salvis Priori qui pro tempore fuerit decimis domini sui in dicta parochia quas ante percipere non consuevit. Idem vero elemosinarius percipiet decimas de tenementis omnium terrarum in Carta domini S. episcopi quam inde habemus contentarum, exceptis decimis domini nostri in dicta parochia. Est autem nostra Ordinatio talis quod dictus elemosinarius inveniet de prædictis decimis in quinque festivitibus beatæ Virginis Mariæ, scilicet, in Natali Domini, in festo Purificationis, in festo Annunciationis Dominicæ, in festo Assumptionis, in festo Nativitatis ejusdem, in qualibet dictarum festivitatum pro die quindecim sol. ad pascendum trescentos pauperes, ita quod unusquisque percipiat unum obolum, vel valorem unius oboli in pane et companagio: et in Nativitate beati Johannis Baptistæ quinque sol. ad pascendum centum pauperes, ita quod unusquisque habeat unum obolum vel valorem prædictum; et ad inveniendum unum cereum jugiter ardentem ante ymaginem beatæ Mariæ ad magnum altare quinque marcas, salvo tamen lumine cereorum et lampadum qui ibi solebant ardere, ita quod in nullo dictum lumen minuatur vel subtrahatur; et ad inveniendum annuatim quatuor tunicas de blancheto in conventu duodecim sol.; et ad augmentum mandati de cene sex sol. ita quod unusquisque monachus habeat duos pauperes; et ad perficiendum Anniversarium domini W. prioris nostri in conventu solempniter qui dictam ecclesiam adquisivit unam marcam; et ad pascendum ducentos pauperes in dicto anniversario decem sol. ita quod unusquisque pauperum percipiat unum obolum, vel valorem prædictum. Dictus siquid elemosinarius omnes decimas de prædictis tenementis percipiet præterquam de dominio prædicto et omnia præscripta plene inveniet. Totum autem residuum de prædictis decimis cedat in usus pauperum per manus prædicti elemosynarii. Et ut hæc nostra concessio, donatio, attornatio, ac cartæ nostræ confirmatio perpetuæ firmitatis robur optineat presenti scripto sigillum capituli nostri una cum sigillo venerabilis patris nostri, domini Johannis prædicti duximus apponendum. Istam concessionem, donationem, attornationem, et ordinationem conservantibus sit pax, gloria, et vita perpetua. Et si qui quod absit sint contradictores, rebelles, vel impeditores, vel qui subtraxerint vel minuerint prædicta de perpetrata malitia et iniquitate in extremo examine se reos noscant, ac omnipotentis Dei, et gloriosæ Virginis, ac omnium sanctorum et nostram indignationem incurrant.

ULTERIUS, quia in jam dictis fit mentio etiam aliqualis, quomodo Ecclesia de Wymundham subtracta erat ab obedientia abbatis Johannis septimi, erectaque de Cella in Abbathiam: ideo, ut id, quod prius dicebatur in tenebris, jam dicatur in lumine, declareturque paulisper expresse magis, quare Cella dicta à præfati Abbatis recessit gubernatione: subjungendus est de materia illa hic processus modicus, in posterorum notitiam, et pro certiori recordatione veritatis. Et est Processus illius tenor talis:

Procurante illo inimico homine, qui de more solet zizania sive lolium super triticum seminare, succrescebat jamdudum in agro abbatis Johannis septimi illa paradella invidiæ, quæ in suum causabatur archidiaconum oblique oculos deflectere, excogitareque vias, modos, et media, quibus posset eum depellere extra monasterium, ac sic à sua præsentia remove. Quod enim Petro Paulus fuerat, quando non recte secundum evangelium ambulabat, hoc illi erat ipse [abbatis nimirum] archidiaconus, quotiens conspexit eum se aliter regere, quam suæ conveniebat statui dignitatis. Fastidiens igitur propter hanc causam præsentiam suam, quæsivit quotidie occasiones, quomodo, sive per quod medium, posset de monasterio depellere eum. Trahens igitur claustrum subpriorem, astutum virum et subtilem, sibi in concilium, cum ipso seorsum ad partem consuluit, quid pro hoc expediendo negotio aptius, cautius, sive efficacius peragendum esset. Qui plus callidus, quam caritativus, in se subsistens, consuluit, ut privatas faceret instantias apud priorem de Wymundham, virum protunc parumper vetulum, solidum tamen, sobrium et valde religiosum, quatinus ipse, propter senectutis incommoda, suo beneficio cederet, rediretque iterum ad monasterium, ac ibidem sub umbra alarum suarum commaneret, asserens, se posse, hac capta opportunitate, colorate satis suum archidiaconum de monasterio depellere, occulereque cautius odii venenum latens, ac suum pro voto propositum promovere. Acquiescens igitur Abbas hiis conciliis, quamquam perfidis, suggessit dicto priori, ut cederet, eoque cedente, vocavit ad se præfatum archidiaconum, taliterque ei inquit: "Ecce jam vacat beneficium pro viro litterato multum conveniens. Habeas igitur ipsum in tuam promotionem, et ad non modicam exaltationem tui honoris." Rememorans melius præfatus archidiaconus, sui superioris vultum non multum esse sibi benevolum, nec spem habere aliquam, ut illum imposterum ullo tempore cerneret lætorem, gratanter illud beneficium admisit, illucque gradiens, ipsum satis egregie gubernavit. Vix tamen ibidem per anni permansit dimidium, quin ei primo abbas litteras mandatorias, ad visitandum locum dictum, tam in capite quam in membris, transmitteret, deinde cum in negotio illo non multum juxta intentum proficeret, dirigeret illi ulterius revocatorias, ipsumque redire iterum ad monasterium districtius demandaret. Quod audiens patronus loci illius, miles protunc probus et potens, in divitiisque præ aliis maxime habundans in partibus illis, consuluit, ut ad juris beneficium recurreret, provocationeque communiret se ac appellatione, quousque ipse de remedio in ea parte congruo provideret. Quo sibi obtemperante, mox billam supplicatorem ad sedem direxit apostolicam, tandemque ibidem optinuit, licet pro viribus abbas se opponeret, ut ecclesia dicta, quæ prius serva fuerat et ancilla, sub servituteque subjectionis abbatis sancti Albani per trecentos permanserat annos et ultra, fieret posterius filia libere, ac etiam domina in honore, sponsumque haberet in rectorem qui gauderet nomine abbatis, omnibusque illis etiam insigniis, quæ requiruntur ad statum et gradum abbatialis dignitatis. Cujus libertationis sive manumissionis processus in forma et modo, quibus registratur apud fratres loci illius, hic jam subsequitur. Et est ipsius registrationis tenor talis.

Ad perpetuam hominum notitiam deducimus per præsentem, quomodo vir magnanimus et ingenuus dominus Andreas Ogard miles, hujusque monasterii patronus, sinceræ devotionis pulsatus affectu, quin verius instinctu spiritus almi, ac sacratissimæ Virginis Mariæ cooperante virtute, non modicis nedum ingenii laboribus, sed gravibus et permaximis procuravit expensis hujus ecclesiæ libertatem, juxta celebris memoriæ intencionem piam et primariam Willelmi de Albineyo, fundatoris nostri, prout expresse ejusdem liquet in carta, videlicet ut de prioratu locus iste fieret Abbatia, adeo quod qui olim sub subjectionis servitute mansit abbatis monasterii sancti Albani, jam deinceps liberis gauderet habenis, et ab omni subjectionis jugo solutus staret penitus et exemptus. Pro cujus efficacissima rei expeditione, primo serenissimo et illustrissimo regi Angliæ Henrico sexto, anno sui regni vicesimo septimo, suæ intencionis causam exposuit, quam benigno animo gratis audiens, gratioque favore suscipiens, rei licitæ continuo præbebat assensum et licentiam, opem simul et operam, pro perquirendis Bullis a summo pontifice, per suas patentes litteras concessit gratiose. Qua re sic peracta, patronus nuntium cum causa alacriter direxit ad sacrosanctæ sedis gratiam, ubi materiam patrono liculento^a peroravit sermone, quam diligenti perpendens animo sanctissimi prudentia patris, causamque exponentis hinc inde suo altissimo verberans et ventilans concilio, nilque in materia reperiens, quod sacris ecclesiæ aut religionis officeret institutis, nilque honestis obvivum^b moribus, quin potius ex voto divini obsequii cultus augeretur, contemplantium quies effloresceret, et inter cætera monasterii respublica per temporum decursus non modica commodi et profectuum acquireret incrementa. Quid plura? Hiis et aliis exquisite rimatis matureque pensatis, summus pontifex pro ejusdem rei complemento et expletionem efficaci suas annuebat bullas, magna sensus sedulitate contextas, quas nuncius hilari suspiciens mente, non segni pede, non torpenti calce, ad Angliæ confines repedavit, et secundis velis ad portum feliciter applicuit. Moxque patroni præsentiam adiens, expeditæ rei negotium per ordinem explicavit, et papale indultum pro certitudinis signo suis manibus præsentavit, qui læto corde suscipiens, gratias altissimo et beatæ genitrici reddidit multiformes. Dein summa celeritate bullas executioni demandavit, quæ postquam fuerant ad hoc Monasterium devolutæ, et reverentia, qua decuit, admissæ, non longa temporis respiratione res suum serenum sortita est finem, modo, forma, et ordine, ut scriptoris calamus absque fuco mendacii in subsequentibus enodabit.

ANNO Domini millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo nono, mense Novembri, festo sancti Lini papæ et martyris, dieque Martis, ad executionis ministerium peragendum, apostolicarum videlicet litterarum, aderant venerabiles Robertus miseratione divina Gradensis episcopus et reverendi domini Norwicensis suffraganeus, magister Johannes Wygynhale decretorum doctor et ejusdem episcopi vicarius generalis in spiritualibus, magister Symon sæpedicti patris adtunc registrator, magister Godfredus Joy notarius publicus, et ad hoc officium specialiter requisitus, nonnullique alii administratores, cum notabili testium multitudine, tam forinsecorum quam indigenarum nobilium et simplicium adtunc assistentium. Hora decima, suffraganeo pontificali induto, et missa cum nota solempniter inchoata, magister Stephanus London. tunc prior chorum revestitus ingressus est, ad quem, post evangelii officium, accesserunt dompnus Thomas Mikkelfeld subprior, et dompnus Willelmus Westegate, capis induti, qui Priorem præfatum usque ad summi gradus altaris religioso progressu deduxerunt. Quo peracto, cœpit registrator prælibatus elevata voce Cartam Regis latino sermone omnibus circumstantibus perlegere, ac deinde sacratissimi patris bullam, quarum vir altæ discretionis, et morum gravitate pollens, vicarius generalis domini episcopi memorati vulgari eloquio succincte ac perlucide omnibus explicavit. Qua declaratione, ut præmittitur, exquisite cômpleta, prælibatus venerabilis in Christo pater suffraganeus inceptum benedictiones ministerium devote adimplevit; Prioremque sæpedictum benedixit, et virtute bullarum præfecit in Abbatem. Tandem officio missæ totaliter terminato, mox suffraganeus Abbatem duxit in chorum in stallosque posuit, dein ad capitulum se divertebant cum confratribus regulariter prosequentibus, necnon et aliis jurisperitis, et magistro Godfredo Joye notario publico, ad hoc specialiter requisito instantius et rogato, cum sufficienti generosorum testimonio, Willelmo Roys, Nicholao Applyerde, et Johanne Brygis, quo confratres canonice, obnixæ, et religiose eidem Abbati regularem obedientiam impendebant. Et hiis peractis, ad loca refectionis ilico properabant. Postea tamen, temperato mentis stomacho, materiam patronus ruminans, vidensque validos adversantium ventos, suæ intentionis satagentes radicem evellere, regem mox adiit, suæque infestationis causam proposuit, cavens omnino, ne levi malignantium flatu everteretur, quod maximis pridem sudoribus et sumptibus super sanæ intentionis firmaverat petram. Cujus querelam rex serenissimus docta discretionem perpendens, pro oportuno remedio concito providebat, suas sanctissimo patri destinans litterarum apices, super inquietudine et multifario gravamine, per venerabilem patrem Johannem Stoke, adtunc Abbatem Monasterii Sancti Albani, partem adversantem præcipitanter irrogatis, contra intentionem piam patroni memorati, supplicique precatu flagitans, quatinus sua priora indulta de erectione abbatiali novis confirmationis scripto et sigillo infrangibiliter roboraret. Quas sanctissimus universalis ecclesiæ præsul gravis mente conspiciens, vota et instantias, quæ litteris petiit, apostolico præfecit scripto, roborans et ratificans, de novoque priores bullas confirmans, adeo quod prorsus litis sedavit materiam, et ora malignantium coercionis freno imperpetuum per silentium colligavit. Deinde non segniter operam apicibus perquisitis patronus exhibens, episcopum Norwycensem adiit, Bullasque eidem patefecit, qui sincero sensu discernens et advertens, quomodo apostolicarum fuerat litterarum cum suis collegis in illa parte conjunctis præcipuus executor, protinus, ut decuit et debuit, executorialem exercuit potestatem, primoque in Convocatione cleri London. in capitulo ecclesiæ sancti Pauli, seipso tunc ibidem præsidente, commissarioque archipræsulis Cantuariensis existente, die sanctæ Katerinæ coram notariis authenticis legi declararique mandavit, et hora, modo, et forma congruis et canonicis statuit promulgari. Consequenter ad Crucem Sancti Pauli per quendam fratrem ordinis Minorum, in theologia bachalaureum, N. N. easdem Bullas insinuari, exponique publice jussit et aperte, non modica plebis multitudine ad sermonem tunc temporis confluentem, prout suæ litteræ sub patenti sigillo perlucide manifestavit. Postremo vero in cimiterio ecclesiæ Christi Norwycensis monasterii, quia vulgariter dicitur Greneyard, per venerabilem virum magistrum Johannem Molet, sacræ paginæ professorem, et ejusdem ecclesiæ commonachum, papalia indulta cum cartis regiis fuerant luculento sermone populo circumstanti distinctius expressa pariter et ostensa. Hæc acta fuerunt prout supra memorantur in annis Domini millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo octavo, quadragesimo nono, et quinquagesimo; et annis regni regis Henrici sexti xxvi. xxvii. et xxviii.

[Pat. 27 H. VI. p. ii. n. 12.]

REX omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis ad quos præsentem literæ pervenerint salutem. Sciatis quod cum nos per quandam supplicationem nobis ex parte dilecti et fidelis nostri Andreæ Ogard militis, nunc patroni prioratus beatæ Mariæ de Wymondham præsentatam, intelligentes qualiter quidam Willielmus Daubeney, pro salute animæ inclyti progenitoris nostri Henrici primi quondam regis Angliæ, et hæredum suorum, ac pro salute animarum ipsius Willielmi et uxoris suæ, necnon omnium consanguineorum suorum, fundabat prioratum prædictum, ac ordinavit quod quandocunque contingeret prioratum illum de priore fore destitutum, monachi ibidem commorantes quendam de conventu suo sibi in priorem eligerent, et ipsum fundatori suo, pro concensu suo electionis illius habendo præsentarent, et ipsum fore perpetuum, nisi causam rationabilem demonstraret quare taliter eligi non deberet; idemque fundator ordinavit, quod abbas de sancto Albano pro tempore existens, annuatim in primo festo sancti Albani a præfatis monachis ibidem unam marcam argenti solummodo recipiet in signum obedientiæ eidem abbati faciendæ, quousque prioratus prædictus abbatia factus foret, et quod omnes aliæ res, et commoditates prioratus illius ad usum monachorum ibidem remanerent, quodque dictus fundator potestatem habuit per concessionem Ricardi nuper abbatis et conventus monasterii sancti Albani, abbatiam de prioratu prædicto, tempore quo sibi placeret, facere et ordinare, et quod primus abbas ibidem constituendus per regem, vel per fundatorem prædictum, de monachis apud Wymondham inhabitantibus eligeretur, ad quod tempus prioratus ille, cum abbatia sic factus fuerit, à subjectione et obedientia, ac à dicta marca argenti liber foret et exoneratus, prout per cartam fundatoris prædicti, ac per literas nostras de exemplificatione inde confectas, plenius poterit apparere.

Prædictusque Andreas metuebat per frequentem amotionem bonarum, honestarum, et bene regularum personarum ab occupatione prioris ibidem, ac per constitutionem aliarum personarum in occupatione illa, prout per diversa tempora præterita, contra formam intentionem et ordinationem fundatoris prædicti usitatum extitit, bona prioratus prædicti devastari, et de verisimili prioratum illum ac divina servitia ibidem quod absit, adnihilari penitus, et diminui, decimo die Aprilis ultimo præterito, præmissorum consideratione, de gratia nostra speciali concesserimus et licentiam dederimus præfato Andreae, quod ipse bullas à sanctissimo patre nostro tunc papa, ad abbatiam de prioratu prædicto, juxta intentionem dicti primi fundatoris, faciendam, impetrare valeret, et quod quandocunque abbatia illa de abbate destituta foret, conventus ejusdem loci pro tempore existens, quandam habilem personam de se ipsis in abbatem ibidem, quotiens opus fuerit, et necesse, eligere posset, et ipsum præfato Andreae et hæredibus suis præsentare, ad assensum suum electioni illi præbendum, absque hoc, quod ille, vel illi causam rationabilem demonstrare posset vel possent, quod taliter eligi non deberet, prout tenor cartæ dicti primi fundatoris plane declarat.

Quodque præfatus Andreas, ac conventus de Wymondham, bullas prædictas, cum impetratæ forent, cum omnibus clausulis legitimis hujusmodi promotioni expedientibus recipere, legere, pronunciare, declarare, et in executionem ponere possent, absque impetitione, perturbatione vel gravamine quocunque nostri vel hæredum nostrorum, justiciariorum, vicecomitum, escaetorum seu aliorum officiariorum, seu ministrorum nostrorum, vel hæredum nostrorum quorumcunque, aliquo statuto, actu, ordinatione, restrictione, proclamatione, seu aliqua alia re, materia, vel causa in contrarium facta vel facienda non obstante, prout in literis nostris patentibus inde confectis plenius continetur. Jamque idem Andreas nobis monstraverit certas bullas papales, quarum tenor sequitur in hæc verba:

Cum autem, sicut eadem petitio continebat, in præfato prioratu numerus monachorum satis habundet, ac inibi in divinis laudabiliter deserviat, pro parte dicti Andreae veri ejusdem prioratus patroni, nobis fuit humiliter supplicatum, ut dictum prioratum in Monasterium erigere, necnon conventum et abbatialem dignitatem inibi instituere, ac de persona dilecti filii Stephani London. ipsius prioratus prioris, magistri in theologia, ad nominationem dicti Andreae præfato erigendo monasterio providere, ipsumque illi in abbatem præficere, aliasque in præmissis opportunè providere, de benignitate apostolica dignaremur: nos igitur, qui divinum cultum ubique vigere et augeri summis affectibus desideramus, hujusmodi supplicationibus inclinati, prioratum ipsum ad laudem Dei et beatæ Mariæ, hujusmodi ad monasterium præsentium tenore reducimus, ac conventum et abbatialem dignitatem instituimus. Ita quod

Et nihilominus personam dicti Stephani de præfato monasterio beatæ Mariæ eadem autoritate providemus, ipsumque illi præficimus in abbatem; curam, regimen, et administrationem dicti monasterii beatæ Mariæ sibi in spiritualibus et temporalibus plenariè committendo. Mandantes dilectis filiis conventui præfati monasterii, quatinus eidem Stephano obedientiam et reverentiam, necnon vasallis et aliis subditis suis, ut consueta servitia et jura teneantur et debeant exhibere, alioquin sententiam sive pœnam quam ipse Stephanus abbas ritè tulerit in rebelles, ratam habebimus et faciemus auctore domino usque ad satisfactionem condignam inviolabiliter observari. Et insuper eidem Stephano, ut à quocunque maluerit catholico antistite gratiam et communionem sedis apostolicæ habente, munus benedictionis recipere, ipsique antistiti, ut illud sibi liberè et licitè impendere possit, concedimus per præsentem. Per hoc autem venerabili fratri nostro episcopo Norwicensi, cui monasterium ipsum ordinario jure subesse volumus, nullum intendimus imposterum præjudicium generari.

Præterea dictum monasterium beatæ Mariæ à solutione ejusdem marcæ, necnon ab omne jurisdictione, superioritate, dominio, et potestate abbatis et conventus dicti monasterii S. Albani prorsus et omnino eximimus et perpetuo liberamus. Ita quod abbas et conventus prædicti, nullam ponendi, aut removendi priorem, aut monachos dicti monasterii beatæ Mariæ, prout antea consueverunt, habeant potestatem, nec marcam hujusmodi petere, vel exigere quomodo præsumant. Volumus autem quod tam Stephanus, quam successores dicti monasterii beatæ Mariæ abbates pro tempore existentes, omnibus prerogativis, privilegiis, honoribus, immunitatibus, et insigniis, quibus aliqui dicti ordinis monasteriorum abbates, in partibus illis in genere gaudent, et utuntur, uti valeant pariter et gaudere.

Et insuper dicto Andreae et hæredibus et successoribus suis, quotiens et quando ipsum monasterium beatæ Mariæ vacare contigerit, jus præsentandi personam in abbatem per conventum dicti monasterii prius electam, loci ordinario, qui ipsam absque rationabili causa recusare non possit, sed illam confirmare perpetuò debeat et teneatur, eadem auctoritate reservamus, concedimus et assignavimus; decernentes irritum et inane, quicquid in contrarium à quoquam, quavis auctoritate scienter vel ignoranter contigerit attemptari. Non obstantibus præmissis, ac constitutionibus, et ordinationibus apostolicis, necnon privilegiis indultis et literis specialibus, vel generalibus monasterii Albani seu illius abbatibus et conventui sub quovis tenore, per sedem apostolicam, vel ejus legatos, et præsertim per Othonem et Octobonum olim in partibus illis præfatæ sedi legatos, seu alios quomodolibet concessis, etiam si de illis specialem et expressam oporteret facere de verbo ad verbum mentionem, et quibus in genere non intelligitur esse derogatum nisi in specie derogetur, ac statutis et consuetudinibus monasteriorum, et ordinis prædictorum juramento, confirmatione apostolica, vel quavis alia firmitate roboratis, cæterisque contrariis quibuscunque. Quibus omnibus, illorum tenores, atque formas præsentibus pro expressis habentes specialiter et expresse hac vice duntaxat derogamus.

Et insuper ut præsentem literæ ad debitum perducantur effectum, venerabili fratri nostro Norwicensi episcopo, et dilectis filiis abbatibus Westmonasterien. et sancti Edmundi de Burgo, Londinens. et Norwycens. dyocesis, mandamus, quatinus ipsi vel duo, aut unus eorum, per se, vel per alium seu alios, abbati et conventui monasterii beatæ Mariæ prædicti cum efficacia defensionis præsidio assistentes, eos non permittant, per abbatem et conventum dicti monasterii sancti Albani, aut quoscunque alios quavis auctoritate fungentes, super præmissis, quomodolibet molestari; contradictores per censuram ecclesiasticam appellatione postposita compescendo, invocato ad hoc, si opus fuerit, auxilio brachii sæcularis, non obstantibus omnibus supradictis. Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostrorum reductionis, institutionis, provisionis, perfectionis, commissionis, concessionis, intentionis, exemptionis, liberationis, voluntatis, reservationis, concessionis, assignationis, constitutionis, derogationis, et mandati infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare præsumpserit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei, et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus se noverit incursum. Datum Romæ, apud sanctam Pontentianam^a anno incarnationis Dominicæ millesimo quadringentisimo octavo xvj. kalendas Octobris, anno pontificatus nostri secundo, prout in bullis prædictis plenius continetur.

Quas quidem bullas prædictas Andreas de eodem sanctissimo patre nostro papa, virtute, ac vigore licentiæ nostræ prædictæ optinuit. Quarum bullarum prætextu, prioratus prædictus in monasterium reducit, ac prædictus Stephanus London. nuper prior ejusdem loci, in abbatem ibidem, cum omnibus in hac parte necessariis, et dependentibus efficitur. Monastery of Binham,

IN

NORFOLK.

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Alban.

FROM the foundation charter of Binham it should seem that Peter de Valoniis, or Valoines, thenephew of King William the Conqueror, and Albreda his wife, began the construction, if not the endowment, of a cell here, subordinate to St. Albans abbey, toward the close of the eleventh century. Indeed, Matthew Paris expressly notices the existence of this cell in the time of abbat Paul, who died in 1093.^a The foundation, however, was not completed, nor the convent finally endowed, till some time in the reign of Henry the First: probably about the year 1104. Richard abbat of St. Benet of Hulm, one of the witnesses to the charter of Peter de Valoines, was not elected to that office till after 1101; and Robert abbat of St. Edmunds, another of the witnesses, died in 1106 or 1107.^b

The church of Binham, dedicated to St. Mary, was to be subjected to St. Alban's abbey in the same manner in which the church of St. Pancras at Lewes was subordinate to the great abbey of Cluny in France; paying annually, on St. Alban's day, to the parent monastery, a mark of silver. The abbat of St. Albans was allowed once a year to stay at Binham for eight days, but not longer, unless invited by the Prior; and the abbat was at such times to have only thirteen horses in his train. The monks of St. Albans who were to be constantly maintained at Binham were not to be fewer in number than eight, and the heirs and successors of the founder were to remain patrons and protectors of the cell.

Peter de Valoines endowed his foundation with the manor of Binham, two parts of his tithes in Dersingham and Ingulnesthorp, and the tithes of the manors of Riburg, Snaring, Toftes, Testurtun, Riburg Parva, Wodedalling,

Saxelyngham, Walsingham, Berney, Babingley, Apeltone, and Patesley.^a

These gifts were confirmed in other charters by Roger de Valoines the son of Peter;^b by Peter de Valoines the son of Boger;^c and by Robert the son of the second Peter.^d An agreement between Herbert bishop of Norwich and the first Peter de Valoines, in 1108, respecting mutual claims in the manors of Binham and Langham, will be found, together with these, in the Appendix.^e

King Henry the First granted to the monks here a market at Binham, to be held on Wednesdays, together with a fair for four days beginning on the vigil of St. Mary, and free warren over all their lands. This charter was recited in and confirmed by another in the 26th of Edw. III.^f

In the 2d of King John a fine was levied, wherein William de Kaien, or Ken, lord of North Greenhou hundred and Wighton, granted to the Prior all customs due to him as lord; and the prior and monks granted in return that the men of Binham should be free from toll in Binham market.^g

The assumed claim of Robert Fitzwalter to the patronage of the cell of Binham, in the reign of John, has been already noticed, together with his claim to the wood of Northaw, in the Account of St. Albans abbey.^h Matthew Paris's detail of the circumstances will be given in his own words in a subsequent page.ⁱ

Here also may be noticed the confirmation of John de Oxford bishop of Norwich of the churches and other possessions of the monastery within his diocese in the sixth year of his pontificate.^k

Pope Innocent IVth, in 1250, confirmed by bull to the monks of Binham the grant of the church of Westley in Cambridgeshire.^l

Reginald de Bacon, in the 46th of Henry III., gave them a moiety of Laringset church:^m and

In the 12th of Edward III. the prior and convent obtained a license to appropriate the church of Berneye.ⁿ

PRIORS of BINHAM.

OSGOD is stated by Blomefield to have been Prior here in 1106.^o He is, no doubt, the same person who, in the charter of the first Peter de Valoines, is called "Osgod presbyter de Binham."

ENISANDUS occurs as Prior before the year 1146.^p

RALPH occurs in 1174.^q

GEOFFREY was Prior in the time of Simon abbat of St. Albans, between 1167 and 1188.^r

PETER occurs in 1 Ric. I., A. D. 1189;^s and subsequently in the time of Garinus abbat of St. Albans, who died in 1193, as well as in the abbacy of John de Cella.^t

RALPH, the second prior of the name, probably RALPH GUBIUN (mentioned as prior in the Binham Register, foll. 126 b, 132), occurs 10 Ric. I., in the abbacy of John de Cella.^u

THOMAS occurs Prior in the 1st and 2d years of K. John:^x and, according to the continuator of Blomefield, again in 1210.^y

RICHARD occurs as prior of Binham in the 16th year of John, A. D. 1214.^z

RICHARD DE PARCO was prior from 1226 to 1244,^a when he removed to the priorate of Timmouth.

RICHARD DE SELFORD, or SELDEFORT, who succeeded in 1244, occurs again in instruments of the 31st, 39th, and 46th of Hen. III.^b

WILLIAM prior of Binham, according to Blomefield's continuator, occurs in the last of these years.^c

RALPH is named Prior in 1261.^d

ADAM DE MOTA occurs Prior in 1264:^e and again in 1267.^f

ⁱ See Num. XI. The following is the detail of Fitzwalter's claim, as entered in the Abbreviatio Placitorum:

"Robertus filius Walteri queritur quod abbas sancti Albani, injuste, et contra cartam quam idem Robertus habet de abbacia sancti Albani, venit ad prioratum de Binham hospitaturus ibi cum pluribus equis et cum pluribus hominibus quam facere debet; et quod ibi ponit plures monachos quam facere debet; et quod talliat homines pertinentes ad Prioratum, et ab eis capit multam pecuniam, desicut non debet habere aliquid de prioratu nisi tantum unam marcam per annum. Dicit etiam quod dum ipse fuit in Hibernia cum domino Rege, ipse [sc. Abbas] contra tenorem predictæ Cartæ amovit Priorem de Binham, qui ibi fuit constitutus per assensum et voluntatem ipsius Roberti, et tantum inde fecit quod pro centum marcis nollet quod domus sua habuisset tantum dampnum quantum habuit per eum.

"Abbas defendit vim, &c. et dicit quod Carta prædicta loquitur de hæredibus Roberti de Valoniis qui non sunt præsentis, et ideo sine eis non vult respondere nisi Curia consideravit."

WILLIAM DE SOMERTON was presented, according to Blomefield's continuator, by Hugh abbat of St. Albans in 1317.^e According to an Instrument which will be found in the Appendix it should rather be in 1319.^f The royal mandate for his arrest, two years after, for refractory conduct toward the parent monastery, will also be found in the Appendix.^g

JOHN DE CAUDEWELL was presented in 1337 by Michael abbat of St. Albans.ⁱ

An accurate account of the state of Binham priory in the 18th Hen. VIII. will be seen in the extracts from Cardinal Wolsey's Book remaining in the Augmentation Office.^g

Sir Richard Rich, one of the visitors under Lord Cromwell, was unwilling at the time of the Dissolution to believe Binham to be a cell to St. Albans. He states that he was in possession of fines and other matters of record levied by the monks of this house, in which the abbat of the parent monastery was not named; and that they also continually granted leases without mentioning his name.^h

Tanner says, about the time of the Dissolution this cell had only six monks. Its revenues were valued, according to Dugdale, at 140*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*: according to Speed, at 160*l.* 1*s.*

The reversion of the site and chief possessions of this house were granted in the 31st of Hen. VIII. to Thomas Paston, Esq. the fifth son of Sir William Paston, Knight. A fresh grant of the site to the same person occurs in the 33d of Henry VIII. Abstracts of both entries from the Repertories to the Originalia in the Exchequer, relating to these grants, will be found in the Note below.ⁱ

Bishop Tanner mentions two REGISTERS of BINHAM PRIORY in the Notitia Monastica: One, as preserved in the Cottonian library Claud. D. XIII. "ex dono dom. Joan. le Gard de Ganton in com. Ebor. qui duxit filiam dom. Thomæ Widdringtoni quem penes extitit Registrum hujus prioratus, A. D. 1652;" the other as Sir William Dugdale's own, "penes autorem Mon. Angl. A. D. 1648." There seems reason, however, to consider these but as one manuscript. The volume which was Sir Robert Cotton's has still the following entry in the first leaf in Dugdale's own hand, "Registrum cartarum prioratus de Binham in agro Norfolciensi. Ex dono Johannis Legard de Ganton in com. Ebor. baronetti:" and it is singular, that, upon collation, every page transcribed in the Monasticon, as from the Register belonging to Sir William Dugdale, answers minutely to the Cottonian manuscript.

The Cottonian volume forms a thick folio; written in a large hand, of the earlier part of the fourteenth century. A synopsis of its more important contents will be found below.^k

^u Blomef. ut supr. Newcome, Hist. St. Albans, p. 354, says, in the third year of abbat Wethamstede's restoration, i. e. 1454, "one Henry Halstede who had formerly been sub-prior to the monastery," [of St. Albans] "but who had gone away from the brethren, and lived in a secular manner for some years, desired to be readmitted; and, with many tears of contrition, tried the compassion of his brethren. At length he promised to rebuild the dormitory at Wymundham, and bestow other benefactions on that Cell, if he could be admitted; and after proof given of his sincerity, he should be happy to be made prior of Binham, now vacant. The abbat interceded in his behalf, that he might procure him a favourable reception; on which he was admitted at Binham, and promoted to be their Prior."

"Norff. rex xv. die Novembris concessit Thomæ Paston scitum nuper priorat. sive monasterii de Bynham, ac etiam maneria de Bynham, Barney, Thirsforde, Walsingham Magna, Darsingham, Welles, Edgefeld, Gunthorpe, et Ryborowe, ac etiam rectorias, &c. de Binham, Barney, et Darsyngham, ac mesuag. &c. in Bynham, Walsyngham Magna, Welles, Edgefeld, Gunthorpe, Lenn Regis, Magna Riboroughe, Parva Riboroughe, Saxlingham, Wighton, Thirsford, Sandryngham, Welles juxta Mare, Ingoldesthorpe, Westley, Barney, et Darsingham, habend. ei et hæredibus suis imperpetuum. ro. xliij." Original. 33 Hen. VIII. p. 3.

Spelman, in his History of Sacrilege, p. 253, says, "Binham priory was granted by King Henry VIII. to Sir Thomas Paston. He left it to Mr. Edward Paston, his son and heir, who, living above eighty years, continued the possession of it till — Caroli R. and having buried — his son and heir apparent, left it then unto his grand-child, Mr. — Paston the third owner of it, and thereby now in the wardship of the king. Mr. Edward Paston, many years since, was desirous to build a mansion-house upon or near the Priory, and attempting for that purpose to clear some of that ground, a piece of wall fell upon a workman, and slew him. Perplexed with this accident in the beginning of this business, he gave it wholly over, and would by no means all his life after be persuaded to re-attempt upon it; but built his mansion-house, a very fair one, at Appleton."

There is an impression of the SEAL of this Priory in the Chapter-House at Westminster: it is of white wax. The subject is the appearance of the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary, who is seated, holding in her left hand a book; over her head a dove descending. The legend is SIGILLVM . ECCL'IE . BE . MARIE . DE . BINHAM. It is appended to a deed, without date, whereby Peter the prior and the convent of Binham grant to Gunnora de Estsexia sixty acres of land, which dame Agnes de Valoniis and Robert de Valoniis her son heretofore had given to them in pure and perpetual alms, in the vill called Westleia; to be holden of the same monks at the rent of five shillings so long as the said Gunnora should live in a secular habit.^a part of the west front, and the transept are remaining. With the exception of the west façade, the whole is in the Norman style, and probably constituted a part of the original structure. The nave and north aisle are at present appropriated as the parish church.

The RUINS of BINHAM PRIORY are considerable. Of the priory church, the nave, the north aisle, the chief

The interior elevation of the nave exhibits three tiers of seven arches on each side: the two lowermost are semi-circular; those in the upper tier are partly semicircular and partly pointed.

The exterior of the west front is wholly in the pointed style, apparently of the fourteenth century. In the lower part are displayed a grand central and two lateral doorways, with blank arcades between. Over the former is a large centre window, originally ornamented with five upright columnar mullions, and three circular compartments of tracery mouldings.

NOTUM sit omnibus tam futuris quam præsentibus, quod ego Petrus de Valoniis et Albreda uxor mea, concedentibus filiis meis Willielmo et Rogero, consilio etiam nepotis mei Walteri, et cæterorum hominum et amicorum meorum, assensu etiam et licentia et per brevem Henrici regis domini mei, et Matildis reginæ, dono et concedo Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et sancto Albano ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ de Binham totumque manerium meum, cum pratis, et silvis, et maresco, et homagio, ita plenè sicut tenueram illud manerium à rege, nihil mihi vel successoribus meis in eodem manerio retinens et reservans nisi divinæ pietatis retributionem; sed volo et concedo, ut hæredes et successores mei sint tutores et defensores ejusdem ecclesiæ et villæ, et non destructores aut aliquo modo vastatores. Quod beneficium et elemosinam specialiter facio pro anima domini mei Willielmi regis qui Angliam adquisivit, qui mihi dedit illud manerium; cujus etiam assensu et licentia hoc opus incepti; et pro anima Matildis reginæ uxoris suæ et Willielmi regis filii sui; et pro salute Henrici regis domini mei et Matildis reginæ uxoris suæ, quorum nutu et licentia istam elemosinam facio et filiorum suorum; et pro meipso et uxore mea et filiis et fratribus et propinquis meis; pro animabus etiam patris et matris meæ, et omnium antecessorum meorum, ex quorum progenie ego exortus sum; et pro Albreda uxore mea et Eudone fratre suo et Rohaysia uxore, et pro animabus antecessorum illorum ex quorum progenie exorti sunt; et pro salute hominum meorum et animabus antecessorum illorum quorum decimas, eorundem nutu, ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Binham tribuo. Concedo etiam eidem ecclesiæ duas partes decimarum mearum in Dersingham et Ingulnesthorp de meo dominio. Et duas partes decimarum militum meorum qui de me terras tenent in Norfolch, assensu quidem et voluntate eorundem. Hæc sunt maneria quorum decimas supradictæ ecclesiæ concedo: Riburg, quod tenet Radulphus Facatus. Et Snaringa et Toftes, quod tenet Ricardus de Spineto ab eodem Radulpho, et Testertuna et Riburg, et Wodedallinga, et Saxelyngham, quæ tenet Thuraldus: Walsingham, quod tenet Humfridus: Berneya, quod tenet Walterus Dapifer: Babingleya, quod tenet Willielmus de Rudham: et Apeltone, quod tenet Turgisius: Patesleya, quod tenet Rogerus.

Quæ omnia dono et nominatim concedo ad servitium ecclesiæ S. Mariæ de Binham. Sciendum est etiam quod prædicti mei milites, cum mortui fuerint, si tamen in Anglia moriantur, apud Binham debent sepeliri, et à monachis honorificè corpora eorum suscipi, et pro eis debet servitium sicut pro fratre devotè fieri, et pars eorum totius suæ substantiæ illorum tantum maneriorum de quibus eadem ecclesia habet decimas, ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ reddi et offerri debet. Ubi cumque etiam moriantur sive sepeliantur, prædicta pars totius suæ substantiæ pro singulis eorum supradictæ ecclesiæ per conventionem reddetur, et à monachis debitum servitium sicut pro fratribus persolvetur, et pro uxoribus et hæredibus eadem conventio ab utraque parte semper in posterum implebitur. Quæ ecclesia sanctæ Mariæ de Binham eo tenore subjicietur ecclesiæ sancti Albani in cella, quo tenore ecclesia sancti Pancratii de Lewis ecclesiæ sancti Petri Cluniacensis est subjecta, redditura per annos singulos ecclesiæ sancti Albani unam marcam argenti et non amplius, et hoc in die festi sancti Albani. Quinimmo, talem libertatem habebit hæc ecclesia per omnia sub ecclesia sancti Albani qualem habet ecclesia sancti Pancratii sub ecclesia Cluniacensi. Abbas etiam ecclesiæ sancti Albani semel in anno apud Binham cum tresdecim equis tantum et non plus per octo dies immorari poterit nisi à priore diutius decenter vel sæpius advocatus fuerit ob ædificationem loci et emendationem monachorum. In qua ecclesia sanctæ Mariæ debent ab abbate sancti Albani ad servitium Dei faciendum octo fratres et non minus jugiter institui. Quod si aliquando quilibet fidelis, sive clericus sive laicus, in eadem ecclesia converti voluerit, et prior illud ecclesiæ expedire aut facultatem posse sufferre persenserit, receptus ad ecclesiam sancti Albani benedicendus et professionem factururus conducatur, et postea ad ecclesiam unde venerat revertatur, nisi instruendus et edocendus aliquandiu ab abbate et favente priore retineatur.

NOTUM sit omnibus fidelibus tam futuris quam præsentibus, quod ego Rogerus de Valoniis patris mei Petri de Valoniis inhærens vestigiis, concessi et confirmavi hac mea carta Deo et sanctæ Mariæ et monachis sancti Albani apud Binham manentibus, consilio amicorum et hominum meorum, ipsam ecclesiam de Binham, totumque manerium, in terris, pratis, silvis, mariscis, pascuis, et homagiis, et terram totam quam pater meus dedit eisdem monachis in Egesfeld, et nemora et warennam quam ipse habuit ex dono regis in eadem villa. Volo etiam et concedo, ut ipsi monachi habeant omnimodas decimas duarum partium dominiorum meorum et omnium militum meorum in Northfolch, quas pater meus eis dedit et concessit, assensu quidem et voluntate eorundem militum, videlicet de Dersingham, et de Hingulvesthorp de meo dominio, et Ryburge, et de alia Parva Ryburg, et Snaringe, et Toftes, et Gestretuna, et Wodedall, et Saxingeham, et Berneya, et Egesfeld, et Babinglee, et Sarebrunne, et Rudham, et Appletone, et Patesle, et Ripetuna.

Concedo insuper prædictis monachis ex meo dono ecclesiam de Dersingham cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, et medietatem ecclesiæ de Walsingham cum cantaria quæ habet Robertus Godchild de monachis sancti Albani, et totam terram quam Humfridus miles meus tenuerat de me in Walsingham cum toto homagio et cæteris omnibus pertinentiis, et totam terram meam de Gunesthorp, et totam terram de Welles de feodo meo quam tenuit Robertus Godchild. De pasturis vero hujusmodi convenientia facta est, ut pasturæ communes essent sicut fuerunt temporibus prædecessorum, videlicet Edwardi regis et Willielmi senioris, et terræ quæ illis temporibus colebantur essent arabiles, et quæ eisdem temporibus incultæ erant jacerent desertæ servata utriusquæ manerii auctoritate. NUM. XI.

De Persecutione Ecclesiæ de Binham per Robertum filium Walteri.

Sublato autem de medio viro piissimo Gulielmo de Sisseverne milite, seneschallo hujus ecclesiæ [S. Albani], subrogatus est loco illius Laurentius de Thebrugge miles, vir eloquens, discretus, et in placitis civilibus providus et circumspectus, et corpore elegantissimus, in senescalciam hujus ecclesiæ. Quem Robertus filius Walteri oderat ab antiquo, ut præactum est, eò quod viriliter steterat contra eum in causa de sylva de Northawe. Contigit tetiam ipso tempore ut abbas Johannes secundum potestatem a Romano pontifice sibi dudum concessam et usitatam, priorem Thomam de Binham invitum amovit, qui erat dicto Roberto amicissimus. Quod molestè ferens Robertus illius ecclesiæ patronus, eo quod ipso irrequisito amotus est Prior memoratus, (quem suum priorem de more appellavit) intumuit iratus valde; et comminabatur auferre illam potestatem abbati, sumens audaciam ab una falsa charta de patronatu ecclesiæ de Binham, in qua continebatur hæc clausula, 'quod non licuit Abbati Priorem amovere inconsulto patrono' vel invito. Porro ipsam contulerat ei suæ fraudis conscius et particeps Gulielmus Pigun, qui moriendo cum stercore suo foetido animam egressit foetidior; de quo supra fit mentio. Unde Robertus, erectus in audaciam, ipsam ecclesiam quasi castrum inclusis monachis hostiliter obsedit impetu repentino; ita quòd monachi nil habentes quod manducarent vel biberent, inedia perituri, necessitate compellente imbres à stillicidiis ut aquam biberent, et panem furfureum quo vix vitam sustentarent, citra satietatem (imò fame potius provocata) sumere certatim cogeantur. Multiplicatis insuper quotidianis convitiis et comminationibus, ab illis qui eos arctabant; jurabant detestabiliter et horribiliter, quod nisi mandatis Roberti domini sui obsecundarent, novum priorem intrusum, quem abbas sancti Albani ibidem contra (ut dicebant) justitiam, et domini sui patroni ipsorum monachorum libertatem, festinanter amoverent. Insuper numerum monachorum usque tresdecim videlicet conventum researent; ipsi postposito timore et habitus reverentia, ipsum priorem primò castrarent, et ad hoc omnes contradictores ignominiosè compellerent. Multiplicatis igitur coram rege super tam enormi, contra domini regis et ecclesiæ pacem, transgressionem; commotus est rex usque ad cordis amaritudinem, jurans per pedes Dei (ut moris habuit) quòd vel ipse vel ille rex foret in Anglia. Rex vero oderat illum, sed occultè; et Robertus Regem, quod et ipsum Regem non latuit. Gavisusque est rex de offensa et culpa Roberti manifesta, ut ultio sequeretur. Et dixit circumstantibus (signans se præ admiratione, vocem cum juramento suo solito iratus exaltando) 'Ho, pro pedibus Dei, quis in tempore pacis in terra Christianorum audivit talia!' Et erat aliquis ibidem de amicis Roberti hoc audiens. Ipso igitur cum stupore et tremore admonente, rapti sunt equis velocibus quidam expeditissimi, qui hoc Roberto et suis complicibus, qui Ecclesiam de Binham obsidebant, et in ea monachos (licet omnes coram eis flecterent genua, et etiam se prosternerent, misericordiam peterent) sine misericordia arctabant, nunciarent; ut protinus cum festinatione ante solis ortum aufugeret. Asserebant enim quòd rex audita de eis gravissima querela, non tantum iratus sed furibundus, sic et sic cum juramento reboavit. Erat autem nox cum illis hæc nunciata fuerant; unde ipsi, tam Robertus qui prope fuit, quam ejus ministri, vix dispositis sarcinis, et equis præ festinatione stratis, subito disparuerunt; et certatim equos calcaribus excitantes, procul aufugerunt. Et ecce ante diei horam tertiam, Regis milites cum servientibus armatis, turbine rapidius avolantes, et apud Binham venientes, illos Regis proditores, et pacis regiæ et ecclesiasticæ infractores, ubinam latuissent clamoris vocibus rogabant. Missi enim erant (ut notorium fuit) à latere Regis ut ipsos comprehenderent, et comprehensos præsentia domini regis præsentarent. Sed cum eos ubique quæsitos non invenissent, scientes quod elapsi fuerant aliquo mandato repentino præmuniti, tristes recesserunt. Et hoc regi cum nunciarent, eorum desidiâ Rex increpavit; et ait, 'Aliquis qui edebat panes meos, hoc ipso Roberto festinè etiam de nocte nuntiavit.' Erat autem tunc tempus interdicti, et sese quidam de nobilibus Anglorum contra regem domini papæ et ecclesiæ jam manifestum adversarium, ex mandato domini papæ Innocentii tertii insurgere cœperunt, quorum vel capitaneus, vel de capitaneis, erat Robertus memoratus. Unde usque ad gemitum doluit rex, quòd ipsum vel saltem suos, in tali et tanta culpa non comprehenderet. Ex tunc igitur magis cœperat Robertus regem formidare, et odio prosequi efficaciori. Majori igitur minori absorbente omisit Robertus ecclesiam sancti Albani, et cellam ejus de Binham, (quæ non ab ea nisi ut pars a toto, vel membrum à suo corpore, discrepare manifestum est) cartamque illam falsam, in quam quasi in baculo arundineo confidebat, nemine conscio præter Adam fil. Willielmi (qui postea eam manifestavit) secretissimè abscondit; proponens certissimè ea uti in posterum, cum tempus ei prosperitatis arrideret. Sed,

'Lædit in humanis divina potentia rebus.'

Ipsam fefellit opinio, et multum commutati rerum eventus consequentium, statum suum inopinabiliter adversante fortuna (ut in sequentibus dicetur) variabant; monachis igitur per prædictos satellites irrestaurabiliter damnificatis, et præ penuria pedes recedentibus, accreverunt diatim subrependo Roberto, (qui ex facto excommunicatus erat) adversitates diversæ, quæ finem nec mitigationem per quindecim annos acceperunt. O mira et formidabilis Dei et sancti martyris Albani ultrix sententia! Ex illo enim ut veriùs dicam tempore, nunquam defuit vel manifesta persecutio hostilis, vel adversitas infirmitatis ingruentis et senectutis. Incipi-ente enim tunc guerra, constitutus est Robertus dux exercitus insurgentium in regem; unde in titulo literarum suarum, se 'Constabularium exercitus Dei' nominabat. Et tunc in multa incidebat pericula. Sed ad hoc stimulavit et animavit ipsum, et omnes suos sequaces, multum varius Papa Innocentius tertius. Sed postquam rex Johannes ut se vindicaret, turpiter succubuit, se reddendo memorato papæ infeliciter tributarium: idem papa versa facie, Robertum et omnes ei adhærentes persequabatur, factus adjutor sui vassalli et defensor. Enervato igitur Roberto, confiscabantur omnes ejus possessiones; spoliatus igitur et lacessitus, exul, vagus, et instabilis, fecit seditionem obsessis in castro Rovecestriæ et Lincolnæ confusus, et Londoniæ fama demigratus, omni tempore regis Johannis varias adversitates et maximas, et infortunia toleravit, donec rege Johanne mortuo et succedente Henrico rege filio suo, pax ecclesiæ et toto regno est restituta; ipse igitur Robertus jam senescens et infirmitate contabescens, nunquam etiam gratiæ regis Henrici plenè restitutus, usque ad mortem, semper de prodicione infamis, et sustinens opprobria, de malo in pejus donec ipsum mors adoptata absorberet, declinavit. Nec cartam tamen memoratam vel resignavit, vel de sub terra delevit, ut decuit, vel expediret. Nec etiam cartam quam habuit fraudulentam quamdudum per memoratum fratrem proditorem adquisierat ad nocumentum ecclesiæ S. Albani, moriens voluit manifestare vel resignare. Sed Adam filius Willielmi, ejus familiaris commilito, tunc ei consistens, secreta ejus rimabatur; et eo mortuo, ipsam Conventui præsentavit: unde propter illius peccati expiationem, unam cuppam argenteam deauratam de bonis dicti Roberti obtulit altari beati Albani, ad reponendum in ea corpus Dominicum, quæ postea furto sublata est.

RYCHARD RYCHE.

Monastery of St. Mary de Pree, de la Praye, De Prato, or De Pratis, near St. Albans,

IN

HERTFORDSHIRE.

ISHOP Tanner says, As there had been built at St. Julians a place for leprous men, so, about A. D. 1190, Garinus, or Warine, abbat of St. Albans, thought fit in the adjoining meadows to found a House or Hospital for poor, sick, and leprous women, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin; which, in process of time, became so well endowed, that in it were maintained a Prioress and several Nuns of the Order of St. Benedict.^a

Matthew Paris states Garinus to have founded this house at the express admonition of a person born at Walden, who pretended that Saint Amphibalus had appeared to him, and made a request, that, as he had been the instructor and converter of Saint Alban, some place might be dedicated to his honour. St. Amphibalus, moreover, signified, that the spot for the construction of such a place most acceptable would be that on which his body had rested when abbat Simon removed it from Redburn to St. Albans in 1178.

Garinus's charter describes the situation of this monastery at the extremity of the ploughed land, adjoining the meadows of Kingsbury, with its offices on each side of the highway. The number of leprous women was limited to thirteen: the allowance for their maintenance being a certain quantity of winter corn and malt per week, with clothes and a small portion of money arising from the toll of St. Albans town; together with the right of a corrody in the monastery of St. Alban at the death of every abbat. Garinus's charter contains likewise an endowment for a clerk and chaplain.^b

JOHN DE WALDEN, the son of the person to whom St. Amphibalus had appeared, was made by Garinus the first keeper of the house.^c

Matthew Paris, writing of the death and interment of William de Trumpington the twenty-second abbat of St. Albans, says, it had been customary, at the death of every abbat, to appoint an anniversary to his memory, and to grant a corrody, or daily maintenance, to one monk then newly admitted, for the purpose of celebrating mass and praying daily for his soul. This was now providing and settling, when RICHARD, a monk, and keeper of the church and hospital of St. Mary de Pree, came forward, and demanded for the use of the leprous women under his care seven corrodies: alleging that, by the tenor of the charter which founded and endowed this hospital, at least one new corrody should be granted at the death of every abbat, until the number amounted to thirteen; and that not one had been granted ever since the foundation. This claim was considered and allowed.^d

King John, in the first year of his reign, granted the nuns here a fair to be held annually for two days, on the eve and on the festival of the birth of the Virgin Mary.

ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ de Pratis; exigens conradium abbatis sibi perpetuo ad opus Leprosarum ibi manentium, concedi; secundum tenorem chartæ confectæ ab abbate Garino, ejusdem domus fundatore. Quod et ita revera provisum fuerat ab eodem; ut scilicet a tempore abbatis Galfridi, post decessum cujuslibet Abbatis; conradia, tam tunc mortuorum, quam in posterum moriturorum usque ad tresdecim; ipsis dominabus leprosis pro animarum eorundem redemptione concederentur. Defunctis igitur, Galfrido, Radulpho, Roberto, Simone, Warino, et Johanne, abbatibus; instabat Willielmo jam defuncto; conradium septimum consequenter; quod et sine difficultate concessum est." Mat. Par. edit. 1684, de Vit. Ab. pp. 1064, 1065.

The charter granting this was confirmed by King Richard the Third in 1483.^a By another charter, dated May 1st, in the fifth year of his reign, A. D. 1203, he gave the monks of St. Mary de Pree thirty acres of essart in Esebrec.^b

Three bulls of Pope Alexander the Fourth, relating to this monastery, are preserved in Rymer's Fœdera, promulgated in the second year of his pontificate, A. D. 1256: two of them granting forty days pardon of enjoined penance to such persons as should contribute toward the repairs of the buildings.^c

The cemetery of this hospital was consecrated in the time of William de Trumpington by Thomas bishop of Down.^d

Thomas de la Mare, who was abbat of St. Albans from 1350 to 1396, appears to have endeavoured at the encouragement of literature at St. Mary de Pree. The poor women in the hospital, says Newcome, had been of two sorts, one called poor sisters, and the other nuns; but so illiterate that they could neither read nor sing. On this he sent them books and the ordinal, and provided for their necessary instruction, with orders that a poor sister should be promoted to the order and rank of a nun, when duly qualified; and, the service being there performed with more solemnity, it was given in charge to the archdeacon to superintend their edification and devotion.^e

King Henry the Fifth, after the parliament had dissolved the alien priories in the 4th year of his reign, granted that of Wenge in Buckinghamshire, which had been a cell to the monastery of St. Nicholas at Angiers in France, to the prioress and nuns of De Pree.^f

Among the Records preserved in the Chapter-House at Westminster is a general Pardon for all trespasses granted to the prioress and convent of the 25th of Henry the Sixth.^g

Another Record preserved in the same repository contains the prioress's Accompt of the receipts and expences of the House from the 2d to the 4th of Henry VII.^h

A third Record preserved in the Augmentation Office contains an Accompt of the prioress in the 18th Henry VIII.ⁱ

Cardinal Wolsey, commendatory abbat of St. Albans in 1528, procured a bull from Pope Clement VII. for the suppressing this nunnery, and annexing the same to the monastery of St. Albans;^k but, 6 June, 20 Hen. VIII., he obtained a grant of it, with all the lands thereunto belonging, for himself.^l After his attainder, the king put it off by way of exchange to St. Alban's abbey;^m and, as parcel thereof, it was granted, 32 Hen. VIII., to Ralph Rowlet, Esq.ⁿ

NUM. I.

De Foundatione Ecclesie S. Marie de Pratis.

[*Har. Soc. edit. 1884, pp. 1040, 1041, in Via Garini viginti Abbatis
S. Albani.*]

Item [sc. Garinus] quaque oraculo ejusdem fidedigni quid Waldemari nati, et nocturna visione admonitus, Ecclesiam sancte Marie de Pratis cum suis fundavit conventibus. Apparuit enim ipsi Waldemari memorato, dum in somno quiesceret, quendam venerabilem personam, videlicet dicimus, ad instar radii solis perlucidus, qui requisitus, asseruit se esse sanctum Amphibalum beati Albani Anglicorum protomartyris magistrum, et conversorem, in quo sibi hinc complacuit, et in ipsius gloria conglorificatur. Dixit insuper, et asseruit, locum ipsum in quo cum idem sanctus Amphibalus cum suis sociis inveniretur, et eorum reliquias versus sanctum Albannum deportarentur, et obitum feretrum beati Albani veheretur, venerabilem fuisse et Deo et sanctis martyribus ipsis charissimum; et addidit, "Vade, igitur, abbatem Warinum, et vice mea dic ei ut locum ipsum cunctis extollat veneratione."

Venit igitur fidelis ille nuntius, et omnia predicta qui-busdam intersignis confirmata ipsi abbati seriatim retulit.
Abbas autem ipsi viro, (quem circumvolens fama veridicum et fidelissimum predicavit) non tantum fidem, sed et favo-rem adhibuit: recolendo, quod "Dominus infirma mundi elegit, ut fortia confundat," et in sua peritia nimis confidentes. Nec tamen absque multis indicis, imò miraculis, ipsa relata fidedigna comprobavit. Contigit enim, quod tempore predecessoris sui felicitis recordationis, Simonis abbatis; quando versus sanctum Albannum invente sancti Amphibali reliquie, tam solemniter quam gaudentes portarentur, et eis obviam beati Albani feretrum, (conventa festive induto consequente) bajularetur: adeo leve factum est, ut à duobus fratribus, imò etiam ab uno, sine difficul-tate veheretur: quod tamen aliis temporibus, vix à quatuor de loco ad locum non remotum, solet transportari; præterea, in ipsa obviatione, terra divitissimo adusta chaumate, et suo cespite viduata, (quæ nec fructus, nec fruges pro-miserat,) subita imbrium inundatione respiravit: ut marcidæ et mortuæ revirescerent redivivæ.

Item, Induvie festivæ, quibus audacter conventus intuebatur, cum nulla aëris serenissimi immutatio, pallor, nubes vel nubecula apparuisset; et ut dictum est, terra arida et rimosa repentina inebriatione perfunderetur, nulla genitus labe vel deterioratione, cappæ aurifrigiæ et opere plumario pretiosè redimitæ, damnificatæ, ladebantur, unde locus memoratus, veneratione meritò dignus censebatur; et ab ipso abbate, multo tempore sanctus et charus habebatur.
Credebat igitur indubitanter, quod si ibidem secundum am-monitionem sancti viri, a beato Amphibalo ut dictum est, destinati, ecclesiam construeret: Deo placens, felix susciperet, in spiritualibus et temporalibus proventibus incrementum; nec eum fefellit fides aut opinio, futura tunc, nunc autem præsentem prosperitate comprobante. Edificaturus igitur, cepit fundamentum ita initiare, ut infra breve tempus cæpta perficeret, dotaret, ditaret, religiosis inhabitaret, et instrueret religione, ne investivè ei possit objici et dici,
"quod cæpit ædificare, et non potuit consummare." Et cum consummaretur, præfecit eidem ecclesiæ patronam beatam Dei genitricem: et in ejusdem honore dedicari, præ-fecitque magistrum et procuratorem domui illi, fratrem Johannem de Waldene, ipsius filium, cui facta est prædicta revelatio. Qui postea ipsi domui quasi apes argumentosa, multa bona ex innata sibi industria et gratia à Deo collata adeptus est. Et licet laicus, simplicioribus prædicando, multos et infirmos, et ad virtutes evocans, a vitiis deternavit. Erat etiam regibus, prelati, et aliis magnatibus, acceptus et gratus.

Edificatam igitur Ecclesiam et dedicatam, constructaque decenter officinis, quæ consideratione constituit quosdam mortalis ingressus diutius includi; et volens quibusdam limitatis regulis actari; ne vices, secularibus erroribus involve-rentur; quas quidem ingressas a vicorum ingressorum morsimilis hospitalis S. Juliani non multum somnos, seques-tratis amovit: et in dicto loco, ubi decentes officinas cum claustris Abbas memoratus construxerat (ut dictum est) in-cludi constituit; ne amplius detestabilibus excessibus quibus ante diffundebantur viri et mulieres in seculo commoclarentur. Utroqueque terminis excundi limitatis; evangelique castigata licentia: precibus (quæ norunt tam ipse mulieres interne, quam viri) sedulo incumbentes; negligentis si quæ, quod absit, Conventui sancti Albani contingerent suppleant diligenter. Igitur (quasi pro finali honorum operum suorum clausula) Abbas Garinus illas domus quam à fundamentis construxerat, et Beate Mariæ de Pratis præter prædicta circumstantia, nomine congruè in-titulaverat: possessionumque tali Carta confirmavit dona-tionem, ne temporis posterius illam aliquando annullaret.
In qua quidem, multorum indicio pietas; sed in parte, discretionem perpenditur mutilata; quia illi ecclesie collata beneficia, in gravamen non modicum Conventui, diutius magis ac magis videntur redundare.

Nunnery of Sopwell, or Sopewell,

IN

HERTFORDSHIRE.

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Alban.

frey, he encouraged them by building a cell and other convenient habitations for their use; ordering their number to ATTHEW PARIS says that in the time of Geoffrey abbat of St. Albans, about the year 1140, two religious women made themselves a habitation by wattling the boughs of trees and covering them with bark, near the wood called Eiwood, not far from the river Ver; where they entered upon a life of prayer and abstinence. The steadiness of their conduct being reported to abbat Geofbe increased; that they should be clothed as nuns; and, in their conduct, follow the rule of St. Benedict. He also endowed their house, which was dedicated to St. Mary, with certain possessions and rents. The name of Sopwell appears to have been given to the new foundation from the vicinity of a well, whence the first women were wont to fetch water to dress their meat. Abbat Geoffrey, for the credit as well as the safety of his nuns, ordered their house to be secured not only with locks and bolts, but under the seal of the abbat of St. Albans for the time being. He also gave them a cemetery, wherein none but the nuns themselves were allowed to be buried. The charter by which he grants it states the number of the nuns to have been limited to thirteen.^a

Henry de Albini and Cicely his wife gave two hides of land in the manor of Cotes to this monastery, which is described as the small cell which Roger the recluse had formerly rebuilt. He also gave them a claim for wood from the same manor for all the necessary purposes of their house. This gift is said to have been made for the souls of King William the Conqueror and his sons, and for the souls of the parents, brothers and sisters, and children of Henry de Albini and his wife.^a

When Robert de Albini and Cicely his mother placed Amice, a little maid, the sister of Robert and daughter of Cicely, in this Cell, to serve God continually, they gave with her a virgate of land in Cotes which had been held by one Salid. To their instrument on this occasion Geoffrey the abbat was a witness.^b

The same Robert de Albini, by a separate charter, confirmed to the nuns his father's grant of Cotes;^c which was again confirmed, together with the additional donation of Robert, by Robert the younger, the grandson of Henry de Albini.^d

Richard de Tany, by a charter without date, granted to St. Mary and the nuns of Sopwell all his land which Roger Niger held in the soke of Tidenhang, called La Blakhide, quit from all services, customs, and exactions.^e

Such are the testimonies relative to the foundation and endowment of the nunnery of Sopwell quoted by Dugdale in the first part of the Appendix to the present Account.

Mr. Clutterbuck is of opinion, from what is above stated, that Matthew Paris is not strictly accurate in his account of the foundation. The women who erected the wattled house of boughs and rods covered with bark, he observes, must have lived before the time of abbat Geoffrey: for we find that in the time of Henry de Albini the cell had been rebuilt by Roger, a hermit or recluse; and that Geoffrey was himself a witness to the donation of Robert the son of Henry de Albini. So that, though Geoffrey might rebuild the Cell, regulate the constitution of the society of Nuns, and in other respects be their benefactor, he does not appear to have been their founder, or the contemporary of the two first holy females.^f

Among the inquisitions in the Tower there is one, 33 Edw. I., relating to the prioress and nuns of Sopwell, as to Herpesfeld, in the town of St. Albans, and as to 32s. rent issuing out of one carucate of land in the vill of Parke.^g

In 1 Edw. II. a proceeding was had in the Exchequer, when the prioress of Sopwell made fine with the king of twenty shillings for a certain rent in Herpesfeld and in the town of St. Albans, after the publication of the statute, &c. to hold the same in peace.^h

In 1338, Michael de Mentmore, the 29th abbat of St. Albans, at a visitation of this house, promulgated certain Rules for its regulation; enjoining a stricter order and observance than had been for some time before practised. These were, 1. That the commemoration of St. Alban should be kept as usual. 2. That not more than three nuns should sit in the chapter. 3. That silence should be observed in the church, the cloister, the refectory, and the dormitory. 4. That the nuns should rise in the morning at the ringing of a bell; none to leave the dormitory till the bell had been rung. 5. Regulations respecting the opening and shutting of the garden and parlour doors. 6. That no sister hold conversation with secular persons in the parlour, but with her cowl and veil on. 7. That tailors and other persons employed, work in some place assigned to them without the Monastery, and have no admission into chambers or private places. 8. That any sister under sentence of penance shall still perform her duties in the church. 9.

Sick sisters to be kept in the infirmary. 10. The nuns not to lodge out of the convent; nor guests to be lodged in the dormitory. 11. The mass of our Lady to be attended by all the sisters.ⁱ

PRIORESSES of SOPWELL.

JOHANNA.^k

PHILIPPA, prioress of Sopwell, died in 1330, when great caballing is said to have ensued among the sisters; who, at last, fixed with unanimity on one Alice de Hakeney. This coming to the knowledge of the abbat of St. Albans (in whom alone was the power to make the prioress, without any consent or leave of the sisters), he despatched the prior of his monastery thither, with orders to appoint some other whom he might find qualified. Accordingly the prior went, and, calling a full chapter, directed that

ALICE DE PEKESDENE should be prioress; who afterwards discharged the duty with great credit.^l

MATILDA FLAMSTEAD, or DE FLAMSTEDE, prioress of Sopwell, died in 1430. Newcome says she had lived in the rules of religion sixty years and eighteen weeks; and, in the whole, eighty-one years and eight weeks.^m

LETITIA WYTTEHAM occurs prioress in the 6th, 13th, and 14th of Hen. V., and again in 1426.

Newcome says, in the end of the year 1480, a commission was given by the abbat of St. Albans to Rothebury the cellarer and Thomas Ramrugge the sub-prior to visit the cell of Sopwell, and there to set aside from her office of prioress

JOAN CHAPEL, now very old, and too infirm to discharge her duty in the care of the house; and to place in that office

ELIZABETH WEBB, one of the sisters.ⁿ

AGNES WAKEFELD, who will presently be again mentioned, occurs in 1529.

JOAN PYGOT was prioress at the Dissolution, and was still living in 1553. Her pension at the suppression of the house was 6*l.* per annum.^o

So many writers have agreed to call

JULIANA BARNES prioress of Sopwell,^p that it would seem hardly right to omit all mention of her here.

Dame Julyans or Juliana Barnes, otherwise Berners, is generally designated as the authoress of "The Book containing the Treatises of Hawking, Hunting, Coat-Armour, Fishing, and Blasing of Arms," printed at Westminster by Wynkyn de Worde in 1496. She is supposed to have been born toward the latter end of the fourteenth century at Roding Berners, in Essex. The received report is that she was daughter of Sir James Berners, of Roding Berners, Knight, whose son Richard was created Baron Berners t. Hen. IV., and that she once held the situation of prioress of Sopwell Nunnery.^q It must not however be concealed that no such person can be found in any authentic pedigree of the Berners family; nor do the county historians of Hertfordshire, nor indeed any other writers, notice her from documents.

Tanner, speaking of Sopwell nunnery, and alluding to abbat Geoffrey's charter, says herein were formerly thirteen nuns, but, about the time of the Suppression, only nine, who then had yearly revenues, valued, according to Dugdale, at 40*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.*: according to Speed, at 68*l.* 8*s.*

King Henry the Eighth, in the 30th year of his reign, granted the scite of Sopwell nunnery to Sir Richard Lee, Knight, and Margaret his wife; with the manor of Sopwellbury in the following year.^r According to Num. VIII.

"Hertf. Rex xxviij^o. die Febr. concessit Ricardo Lee de villa sancti Albani totum illud manerium de Sopwellbury et al. terr. in villa of the Appendix to the present Account, a fresh grant to Sir Richard Lee must have been made in the 33d of Hen. VIIIth.

The present owner of the scite is the earl of Verulam.

No Register of this nunnery is noticed in Tanner: though the following references occur to manuscripts and public records which have not been already referred to:

"Cart. orig. Joan de Shelford mil. fact. monialibus de Sopewell, inter MSS. cl. Dodsworth in bibl. Bodl. n. 76, fol. 103.

In Jones's Index to Records in the Exchequer, vol. ii. is this reference: "Carta regis Henrici tertii nuper regis Angliæ monialibus de Sopwell in com. Hertf."

There are in the Augmentation Office two Court-rolls. The earliest is of the sixth year of K. Henry the Fifth, and purports to be the court of Letitia prioress of the house of the blessed Mary of Sopwell and the convent of the same place. The other contains two courts; one of the 13th, the other of the 14th of Henry VI.: the latter purporting also to be the court of the above-mentioned Letitia.

An Entry in the Proceedings of the Court 6 Hen. V. seems to show the independence of the prioress as to the abbey of St. Albans. It is thus: "adhuc consulendum est cum consilio Dominae pro quadam transgressione per Abbatem de sancto Albano in le Sellewode facta."

The Augmentation Office also contains a Lease made between Agnes Wakefeld prioress of Sopwell with the convent of the same place on one part, and Agnes Gascoyne of Graveley in the county of Hertford, widow, on the other part. By this lease the prioress and convent demise their lands and tenements in Wymondley the Less and More, and in Graveley, to the said Agnes and her assigns for twenty years, at the yearly rent of forty shillings. The lease bears date in the chapter-house at Sopwell the 16th of November, in the 20th year of Henry the Eighth.

To this lease was affixed both the CONVENT SEAL and the seal of Agnes the prioress. Of one of these, most probably the former, a Fragment still remains. It seems to have been of homely workmanship. From the small part which is left of it, the subject appears to be the Virgin Mary sitting, and underneath a nun praying. No part of the legend is left.

The RUINS of Sopwell nunnery occupy a considerable space of ground about half a mile south-eastward from St. Albans: but the dilapidations have been so great, that neither the plan of the buildings, nor their appropriation, can now be traced. The principal part of the original edifice was enlarged and altered by Sir Richard Lee for his own residence, and the surrounding ground enclosed by a wall, the greater part of which remains.

In the chapel of this nunnery King Henry VIII. is said to have been married to one of his wives.^b

Benedictine Nunnery of Merkyate, or Mergate, now Market Street,

SOMETIMES CALLED

The Church of the Holy Trinity de Bosco, or in the Wood,

IN

BEDFORDSHIRE.

HE monastery of Mergate, or Market Street, situated in a wood within the parish of Caddington, has been usually considered, and we believe really is, in Bedfordshire:^a but the Messrs. Lysons, who call it MARKET CELL, probably following Chauncy, speak of it as on the Hertfordshire side of the parish.^b

In the former edition of the Monasticon this house was erroneously styled a CELL to the ABBEY of ST. ALBAN.

Ralph the dean, with the chapter of St. Pauls in London, lords of the soil, gave the site of this house and some adjoining lands in 1145;^c but the building an endowment was chiefly owing to the care and bounty of Geoffrey abbat of St. Albans. Matthew Paris states that Geoffrey built this monastery twice from the foundation; and that he endowed it, without the consent of his convent, with all their tithes of Caisho, and two parts of their tithe of corn through the whole parish of Watford.^d

By the dean and chapter's charter the prioress Christina and her successors were to pay three shillings yearly as a quit-rent, or perpetual acknowledgment for the ground, "de recognitione fundi." The subsequent prioresses were to be chosen by the nuns, and ordained by the chapter of the cathedral. The prioress was to swear fealty to the dean and chapter; and the Nuns who succeeded those first appointed were to be sworn to the prioress in their own chapter.^e

the Holy Trinity by Alexander bishop of Lincoln, in the year above-mentioned; when Ralph de Langford the dean of St. Pauls, with one of the canons and a clerk of the church, attended on behalf of the chapter, and offered the charter containing their gift of the site of the monastery upon the altar.^f

Bishop Kennett says, there was afterwards given to this monastery an estate in Burcester in Oxfordshire, of which the mansion was called Nonnes-place.^g The prioress and nuns, he adds, in 1212, 13 and 14 Joh. granted to Hervey prior of Burcester two selions or ridges of land in Hodesham, in exchange for one acre nearer to their land in Nyhenaker, and half an acre of meadow nigh to their meadow called Gilberts-ham, by mutual indenture.^h

Several passages relating to other possessions of this monastery occur in Sir William Dugdale's History of Warwickshire.

Speaking of the hamlet of Kinwaldsey, a member of Hampton in that county, he says, whether it were given to the nuns of Mergate by Roger de Moubray or by one of the Ardens who had that lordship of Hampton from his grant I cannot say; yet clear it is that 'twas one of those who so gave it: for it appears that Christina prioress of Merkyate and the rest of her fellow-nuns did demise it, together with Didington, unto the first William de Arden about King Richard the First's time; for both which they reserved the yearly rent of xx^s. and that Hugh de Arden, son and heir to the same William, purchased the inheritance of them both, from Isabel the succeeding prioress and the convent of that house for the sum of thirty marks: and that these together with Knolle came to the monks of Westminster 20 Edw. I.ⁱ

Under Kington, alias Kingsford, part in the parish of Bickenhill and part in Solihull parish, Dugdale says, "This

^a Compare Pope Nich. Taxation, Tanner, &c. Tanner says expressly "Though this hamlet be partly in Bedfordshire and partly in Hertfordshire, yet the priory was in the former (as Pat. 2 Edw. VI.), notwithstanding Chauncy."

^b Magna Britan. vol. i. p. 62. Bishop Tanner says that Speed mentions another nunnery at Merkyate built 6 Edw. I. by Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, to the honour of St. Giles: but this he conceives to be the same with De Bosco juxta Flamsted, not far from Merkyate, but in Hertfordshire.

^c Append. Num. VI.

^d Compare the Append. Num. I. Geoffrey is elsewhere said to have done this at the particular instigation of Roger the hermit. See Numm. II. III.

^e Leland, Collectan. edit. 1770, vol. i. p. 83, says, "Prior S. Trin.

de Bosco (Moniales) juxta Markgate [Bedf.] Rogerus abbas S. Albani primus fundator. Modernus fundator Decanus S. Pauli Lond."

^f See Num. VII.

^g Kennett, Par. Antiq. new edit. vol. i. p. 138. In the reign of Edw. IV. this land in Burcester, being assessed among the temporals of the abbess of Merkyate, was computed at the yearly value of lvi^s. x^d. of which the tenths were rated at v^s. viij^d. Transcript. Regist. Archid. Oxon. MS. penes Anton. Wood. We find it noticed, subsequent to the Dissolution, in the Repertories to the Originalia in the Exchequer. "Rex xxv^{to}. die Octobris, concessit Johanni Denton reversio-nem manerii in Bursestre vocat. le Nonnes Place in Bysseter, Kyngende in com. Bed. &c. Orig. 34 Hen. VIII. ro. 40."

is a ~~very~~ antient place, though now there be little sign thereof: for I find that there stood a church here, in the beginning of King Henry the Third's time, the advowson whereof was granted in the 5th of that king's reign to the Nuns of Mergate in Bedfordshire by one Henry le Notte: but afterwards, viz. in 16 Edw. II. it had the reputation for no more than a chapel belonging to Bikenhill."^a

Of Colshill he says, "The church was very anciently given to the nuns of Merkyate: for in Henry the Third's time it had a vicar endowed.^b Nevertheless about the beginning of Edward the First's reign, there grew suit betwixt these nuns and John de Clinton senior, touching the advowson thereof; but, at length, they came to an accord, and gave him a hundred marks of silver to quit his title thereto; which he did by a fine then levied,^c whereby it appears that the now churches of Lea, Over Whitacre, and Nether Whitacre, were chapelries antiently belonging thereto. In 1291, the rectory, then appropriated to those nuns, was valued at eighteen marks, and the vicarage at vi. marks."^d

The church of Whitacre Superior, Dugdale says, was originally but a chapel belonging to Colshill; "yet," he adds, "did the patronage thereof pass by the name of a Church in 3 Joh. as appears by the grant then made unto the Nuns of Mergate from Jordan de Whitacre."^e

Lea, he says, "was anciently given to the nuns of Mergate by one of the De la Launds, as I guess; but it seems that the title which those nuns had was not very firm: for in 26 Hen. III. James de la Launde recovered the right of presentation thereto:^f howbeit afterwards they grew to composition with him,^g and gave him fifty-seven marks of silver to quit his claim to it; which he did in 36 Hen. III. whereupon it became appropriated to them, but no vicar endowed; so that the curate there was provided by those nuns as a stipendiary to them."^h

The church of St. Peter Kingsbury was given to the nuns of Mergate by the first Osbert de Arden about the beginning of King Stephen's time, though till 36 Hen. III. they did not quietly enjoy it.ⁱ

Bridges, in his History of Northamptonshire, says, the church of Buckby in that county belonged to the priory of Merkyate, the advowson of which was given by the prioress, 6 Joh. to Saher de Quincy, lord of the manor.^k In another page he notices that in the 37th of Henry VIII. certain messuages, lands, and tenements in the parish of Brington, which had belonged to the priory of Merkyate, were granted to George Acworth and Edward Butler.^l

The continuator of Blomefield says, the prioress of Merkyate had an annual pension of 100s. out of the manor of Stokesby in Norfolk.^m

According to Newcome, in the time of John of Hertford the twenty-third abbat of St. Albans, the nunnery was assaulted in the night by fifty robbers, and the nuns pillaged and robbed of every thing valuable: but the alarm being given, some of the robbers were taken, and the country people rose, with great zeal and diligence, to apprehend and bring the rest to justice.ⁿ

PRIORESSES of MERKYATE.

CHRISTINA, the first abbess, A. D. 1145, had the easy reputation of doing miracles.^o She is said to have been born at Huntingdon. Several pair of sandals, worked by her, were presented by Robert de Gorham the eighteenth abbat of St. Albans to Pope Adrian IVth.^p

ISABELLA.^q

JOAN, or JOHANNA, occurs in 1212.^r

JOAN DE SURETON, elected in 1239.^s

AGNES GOBYON occurs in 1271:^t upon whose death,

ISABELLA GOBYON was elected, and confirmed 12 kal. Dec. 1274.^u Browne Willis's List, in Tanner, by an evident mistake, says 1374.^x

LORA DE CANTIA was elected in 1284.^y Willis says, she occurs in 1289.^z

JOHANNA occurs prioress 43 Edw. III. A. D. 1369.^a

DIONYSIA occurs in a lease of the rectory of Watford, in the Harleian MS. 602, granted to one Henry Wenge of that place for 19l. a year, 15 Hen. VI. A. D. 1436.^b Willis says she occurs in 1439.

JOHANNA occurs in a subsequent instrument, in the manuscript just quoted;^c and again in 1458.^d

JANE, or JOANE ZOUCHE was the last prioress of Merkyate.^e She occurs in the 13th, 23d, and 26th of Hen. VIII.

This priory was valued, 26 Hen. VIII. according to Dugdale, at 114l. 16s. 1d.: according to Speed, at 143l. 18s. 3d. The Ministers' Accompts of the 28 Hen. VIII. make the value amount to 155l. 5s. 10d.^f

Tanner supposes the site to have been first granted to a son of Lord Berners. Leland says, "Mergate was a nunnery of late tyme. It standith on an hill in a faire woode hard by Watheling strete on the est side of it. Humfrey Boucher, base sonne to the late Lorde Berners, did much coste in translating of the priory into a maner place: but he left it nothing ended."^g It was after this, in the 38th of Hen. VIII. granted to George Ferrers:^h whose descendant, Sir George Ferrers, died seized of it in 1640.ⁱ After this, it was for a considerable time the seat of the family of Coppin, of whom there are some memorials in the parish church of Caddington. The site of this monastery, together with the manor of Merkyate, are now the property of Joseph Howell, Esq.^k

No REGISTER of Merkyate Nunnery, it is believed, is now remaining. Four charters, the originals of which are preserved in the Cottonian library, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments. There is a fifth, from Robert bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, about the year 1370, in the same Collection, confirming the churches in Warwickshire; but too mutilated to be transcribed.^l

There are three conventual leases of this priory in the Augmentation Office. The first dated 10 March 13 Hen. VIII. between dame Jane Zouche prioress of the monastery of the Blessed Trinity besides Merkyate and the convent of the same place, and William Burr of Streitley, in the time of the prioress Christina is appendant to the Cottonian deed XI. 36. It is of an oval form, in yellow wax: and represents our Saviour seated, with a nimbus round the head. The right hand uplifted; the left resting on a book supported by the left knee. On each side of the head, the Greek letters A. Ω. All that remains of the inscription is SIGI . . .

An impression from the SEAL of Merkyate Nunnery

To the second of the leases in the Augmentation Office above described a fragment of a later conventual Seal remains, representing the Virgin seated, and holding on her lap the representation of our Saviour on the cross. Nothing more of the legend is left than ILLVM.

De Gaufrido Abbate. De Sanctitate et Actibus Rogeri Heremite.

[Ex Historia Abbatum S. Albani in bibl. Cotton. sub effigie Claudii E. iv. fol. 104 b.]

HUJUS abbatis tempore, floruit Rogerus monachus hujus ecclesiæ (S. Albani) gradu levita, devotione heremita; sanctitatis speculum, maturitatis exemplum, par habitus antiquis patribus meruit comparari. Qui noster quidem fuit monachus, sed vivebat in heremo, obedientiam servans abbati suo. Porro, locus heremi quem colebat gradientibus de nostro monasterio versus Dunstapliam apparet à dextris secus viam prope vicum qui Markate isto tempore appellatur. Acceperat autem noster Rogerus hunc locum divino munere, angelico perductus illuc tam ministerio quàm revelatione. Nam cum rediret de Jerusalem acceperunt eum apud Wyndeshorham sancti tres angeli, niveis vestibus et stolis amicti, qui singuli singulas cruces ferebant in manibus, et desuper totidem non solum ardentes cereos, sed fulgore mirabili coruscantes.

Inde cum eo visibiliter ambulantes usque ad præfatum locum heremi, velut consortem deducunt, et ibidem statuunt in Dei servicio permansurum, ubi postea multa mala peressus, multas temptationes expertus, magna vicissim consolatione meruit divinitus sublevari, nunquam nempe puto callidus hostis alicui, vel acriores temptationes immisit, vel plures tetendit insidias. Sed ille virtute crucis armatus, et has gratiosè devicit, et discretissimè illas cavit. In carnem suam nullus umquam crudelior extitit, sed et illud insistebat toto conatu perficere, quo se novit Deo melius complacere. Et erat ei tanta super afflictis compassio, ut illorum tam ægrè ferret injurias sicut suas. Spiritu prophetiæ claruit, et in contemplativis egregius habebatur. Ipse quoque tanta intentione solebat orare, ut cum diabolus olim visibiliter incensus, et totus igneus orationem suam interrompere niteretur, igneque visibili cucullam orantis dorso inhærentem incendisset, non eum ab intentione remissiore reddidit, nec orationem valuit resecare. Hujus Rogeri discipulatu adhæsit beata Christina, virgo de Hontyngdona oriunda, quæ propter amorem castimonie, amplas reliquerat possessiones domumque paternam divitiis opulentam. Non tamen consensit ipse faciem videre virginis, quamvis sapud eum quatuor annis et eo amplius reclusa fuisset.

Weever, Fun. Mon. p. 585, gives some silly lines from a manuscript which he says was in Sir Robert Cotton's library, entitled, "The Petytown of thre pore Nuns of Mergate."

Erat ^{semper} oratorio dicti Rogeri domus contigua, quæ cum illo ~~fecit~~ angulum conjunctione sua. Is ante positam habens ~~unam~~ tabulam poterat ita celari ut deforis aspicienti nullum interiùs haberi persuaderet, ubi tantum plus paulo semis inesset. In hoc carcere Rogerus gaudentem Christinam posuit, et admovit pro hostio conveniens ligni roboris, quod fuit tanti ponderis ut ab inclusa nullatenus admoveri sive removeri poterit. Hic ancilla Christi coartata super duram petram sedit et frigidam, usque ad Rogeri obitum, per annos quatuor et amplius, ut præfertur, latens heremitas quinque, et omnes qui cum Rogero pariter habitabant. O quantas illuc sustinuit incommoditates æstus et frigoris, famis et sitis, jejuniique cotidiani. Angustia loci non patiebatur eam habere tegumentum necessarium cum algeret, integerrima clausula cum æstuabat, nullum refrigerium indulgebat, longa inedia contracta sunt, et aruerunt sibi intestina, quandoque pro sitis ariditate frusta sanguinis coagulati ex ejus naribus bullire; exire foras non nisi serò licebat ad ea quæ natura poposcit, quia nequibat, licet justaret necessitas, sibi ipsa aperire, et Rogerus de more tardabat; itaque necesse fuit eam immobiliter in loco sedere, torqueri, et tacere, quia si Rogerum habere voluerit, voce vel pulsu vocari eum oportebat: sed qualiter faceret hoc abscondita, quæ nec ausa fuit trahere vel semisuspiria, metuebat namque ne quis præter Rogerum adesset, qui vel anhelitu spirantis audito latebras suas deprehenderet, et illa quidem in carcere mori mallet quàm tunc temporis cuiquam externo patefieri. Talia patientem corripuit dira morborum varietas, sed omnes anxietates equanimiter tolerabat amore Christi. Verùm amicus Dei Rogerus eam nunc doctrinâ, nunc exemplis informabat, et docebat incredibilia penè de secretis cœlestibus, qui se talem exhibebat, ut solo corpore videretur in terra, cum tota mente in cœlestibus versaretur. In tantumque profecit Christina Rogeri doctrinis, ut speciosus forma præ filiis hominum, Dominus Jesus Christus, sedenti in cella appareret, crucem ferens auream, quam sibi tradens confortavit, præcipiens ne timeret, et dicens, necesse fore hanc portare crucem omnibus qui Jerusalem ire volunt, promisitque, quod ipsam crucem post modicum tempus ab ea resumeret, quibus dictis ab oculis ejus disparuit.

Quam visionem cum Rogero retulisset, cœpit fieri præ gaudio, ita dicens, letare mecum (ait sermone vulgari) 'Myn gode Sonendays doghter,' id est, 'mea bona Dominicæ diei filia,' quia vestra tribulatio est in proximo terminanda; evenitque sicut homo Dei locutus est. Rogerus igitur collecta spe ex multitudine gratiarum quas noverat inesse Christina, illam sui hæredem heremi post se relinquere cogitabat, illa verò per visum monita, et à beata Maria confortata, cognovit quod ad incolatum habitaculi Rogero successura foret.

NUM. III.

Miraculum factum per Rogerum Heremitam.

[Ibid.]

Eo tempore venit ad partes Thurstanus archiepiscopus Eboracensis amator et fautor castorum studiorum, et Rogero propter sanctitatem suam, fidus et devotus amicus.
 Huic Rogerus nuntiavit Christinae propositum, rogans ut illi impendere dignaretur adiutorium. Episcopus verò mandavit, ut mitteret ad eum virginem, volens cum ea de suo proposito secretum habere colloquium. Rogerus ergo ad eum fecit accersiri Godescallum de Caddundonia, et uxorem ejus, homines sibi familiarissimos, et rogavit eos, ut revertentes in crastino Cristinam deducerent ad Redburnam, quia illuc archiepiscopus fuerat accessurus. Quibus votis suis gratanter annuentibus, dixit homo Dei, 'Ite domum securi, quoniam orabo pro vobis, et fortasse non pœnitebit vos laboris quem suscipitis pro ancilla Dei.'

Abierunt ergo uno tantum equo super quem venerant ambo contenti, nitentesque jumento contra ascensum per devia memoris, sella solutis cingulis, ad terram labitur cum sessoribus. Nox erat, equus aufugerat, ipsi sine comite ac gravati senio, nec si dies esset sequi valentes, quid facerent? tandem derelicta ipsa sella, quia nequibant eam tenere, pedites et palpitando per tenebras prout poterant cœperunt progrediendo ambulare, contristatique de infortunio ita conquesti sunt, ubi nunc est promissio viri Dei? Vix verbo dicto, ecce equus frenatus et sellatus astitit juxta illos mansuetus, prope quandam præcisum truncum, qui videbatur illic præparatus, ut servis Dei commodaret ministerium ascendendi; quo viso, Deo et famulo suo Rogero gratias egerunt uberes, et ascenso jumento ad domum suam profecti sunt, et mane facto revertens Godescallus ad Rogerum Cristinam duxit ad archiepiscopum, qui Redburnæ hospitabatur. Postque data monita salutis virgini, præsul remisit eam ad Rogerum, quæ cum eo permansit in heremo usque ad ejus obitum, serviens Deo in castitate et innocentia, in humilitate, et patientia, juxta doctrinam suam, donec culmen virtutum omnium attigisset.

Tandem, vocante Deo cui serviebat, Rogerus mundum deserens, viam universæ carnis ingressus est, corpusque ejus delatum est ad monasterium sancti Albani, ubi honore condigno est humatum in arcuato locello qui fit in muro ecclesiæ versus austrum prope chorum fratrum dicti loci. Post cujus obitum cum Cristina multa temptamenta et penè inportabilia sustinisset, tam humana quàm diabolica, et semper fortiter restitisset: apparuit sibi Dominus Jesus Christus in specie parvuli veniens, inter brachia sponsæ suæ, ac per diem integrum manens cum illa sensibilis et visibilis, et extunc omnis temptatio ab illa sic evanuit, ut nunquam ullam temptationem aliquatenus formidaret; deinde cœpit virtute divina, spiritu prophetiæ clarescere, miraculorum patrix existere, in tantum ut fama virtutem ejus totam patriam pervolaret.

De Causis et Fundatione Domus de Markgate.

[Ibid.]

Huius et aliis miraculis abbas incitatus locum monialium de Markgate construxit à fundamentis, dans eidem loco redditus atque decimas in diversis locis ad sustentationem Cristinæ suæ dilectricis, et sororum congregatarum ibidem ad militandum sub regimine doctrinaque Cristinæ, quamvis conventus sancti Albani pro talibus expensis et collationibus murmuraret. Et cum lapsu temporis eadem cella monialium de Markgate ignis sensisset extrema dispendia, abbas nichilominus totam cellam cum domibus necessariis reparavit. Accidit abbatem in antelucano vigilantem in lecto suo sedere, et quibusdam profuturis intendere, et circumducens oculos vidit manifestè Virginem Christi, neque enim erat sompnum, suo assistentem capiti, velut esset sollicita qualiter abbas se erga Deum haberet. Manè facto, abbas advocat quandam parentem Christinæ, Leticiam nomine, profectionem ad virginis heremum, quæ et ipsa sanctimonialem ducebat vitam, et dicit ei, Vade, dicito dilectæ dominæ meæ Christinæ, quia manifeste novi sollicitudinem suam erga me, verè enim vigilando, vidi quod hac nocte me visitaverit; annexuitque locum tempus et horam. Estimabat enim hæc Cristinam latere. Adveniens Leticia injunctum mandatum cœpit exsolvere. Itaque ad primum verbum non ampliùs respondit Cristina, vocansque sororem Margaretam, Dic, ait, audiente Leticia, quid ego tibi dixi primo diluculo de abbate. Et illa, Dixisti domina quod hac nocte pro certo tali loco et hora ad eum visendum veneris. Et dixisti insuper quod si tale quid in tempore beati Gregorii accidisset, mandasset illud memoriæ, quamvis res parva sit et memoria parum digna; ego respondi, non parum quid esse, sed mirabile, et posteris memorabile. Audiens hæc Leticia Deum in sanctis suis glorificavit.

Benedictine Priory of St. Nicholas at Exeter ; A Cell to the Abbey of Battle.

N the "Liber de Situ Ecclesiæ Belli," from which copious extracts have already been given in the Appendix to the Account of Battle, King William the Conqueror undoubtedly appears as the donor to that monastery of St. Olave's church in Exeter, together with certain lands adjoining. Upon these adjacent lands, not long after, a cell was built at the charges of the parent monastery, dedicated to St. Nicholas, to which were removed the religious who had previously been attached to the church of Culun-tun (now Columpton) in Devonshire, also among the Conqueror's donations to Battle abbey.^a Tanner says the foundation was for six Monks.^b

Dugdale and Dodsworth, in the Charters to St. Nicholas Exeter which form the opening of the Appendix to the present Account, ascribed the first, which certainly belongs to William the Conqueror, to King William Rufus. It merely grants St. Olave's church, with the lands of Sireford and Cheneberie, to the monks of Battle.^c The second charter, which, from internal evidence, belongs to King William Rufus, notices the construction of the church in honour of St. Nicholas :^d probably about the year 1089.

King Henry the First was a benefactor to the church and monks of St. Nicholas by the donation of certain lands at Relisdon which had belonged to Heraldus de Exonia :^e and King John, in 1204, gave them the territory of Bradeham, or Brodeham, which had previously been held by the monks under the crown, but by the annual payment of the sum of fifty shillings.^f

From a letter addressed by Archbishop Anselm to Osbern bishop of Exeter, A. D. 1103, it appears that the religious here were at first somewhat molested by the secular clergy of Exeter, and that even the bishop had forbidden them to ring their bells agreeably to the custom of the Benedictine order. Anselm rebuked the indiscretion of both ; inculcated charity ; and recommended the religious to the confidence as well as the protection of the venerable bishop.^g

Izacke says, in 1276 an inquisition was taken at Exeter for the king, touching lands and liberties concealed ; and 'twas found, by verdict, that Croiditch alias Lammas fair was divided into two moieties or half-payments between King John and the commonalty of Exeter ; and that King John resumed or took the whole into his own hands, and gave it to the prior and convent of St. Nicholas within the said city, "sed quo jure non constat."^h

^a See the present Volume, p. 243. "Speed makes an Hospital of St. Nicholas, as well as a Priory, and has distinguished them by two valuations, which are both the valuations of the Priory ; one, the total, and the other, the clear. In Dugdale's valuation, and the Book of Pensions, there is mention of the Hospital of St. Nicholas ; but the Charters, Taxatio Lincoln. Henry Sulgrave, and the old writings, refer constantly to the Prior and Monks of St. Nicholas. Risdon, vol. i. p. 18, says, here were two priories of St. Nicholas ; but, by his own account, they seem to be the same House which he makes Cell to the abbey of Battle." Tann. Notit. Mon.

^f Num. IV. In the Placita de Quo Waranto, com. Devon. 9 et 10 Edw. I. we read : "Galfridus de la Hull et Maysanta uxor ejus summoniti fuerunt ad respondendum domino regi de Placito Quo Waranto clamant habere bedellariam in orientali parte Hundredi domini Regis de Buddelegh sine licentia, &c. Et Galfridus et Maysanta veniunt et dicunt quod ipsi tenent quoddam tenementum in Brodham in sokemanria de domino rege, et per servitium essendi bedellus in orientali parte prædicti Hundredi. Dicit etiam quod prædictum manerium

Et dicunt quod semper post tempus illud prædicta Maysanta et omnes antecessores sui tenuerunt prædictum tenementum per servitium prædictum, et eo waranto clamant habere prædictam bedellariam. Et quia licet domino regi bedelles suos facere in Hundredis suis et alibi pro voluntate sua, ideo dies datus est eis coram domino rege a die Pasch. in unum mensem apud Westm. de audiendo judicio suo, &c." ^h Under the year 1277 he adds, "This fair being divided into moieties, and belonging to the prior of St. Nicholas and the earl of Devon, in course of time it returned again to the king's hands, namely

Copies of two pleadings in Quo Waranto respecting the privileges of the monks in Brodeham will be found in the Appendix to the present Account.^a The latter of these distinctly refers to a charter of King William the Conqueror.

Jenkins notices a charter granted to the prior for an annual Fair to be held on the festival of St. Nicholas.^b

PRIORS of ST. NICHOLAS EXETER.

Whether GUNTERUS and CONO are to be considered as the first priors of St. Nicholas, as Mr. Oliver states in his "Historic Collections relating to the Monasteries in Devon," may admit of doubt; though there can be none of their being monks of Battle, and of their having planned the settlement of the religious here.^c Gunterus, or Gunterius, was made abbat of Thorney, in Cambridgeshire, as early as A. D. 1085.

The names of the rest of the priors are here given from Mr. Oliver's work, the access of that gentleman to the Episcopal Registers of the See of Exeter having supplied a catalogue far more complete than that which had previously been compiled by the Editors of the Monasticon.

PETER occurs Prior in 1212.

ROBERT DE CUMBWELL is said to have resigned in 1258. His successor was

ROBERT DE RYE, who succeeded that year on the 29th of June.

ROGER occurs, without date. He succeeded to the abbacy of Battle in 1318.

WILLIAM DE BURN succeeded Aug. 28, 1318, and resigned soon after.

ROBERT, alias LAURENTIUS DE SUING, was appointed Jan. 14th, 1320.^d

JOHN DE GORDON resigned in 1334. In a MS. in the Harleian collection, num 3586, fol. 55 b, he is called JOHN DE BORDENNE: where he occurs about A. D. 1330.

JOHN DE BRECHON succeeded Sept. 9th, 1334. He died in 1349. On the 26th of March in which year

JOHN DE WYE was admitted prior.

THOMAS SUYNG succeeded June 6th, 1349. He resigned in 1353: on the 17th of April in which year

MATTHEW OF EXETER was admitted to succeed. Upon whose resignation

GILBERT DE LYNDSEYE succeeded Dec. 3d, 1359. He continued prior, loaded with age and infirmities, in 1388: soon after which

ROBERT BREGGE was appointed, who continued till 1396. Upon his death

THOMAS HANKHERSTE became prior May 23d, 1396. He resigned in 1400: on June 3d in which year

WILLIAM MERSHE succeeded: upon whose promotion to the abbacy of Battle,

WILLIAM BECKET was appointed prior in 1404.

JOHN UNDERDOWNE was admitted, upon the death of Becket, June 7th, 1414. Upon his death

JOHN DALYNGTON was instituted March 9th, 1419. He died in 1436.

STEVEN FEVERSHAM was admitted Jan. 13th, 1437.

JOHN NEWTON succeeded in 1460. Upon his election to the abbacy of Battle

RICHARD WYLSHAM succeeded June 28th, 1463.

JOHN HERFORD died prior in the autumn of 1493.

WILLIAM WESTFELD was instituted Oct. 28th in the same year. He also afterwards became abbat of Battle.

JOHN LEWYS was admitted prior April 10th, 1499.

WILLIAM COLUMPTON, the last prior, succeeded Jan. 10th, 1522. He was still living in 1553, 2 and 3 Phil. and Mar.^e

Dugdale states the revenues of this priory to have amounted in the 26th of Henry VIII. to 147l. 12s. Speed gives the amount at 1547. 12s. The abstract of the Ecclesiastical Valor, in the Appendix, reconciles the two accounts. The seven pounds added by Speed being the payment of recognition from the convent to the abbat and monks of Battle.

The site of this monastery was granted in the 32d of Henry VIII. to Sir Thomas Denys, of Holcombe Burnell, knight.^f

Izacke says, "3d Edw. VI. 1549. The city purchased from the crown, the fee or manor of St. Nicholas within this city, a priory lately dissolved by act of parliament."

Bishop Tanner refers to a REGISTER of this priory, which was formerly, though it certainly is not now, in the Cottonian collection: "Registrum hujus prioratus olim penes dom. Will. Le Neve regem armorum; nunc in bibl. Cotton."

Mr. Oliver, in his 'Historic Collections,' p. 3, says, "In fol. 91—2 of Bishop Bronescombe's Register, three records are extracted from the ancient book called 'The Leger Prioratus Sancti Nicholai Exon.' a book that seems to have perished in 1731, Oct. 23d, at the fire in the Cotton library. These three records are transcribed by Wm. Jermyms, the registrar temp. reginæ Elizab. The first is an amicable composition between the dean and chapter of St. Peter's Exeter, and the prior and monks of St. Nicholas, respecting certain tithes issuing from two mills, and the fishery of the river Exe, near St. Clement's chapel, 'de Piscaria super aqua quæ dicitur Exe prope capellam sancti Clementis.' The Chapter resigns all claim and pretension to the said tithes, on condition that the prior and convent pay them forty pence sterling, viz. twenty pence at Michaelmas, and twenty pence at Easter. This composition was made whilst Simon de Apulia was bishop, consequently between 1214 and 1224. The second refers to a taxation, soon after, by Richard Blondy, chancellor to Bishop Brewer, for the better support of the vicar of Cadbury. The prior of St. Nicholas is directed to allow the vicar certain houses on the north side of the church, four acres of land, and a part of the tithes. The third is an agreement between the prior and Julian, rector of Thorverton, respecting the tithes of the mill of Cadbury. The prior agrees to pay him sixpence in lieu of tithes."

Tanner adds the following references, respecting this priory, to public Records:

"Cart. 6 Joan. n. 67, pro terris in Bradenham.

"Claus. 2 Edw. III. m. 6 vel 7. Pat. 19 Edw. III. p. 1, m. . . .

K. Henry VIII. the one upon the suppression of the said priory in 1535 (which by purchase returned to the city), and the other by the attainder of Henry Courtenay marquis of Exeter 29 regni 1537, which part, as an appendant or parcel of the manor of Toppinsham, belongs to the king." See Izacke's memorials of Exeter, 8°. Lond. 1724, pag. 19.

^b Jenkins's History of Exeter, 8°. Exet. 1806, p. 28.

^c See the Append. to Battle monastery in the present volume, p. 243.

^e Mr. Sharpe's Roll calls St. Nicholas's piory an hospital. "SANCTI NICHOLAI EXON. nuper Hospitale. Annuit. Thomæ Denys militis per annum xxvj. viij^d. Petri Courteney per annum xl^s. Penc. Willielmi Columpton nuper Prior ibidem xx^{li}."

^f The following is the abstract of the grant to Sir Thomas Denys, taken from the Repertories to the Originalia in the Exchequer:

"Com. civit. Exon. Devon. Rex xxv^{to}, die Junij concessit Thomæ Denys militi de Holcombe Burnell domum et scitum nuper monasterii sive prioratus Exoniæ, ac duo molendina et terr', &c. in Exonia, Cheriton, Fitz Payne, Pynhoo, et Combe Sancti Nicholai in comitatu Devonæ, necnon manerium de Bowleigh, ac omnia messuagia, &c. in Cadbury, ac etiam manerium de Brounstone alias Brampton, et terr', &c. in Modbury. Ac etiam grangiam de Torrewood, et terr', &c. in Torremohun, in dicto comitatu Devonæ, habendum ei et hæredibus suis."

Although this grant to Sir Thomas Denys is distinctly noticed by Tanner, Jenkins, in his History of Exeter, published so recently as 1806, says, (p. 347, Note,) "We have no accounts to whom the buildings and site of this priory were granted at the Reformation; but from its being different freeholds, the deeds of which reach no further back than the reign of Edw. VI. it was probably sold in different lots, the Chamber purchasing great part; and they are still proprietors of some of the lands, St. Nicholas and Lammas fairs, and the oat-market, which were part of its ancient demesnes."

- Cart. 2 Hen. V. p. 2, m. 7.
Pat. 18 Hen. VI. p. 3, m. 13."

A few documents relating to the manor of St. Nicholas at Exeter are also stated to remain among the papers in the Council Chamber of that city.

Of the SEAL of this monastery we have the following notice in Oliver's Historic Collections:

"On the 8th of November, 1400, a little box, containing the conventual seal, was imprudently left in the Chapter-house, and was stolen in the course of that day.

"The Seal is thus described in fol. 51 of Bishop Stafford's Register: 'Sigillum rotundum fuerat, habens in medio insculptum ad instar et similitudinem Castri quadrati habentis in sui medio unam turrim excelsam, et in angulis suis alias turres bassiores et propugnacula, et super castrum hujusmodi in unâ parte vetus Scutum Armorum regis Angliæ cum tribus leopardis, et in alia parte gladium erectum, et in ejusdem gladii cuspidem sive punctum coronam regiam, ac subter castrum draconem gradientem insculptam. In circumferentia vero sive circulo ejusdem sigilli scriptum erat sic:

SIGILLUM . ECCLE . SÆI . NICHOLAI . EXONIE."

"Bishop Stafford required that the sacrilegious robbers should restore it within fifteen days, under pain of excommunication; in the mean while, all deeds and leases, sealed after the 8th of November, were to be considered null and void. As soon as the convent seal was returned, the prior was charged to break it up and destroy it, as another seal was to be made 'de diversa sculpturâ, et de alia formâ.'"

The seal, however, was recovered, and was used till the dissolution of the Priory. Amongst the records of the Corporation of Exeter, Mr. Oliver found it attached to a bond of William Collumptom, the last prior, bearing date 10th August, 1528.^a

The PRIORY of St. Nicholas, by far the most extensive of the monastic establishments in Exeter, was situated in the parish of St. Olave. Considerable traces of its ruins may be still seen, though not sufficient to make the original ground plan ascertainable. The greater part of the enclosure is yet called The Mint, which Mr. Oliver conjectures to be a corruption of The Minster or Monastery. A neat catholic chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas, stands on part of the site of the conventual church: it was opened for public worship in January, 1792; and, in digging for the foundation, several graves, parts of monuments, mutilated inscriptions, and quantities of carved mouldings, were discovered.^b

Jenkins, in his History of Exeter, 8°. Exet. 1806, says the prior's lodgings and some of the cells had been converted into a dwelling-house, then recently inhabited by N. E. Cosserat, Esq. St. Bartholomew's burial ground, he adds, was once the orchard and garden belonging to the priory.

Benedictine Nunnery of Malling,

IN

KENT.

W^{EST}, or Town Malling, was given, about the year 945, by Edmund king of the Angles and Mercians,^a to Burhric bishop of Rochester, by the description of a small portion of his land called Meallingas, containing three ploughlands, it was granted for the good of Edmund's soul, in perpetual inheritance, in augmentation of the revenues of the monastery of St. Andrew, together with its different appurtenances in fields, woods, pastures, &c.^b

Hasted says, this land did not continue long in the possession of the church of Rochester, being wrested from it in the time of the Danish wars; and when William the Conqueror had attained the crown, he gave it to Odo bishop of Baieux, his half-brother, from whom it was recovered, together with the church of Malling, in the solemn assembly of the whole county, held on this occasion by the king's command at Pinenden heath, in 1076, by Archbishop Lanfranc, who afterwards restored it to Bishop Gundulph and the church of St. Andrew; which gift was confirmed by Archbishops Anselm and Boniface.^c

In Domesday, MELINGETES (as it is called) is described under the general title of the bishop of Rochester's lands.

Gundulph bishop of Rochester, according to Philpot

^a Son of Edward the Elder by Edgiva his third wife. He succeeded Athelstan in 941, and died in 948.

MALLING.

A description of a small portion of his land called Malling, containing three plough lands, it was granted by the good of Edward the Confessor in perpetual inheritance, as augmented the revenues of the monastery of St. Andrew, together with the fields, woods, pastures, &c.

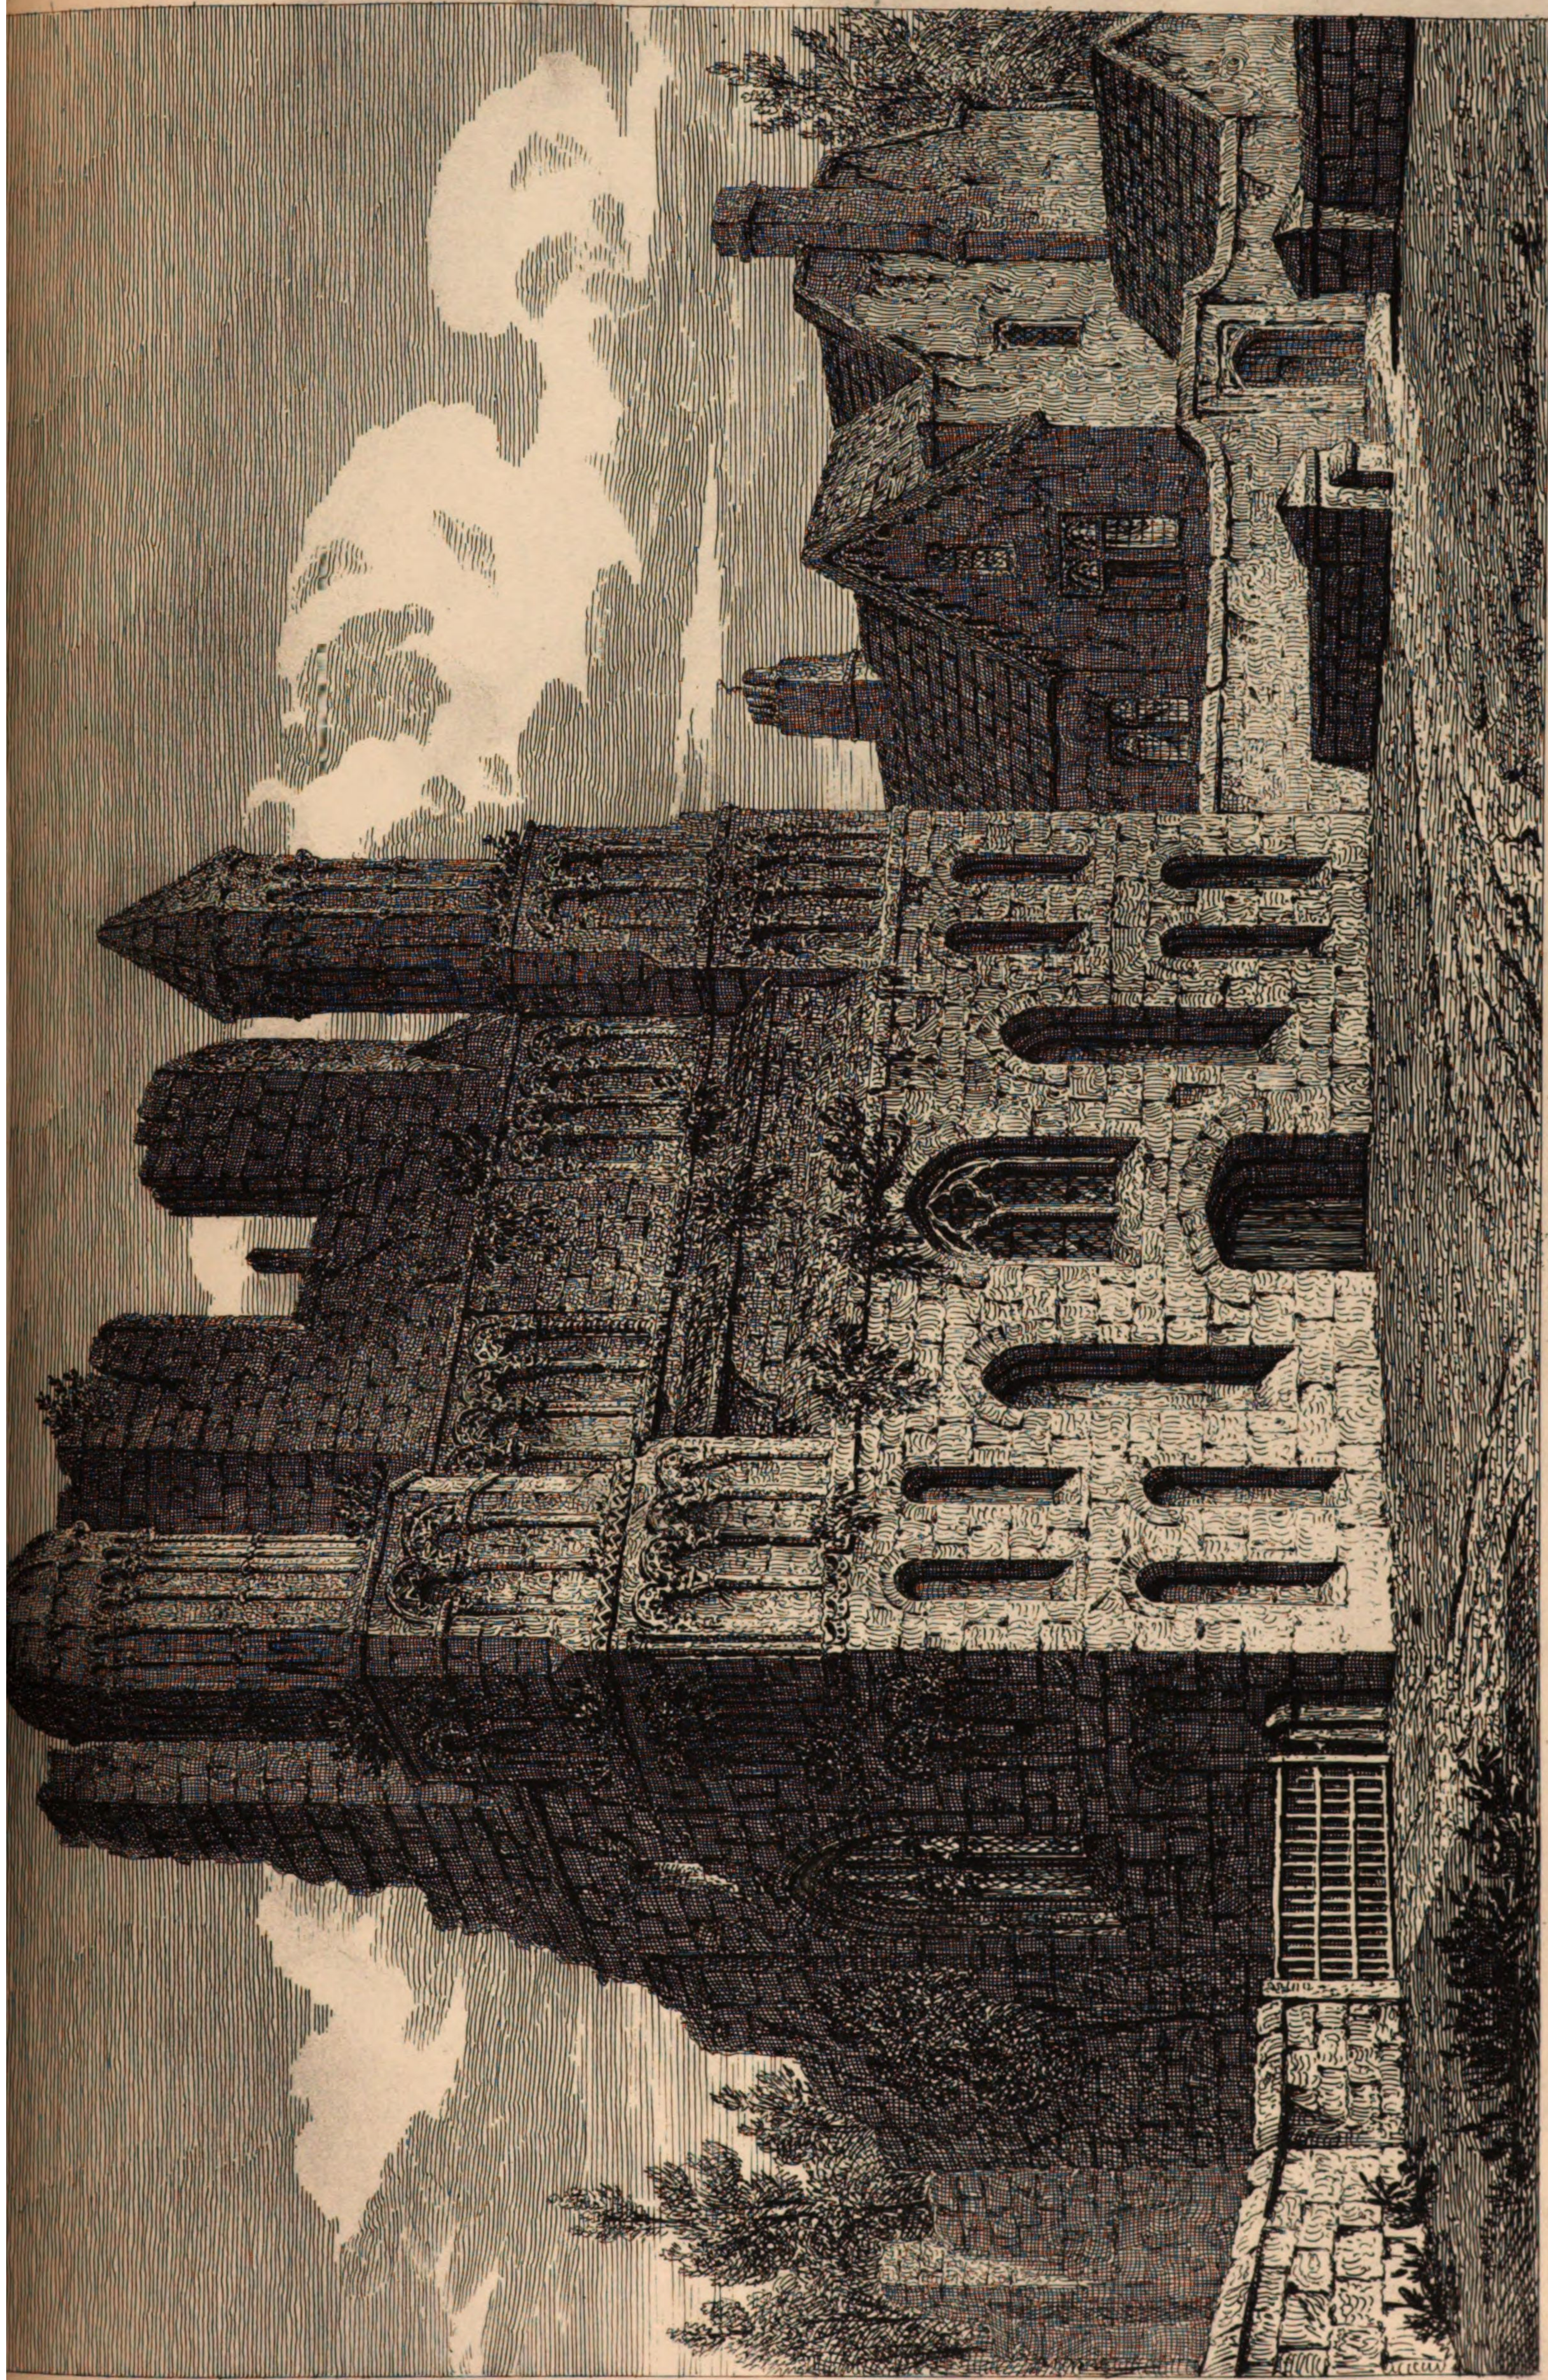

Hasted says, this land did not continue long in possession of the church of Rochester, being wrested from the time of the Danish wars; and when William the Conqueror had attained the crown, he gave it to the Bishop of Beauvais, his half-brother, from whom it was conveyed, together with the church of Malling, to the assembly of the whole county, held on the estate of King's command at Pimden heath, in 1070, by Archbishop Lanfranc, who afterwards restored it to the church of St. Andrew; which gift was confirmed by Archbishops Anselm and Boniface.

In Domesday, MALLINGTUN (the town of Malling) is called under the general title of the bishop of Rochester.

Gundulph bishop of Rochester, mentioning St. Andrew's and Hasted, in the fourth year of the reign of William Rufus, A. D. 1090, having founded a monastery of nuns in this parish to the honour of the Virgin Mary,^a gave the manor and church of Malling to it, with other possessions, for its endowment.

This donation was confirmed by King William Rufus and several of his successors, viz. King Henry I. King Stephen, and King Henry II. and by King Edward the Third in his twenty-first year; by the archbishops Anselm, Ralph, William, and Thomas Becket; and by Bishop Gundulph, and several of the succeeding bishops of Rochester, viz. Ralph, Arnulf, John, Ascelin, Walter, Gualeran, Benedict, and Richard, who confirmed likewise to this monastery, and the nuns there, Mallinges Parva, with the market of the said village, the church of St. Leonard with its appurtenances, the church of St. Mary in Mallinges, and all other possessions belonging to this monastery.^b

In 1190, both the town and nunnery of Malling were consumed by fire.^c

Among the Placita de Quo Waranto of the 6th of Edward the First, we find the abbess of Malling renewing the establishment of her right before the king's justiciaries not only to liberties and franchises of the most extensive kind in East and West Malling, but to the holding of a market in every week on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and of three fairs in the year, on the eve and day of St. Peter ad Vincula, on the eve and day of St. Martin, and on the eve and day of St. Leonard.^d

Other exemplifications of the general liberties and franchises of this monastery occur among the pleadings in Quo Waranto of the 21st Edw. I. A. D. 1292.^e

In the 15th of Edward III. the temporalities of the abbess in East and West Malling were valued at 45*l*.

In 1349, we are told, the bishop of Rochester going on a visitation, found the monasteries of Lesnes and Malling so decayed as hardly to appear restorable. "Anno xxiv. regni regis Edwardi III. [Christi M.CCC.XLIX.]—Episcopus Roffensis abbatias et monasteria de Liesnes et Mallyng visitans, invenit ea ita destructa per malam diutinam custodiam, quod durante isto sæculo usque ad diem Judicii creditur ea non posse reparari."^f

Among the "Jura Episcopatus Roffensis, anno M.CCC.LX." printed in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, tom. i. pp. 388, 389, we read, "Item percipiet præfatus episcopus de abbatissa de Mallynges unum aprum, ut creditur, et certam portionem ceræ pro decimis vinearum de Hallynges."

ABBESSES of MALLING.

AVICE, or AVICIA, the first abbess, appointed by Bishop Gundulph, is mentioned in the Textus Roffensis.^g

. DE BADLESMERE. In 1321, we are told, 15 Edw. II. the bishop of Rochester, at the king's request, to whom the nuns had made complaint that their monastery was ruined by the bad management of their abbess the sister of Bartholomew de Badlesmere, visited it, and heard the complaints against her; on which she resigned, and the bishop proceeded to an election, or rather nomination of a new abbess, in compliance with which the convent chose as her successor

AGNES DE LEYBURNE: the usual form of election, or rather nomination, being dispensed with.^h

In 1324, Agnes de Leyborne died; soon after which, the bishop coming to Malling, at the unanimous request of the nuns, appointed

LORA DE RETLYNG to be abbess, and the next day gave her his benediction; though he did it much against his will, knowing her to be ignorant and unfit for the office. He moreover inhibited the new abbess from giving a corrody to her maid servant, as had been customary; and sequestered the seal of the convent, forbidding it to be used without the bishop's licence for that purpose having been first obtained.ⁱ

In the 23d of Edward III. A. D. 1348, during the great pestilence, the bishop of Rochester made two abbesses here, who presently died. Their names do not appear to have been preserved. After the death of the second of these abbesses, there being only eight nuns, four professed and four not professed, remaining in the monastery, the Bishop committed the custody of the spirituals and temporals to two of them, as there was not a proper person for the office of abbess.^k

JOANE MOONE occurs abbess April 10th, 1493.^m

ELIZABETH REDE occurs, according to Willis, in the 23d of Henry VIII. 1531.ⁿ She occurs again in the Ecclesiastical Valor of the 26th of Henry VIII.^o

MARGARET VERNON was the last abbess.

This abbey was surrendered into the king's hands, together with its possessions, by the abbess and convent, on October 29th, in the 30th Hen. VIII. A. D. 1538; at which time it was valued at 245*l*. 10*s*. 2½*d*. annual rent, according to Speed,^p and 218*l*. 4*s*. 2½*d*. clear value, according to Dugdale. On December the 7th in the same year, the king assigned the following pensions to the abbess and nuns:

To Margaret Vernon, abbess, per annum	40	0	0

^d See Num. V.

^e Num. VI. By these and such like favours granted to it, Hasted says, Malling, which at the first foundation of the monastery, was plain fields, and almost without an inhabitant, became exceedingly populous from the numbers who flocked to it from all parts, who building themselves houses here, formed a large village, well suited for trade, to the no small emolument of the nuns: whence it soon lost its name of Malling Parva, which was for some time transferred to the neighbouring parish of East Malling, as appears by some grants, &c. of this time and King Edward III. See Hasted, ut supr. pp. 216, 217.

^f Will. de Dene Hist. Roffensis, Angl. Sac. tom. i. p. 377.

^g See Num. III. Gundulph is said to have governed this abbey himself during his life; and only to have appointed Avice when he was dying.

^h "Anno M.CCC.XXI. in crastino festi S. Crucis Agnes de Leybourn abbatissa de Malling obiit; et die Sabbati quatuor temporum sequenti episcopus apud Mallyng ultro progrediens, eodem die monialibus omnibus instantissime acclamantibus, Loram de Retlyng, omni ingenio et discretione prælati ac regimini carentem, in abbatissam episcopus præfecit licet in vitus sciens eam insufficientem et ignaram; et in crastino eam benedixit: cujus benedictio Monasterii fuit maledictio. Episcopus tunc Abbatissæ inhibuit, ne ancillæ suæ corrodium daret, sicut fieri male consuevit; earumque sigillum commune sequestravit, inhibens ne præter ipsius episcopi licentiam petitam et obtentam eo uteretur." Ibid. p. 364.

The site as well as all the lands of this monastery were granted, in the 31st of Henry VIII. by the king to Archbishop Cranmer, in exchange for various possessions belonging to his see in Kent and Surrey.^b Tanner, by some mistake, says in the 32d Henry VIII.^c In the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reign they were resumed by, or rather again exchanged with the crown. In the 12th of Elizabeth the site of Malling abbey was granted to Henry Cobham, alias Brook.^d

Frazer Honywood, Esq. The west end of the abbey church, in the Norman style, also remains. The editor of the account of Kent, in "The Beauties of England and Wales," says some stone coffins have been dug up here, together with divers rings and other trinkets. Over an entrance doorway is sculptured in stone a heart gouttè de sang, transfixed by a spear. On the gateway is a shield, bearing ermine, a crozier in bent sinister, on a chief three annulets.

The abbey grounds were watered by a stream, which flows from Nether Well in the hamlet of St. Leonards.

The buildings originally consisted of two quadrangular courts with cloisters, a chapter-house, hall, and dormitory. The edifice considered as the prison for the abbess's territorial jurisdiction stands at some distance west of the remains of the abbey church. Certain excavations which mark the site of the fish ponds may still be seen in the meadows which form a part of the ancient inclosure.

IN nomine Dei summi et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi, ipso quoque in perpetuo regnante disponenteque suaviter omnia. Quapropter ego Eadmundus rex Anglorum, necnon et Merciorum, meo amabili episcopo nomine Burhric, concedo aliquantulum mei telluris ubi dicitur Meallingas, trium videlicet aratorum, pro remedio animæ meæ in sempiternam hæreditatem, ad augmentum monasterii ejus, quod est dedicatum in honore sancti Andreae apostoli, qui fuit germanus Petri et socius in passione, cum omnibus rebus ad eam pertinentibus, cum campis, silvis, pratis, pascuis, necnon et aucupiiis, et hoc quoque cum concilio optimatum et principum meorum quorum nomina infra scripta reperiuntur. Benedictine Priory of Tutbury,

IN

STAFFORDSHIRE.

THE former edition of the Monasticon, Prynne in his Papal Usurpations,^a Rymer,^b and Tanner,^c all recognize the Monastery of Tutbury as of the Benedictine Order: Dugdale, however, in his Baronage^d and History of Warwickshire,^e and Shaw in his History of Staffordshire,^f speak of its inhabitants as Cluniac monks, without quoting any authority in support of the opinion.

It was founded by Henry de Ferrariis, or Ferrers, according to some accounts in or about the year 1080, but more probably in the time of King William Rufus, in whose reign the charter of foundation was evidently framed.^g It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary; and became a cell to the abbey of St. Peter super Divam in Normandy.^h

The foundation charter of Henry de Ferrers gives to this church and the monks therein the towns of Mershton and Dubbigge, the latter as the donation of his wife Berta; the town of little Brocton; the parish of the Castle of Tutbury; the tithe of his toll there, of his wine, venison, and pannage; free fishery; the tithe of honey; and the tithes of his demesnes of Tutbury, Scropton, Rolleston, Barton, Sapirton, Moginton, Overton, &c. in Derbyshire; the church and tithes of Matherfeld; the church of Norburie; and the tithes of Brassinton and Tissinton. The copy of this charter transcribed from the duke of Devonshire's Registerⁱ finishes with a quatrain, the three last lines of which must have been added at a later period.

Earl Robert de Ferrariis, or Ferrers, junior, grandson of the founder, by a charter granted about the year 1141, confirmed the preceding gifts; adding other large donations, the tithes of Newborough, &c.^k

William earl de Ferrers, son and successor of Robert, confirmed all the former grants of his ancestors.^l He also gave to the church a bovat of land in Merstone,^m the tithe of profits arising from his forest of Duffeld,ⁿ and the churches of Thorp, Wimondham, Stapleford, and Coston, in Leicestershire.^o

William earl de Ferrers, son of William, granted the tithes arising from his forest of Nedewode:^p with another charter respecting the tithes of the forest of Duffeld.^q He also gave to the prior and convent a hermitage at Agarsley.^r

Robert de Ferrers, the last earl of Derby of the name, confirmed all the donations of his ancestors to Tutbury. In his grant he notices William son of Robert de Ferrers, William his grandfather, and William his father. He also granted to the church and monks a rent of five marks of silver out of his mills at Tutbury, &c.^s

Among the benefactions to this monastery of a smaller kind,

Sewal de Seyrle gave a culture or small portion of land at Howne:^t

William de Eytone, Knight, gave his park at Dubbigge called le Holt:^u

Sewal the son of Fulcher gave a virgult or yardland near the castle of Tutbury:^x

Robert the son of Everard gave six acres of meadow appertaining to Rolleston:^y

Henry de Ferrers and Margaret his wife, about 1240, granted to this monastery the tithe of the skins of stags taken by the dogs of the Earl de Ferrers, which they had in hereditary right:^z

Henry de Hounul gave fifteen acres of land in his assarts at Roeley:^a

Robert, son of Thomas Folegambe, quitclaimed to the prior and monks all his lands, tenements, &c. in Matherfield (now Mayfield), for which they gave him forty marks sterling:^b

John Kent made a similar release in the same town for fifty marks sterling:^c

Ralph le Fony granted a quarter of a rode of land, and a spring formerly called Blakewelle, in the territory of Tutbury:^d

William Breton gave the prior and convent leave to make certain watercourses through his land, without any interruption, upon forfeiture of forty marks sterling.^e

In the tenure roll of the hundred of Offlow, in the time of Henry III., it is said the prior of Tutbury was enfeoffed by a certain predecessor of the earl of Derby, of land which he held of him in Tutbury, and held plea in the court of every thing, except forbidden distress; and had view of frankpledge without the sheriff, but it was not known by what warrant.^a

By an inquisition taken at the Tower, 18 Edw. I. the king commands John le Forst and John de Leke, keepers of his chase of Needwood, that the prior of Tutbury should have three carts twice a day in the said forest, to carry green wood for new buildings and repairs, &c. according to former right. Also common pasture for his cattle at all times of the year; and tithe of hunting, pannage, honey, &c.^b

Henry de Hambury gave ten acres of land, with their appurtenances, in Meriton, in the 14th Edw. III.^c

In the year 1230, a composition was made between Nicholas prior of Tutbury and the convent, as follows: viz. that the prior should find annually for their kitchen twenty-six marks of silver: i. e. at the feast of St. Michael, of the farm of the burgesses of Tutbury, xxvij^s. ix^d.; of the tithe of the market, xvij^d.; and of William, chaplain of Tutbury, xx^s.; of Ralph le Foun, ij^s.; of Ansedel, xij^d.; of William, chaplain of Barton, ij^s.; of Roger de Dun, vj^s. viij^d.: at the Purification of the Virgin Mary, of the mill of Matherfield, liij^s. iv^d.; of the chaplain of Tutbury, xx^s.; of Gilbert de Merston, x^s. iiij^d.: at Easter, of the tithe of the market, xvij^s.; of Matherfield mill, liij^s. iiij^d.; of the chaplain of Tuttebury, xx^s.: and at the feast of St. John Baptist, of Matherfeld mill, liij^s. iiij^d.; of the chaplain of Tutbury, xl^s. And, if the said money chanced not to be duly paid, the Prior was to make up the deficiency out of his treasury. Also he was to find them xxx. good live hogs, except one for himself, if the year should prove a very fruitful one. If the year did not prove so fruitful, he was to find ten sufficient live oxen in lieu of the hogs. The prior was also to provide them six sextaries (sagimuns) annually, and forty-five cheeses: likewise three pounds of pepper, and three of mustard, and one sextary of salt at the feast of St. John. Also in Advent five bushels of white beans, and at Easter one quarter of the same: likewise a quarter of flour. And on the day of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary he was to provide the great feast.^d

The taxation of the temporalities of this priory in 1220 was 27*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*^e

In the 21st Edw. I. amongst the taxations of the goods spiritual and temporal of the clergy in the archdeaconries of Leicester, Derby, Stafford, &c. the priory of Tutbury is stated to have therein lands, rents, &c. taxed at about 60*l.*^f

In the 18th of Edw. II. the extent of the lands, &c. of this priory in the county of Derby was as follows:

The manor of Dovebrige, with the appurtenances (as more fully recited in the record and register of Tutbury), amounting in the whole to lxxij^{li}. xix^s. v^d. ob.

And the vicarage of the same viij. marks.

Edulveston; a capital messuage, with the appurtenances, and other lands there, xx^{li}. ij^s. vij^d.

Osmundeston; rents, services, &c. there, xij^{li}. vij^s. ix^d.

Merston; a capital messuage there, with divers lands, &c. xxij^{li}. xj^s. vij^d. q.

Likewise the vicarage, v. marks.

Brocton; a capital messuage there, with the appurtenances, and divers lands and rents, &c. xij^{li}. xiv^s. viij^d. ob.

And the advowson of that church, xx^{li}.

Ednaston and Holinton; a capital messuage, with divers lands, rents, and services, &c. xvj^{li}. xvij^s. vij^d.

Tuttebur'. Of the tenement of Robert de Mulneton, an annual rent of the same, and for eels, xl^s.

In the forest of Duffield and Schirle, xvij^{li}. viij^s.

In 22d Edw. II.^g the extent of the property of this priory in Staffordshire was nearly as follows:

In Tutbury itself, lands, &c. amounting to viij^{li}. viij^s.

The manor of Matherfield (now Mayfield), xj^{li}. xvj^s. vj^d.

The clear value of the church (the canons of Lichfield receiving vj^{li}. xij^s. iiij^d. from thence), xl^s.

The free rents of Matherfield, vj^{li}. vij^s. viij^d. ob.

The rents of the nativi, &c. there, about ix^{li}. and

Of the cottages, xxx^s. viij^d.

The manor of Wetton, with its appurtenances, xx^{li}. xvj^s. ij^d. ob.^h

An Extent of the possessions of this priory taken in the third year of Richard II., A. D. 1379, gives the total of the spirituals and temporals at no more than 45*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*ⁱ

According to the Return in the First Fruits Office of the 26th of Henry the Eighth, the sum total of the value at that period amounted to 244*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*^k Tanner says the clear value was 199*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.*^l

ROBERT DE LANGEDON, 6 to 14 Edw. I.

JOHN DE ST. ALBAN, t. Edw. II. It appears by the Patent of the 18th Edw. II. given in the Appendix, that by a composition between the abbat and chapter of St. Peter super Divam and William de Ferrers earl of Derby, in early times, the former presented three persons to the earl as patron of Tutbury, of whom one was chosen to be prior of the cell. Upon John de St. Alban's resignation, however, the sub-prior and convent elected Ralph de Coventry, one of their own body, when the Earl of Derby sued for the Advowson in the king's court, and recovered it: upon which he appointed

THOMAS LONGDON occurs in the 7th of Edw. IV.^a

WILLIAM COVENTRY, 21 Edw. IV. and t. Hen. VII.

ARTHUR MEVERELL, alias THROWLEY, t. Hen. VIII. He, with eight monks, surrendered this priory into the king's hands, Sept. 14th, 1538.^b Meverell's pension at the Dissolution was fifty pounds.^c

At what time Tutbury was made a denizen priory does not appear. That it remained an alien priory to the 1st of Hen. IV. is evident from the writ "de restauratione prioratuum alienigenarum."^d We do not, however, find it suppressed with the rest of the alien houses in the 2d of Henry V. And it is possible that it might have been naturalized in consequence of the advowson or patronage forming a part of the inheritance of the earldom of Derby, then merged in the crown.

Of the REGISTERS of Tutbury priory,

One, from which Dugdale has made copious extracts, is still the property of the duke of Devonshire; to whose

The site of Tutbury priory was granted in the 6th of Edw. VI. to Sir William Cavendish, who pulled down the priory and part of the church, together with the chapel of St. Stephen, to build himself a large house, in which his eldest son, Henry Cavendish, lived in Erdeswick's time. It is at present the property of the duke of Devonshire.

The SEAL of this priory has been engraved by Shaw^b from the impression appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office. On one side, in the centre of the area, is the figure of the Virgin Mary, seated, between the first and second persons of the Trinity, who appear placing a crown upon her head. Above the crown is the dove, the emblem of the Holy Ghost. The whole covered by a canopy of gothic tracery. At the sides are two shields of arms; one Az. a saltire vairé Or and Gules, between four crescents Ar. The other coat is vairé, Or and Gu. Both are considered as belonging to the priory.^c They are exhibited in the initial letter of the present account of Tutbury. The inscription on the obverse of the Seal which remains is, SIGILLUM COMUNE PRIORIS ET CONVENTUS MONASTERII—Shaw continues it with Beate Marie de Tutesbury. On the reverse of the impression the Virgin Mary is again represented, supporting the infant Jesus with her right hand, and holding a sceptre in her left, under a canopy of gothic tracery, similarly arranged to that on the obverse. At the sides, angels instead of shields. In the exergue the half figure of a priest, fronted, praying. All that remains of the inscription on this side is, PIA SERVOS SANCTA MARIA.

The church of Tutbury (as much as remains of it at present) is in the early Norman style. The west end is particularly beautiful.

Pro eo tamen quod inter Willielmum de Ferrariis dudum comitem Derbiæ, dominum Honoris de Tuttebury, ex parte una, et abbatem et capitulum sancti Petri super Diuam in Normannia, unde dictus Prioratus Cella existit ut dicitur, ex altera, super Advocatione prioratus prædicti; per quod scriptum, inter eos confectum, inventum et compertum fuit, quod in singulis vacationibus dicti prioratus, abbas loci prædicti qui pro tempore foret, de assensu capituli sui, tres personas de conventu suo prædicto, prædicto comiti et hæredibus suis dominis Honoris prædicti nominaret, de quibus idem comes et hæredes sui prædicti unum quem voluerint eligerent, et ad prioratum prædictum loci diocesano præsentarent; prout per Compositionem prædictam in cancellaria nostra exhibitam plene liquet; ipsique abbates loci prædicti in singulis vacationibus postmodum hujusmodi personas eidem Comiti et hæredibus suis dominis honoris prædicti, et postmodum Edmundo dudum comiti Lancastriæ cui dominus Henricus quondam rex Angliæ proavus noster, ad cujus manus Honor prædictus certis de causis deveniebat, Honorem illum concessit, habend. et tenend. eidem Edmundo et hæredibus de corpore suo exeuntibus, et etiam Thomæ filio et hæredi ipsius comitis Lancastriæ, et dilecto et fideli nostro Henrico nunc comiti Lancastriæ domino honoris prædicti, virtute scripti prædicti, semper hactenus a tempore confectionis ejusdem nominarunt. Idemque comes Derb. et hæredes sui, ac præfati comites Lancastriæ unum de illis sic nominatis ad prioratum prædictum in singulis vacationibus ejusdem elegerunt, et ipsum sic electum loci diocesano qui pro tempore fuerit successive præsentaverunt; et ipse sic præsentatus absque alicujus temporis interruptione a tempore prædicto in singulis vacationibus prædictis virtute Compositionis et Præsentationis hujusmodi ad Prioratum prædictum, ut dicitur, admissus et installatus fuit in eodem. Et etiam pro eo quod Supprior et conventus prædicti prioratus de Tuttebury in ultima vacatione Prioratus illius per resignationem Johannis de sancto Albano ultimi prioris ejusdem, prædecessoris prædicti Prioris nunc, asserentes se hujusmodi electionem de priore loci prædicti habere debere ad electionem hujusmodi, quamquam nulla electio a tempore foundationis prioratus illius aliter quam prætangitur ibidem facta fuerit, de Radulpho de Coventrie commonacho suo faciend. processerunt; præfatis comes per placitum in curia nostra coram justiciariis nostris de banco per breve nostrum versus prædictos Suppriorem et conventum de advocacione prioratus illius jam motum, advocacionem suam prioratus prædicti per considerationem dictæ curiæ nostræ recuperavit, sicut per tenorem recordi et processus Recuperationis illius in cancellaria nostra residentem est compertum. Ipseque comes postmodum virtute Compositionis et Recuperationis prædictarum, Alexandrum de Porta nunc priorem loci prædicti, quem abbas sancti Petri super Diuam inter alios eidem abbati tunc nominavit, elegit, et ipsum loci diocesano præsentavit, qui ad illum virtute dictæ præsentationis admissus et installatus fuit in eodem. Pro eo itaque quod præfati supprior et conventus machinantes compositionem et judicium super Recuperatione prædicta in dicta curia nostra redditum, ac leges et consuetudines regni nostri Angliæ adnullare, negotium electionis prædictæ ad curiam Romanam versus abbatem sancti Petri super Diuam, qui pars ad dictum judicium non fuit, clandestine sunt prosecuti, et per hujusmodi callidos processus præfatum nunc priorem a possessione sua Prioratus illius proponunt amovere; et insuper litteras, bullas, processus, et alia nobis et coronæ nostræ præjudicialia infra regnum nostrum prædictum jam detulerunt et deferri fecerunt, et per ea quamplura nobis et coronæ nostræ dampnosa prosequi machinantur posse suo in nostri contemptum et præjudicium, et judicii prædicti, ac legum ac jurium coronæ nostræ lesionem, et ipsius nunc comitis exhæredationis periculum manifestum, ac præfati prioris dampnum gravissimum. Considerantes insuper præsentationem prædictam ad nos et hæredes nostros si præfatus nunc comes Lancastriæ sine hærede de corpore suo exeunte obiret, ad nos et hæredes nostros pertinere debere; et etiam placita de jure patronatus in regno nostro Angliæ alibi quam in curiis nostris terminari non posse; eundemque priorem prioratum prædictum pro certa firma nobis ad scaccarium nostrum quamdiu illum in manu nostra contigerit morari reddend. tenere; et volentes eo prætextu tam nostri quam ipsius nunc comitis exhæredationi et præjudicio, et nostri ac ipsius prioris indemnitati, providere, et judicia in curiis nostris reddita; ac etiam jura et leges regni nostri prædicti illæsa, prout vinculo juramenti astringimur manutenere, omnes litteras patentes si quas nobis et dicto judicio præjudiciales iidem monachi in cancellaria nostra impetraverint veritate suppressa, quatenus de facto processerunt, tenore præsentium revocamus; et eidem Priori tenore præsentium licentiam damus specialem, quod ipse omnia quæ ad roborationem juris nostri regii, seu recuperationis, compositionis, vel status sui quem earundem compositionis et præsentationis virtute in dicto prioratu jam possidet valeant expedire, pro se et suos ostendere, notificare, et publicare possit, prout sibi melius videbitur expedire. Ita tamen quod quicquam quod in præjudicium ordinationis in parlamento nostro apud Westmonasterium nuper tento de communi consilio regni nostri Angliæ factæ cedat per hoc nullatenus attemptetur. In cujus, &c. Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium vicesimo primo die Julii. Per petitionem de consilio.

SUFFOLK.

THE Priory was founded in the time of King William the Conqueror, by Robert Malet, one of the barons who accompanied him upon his expedition to England.^a It was dedicated to St. Peter, and was, at first, a cell to the abbey of Bernay, in Normandy.

The founder endowed his monastery with the church of Eye and its appurtenances, a portion of his burgage in the town, and the tithe of the market of Eye; all the churches which then existed or might subsequently be erected in Dunwich;^b the tithes of the vill, and a fair for three days on the feast of St. Laurence. The charter adds, "scolas etiam ejusdem villæ." He also gave the churches of Laxfeud, Badingham, Beuseya, Benehale, Bergebi, and Thorendon; Seckebroc and Weleburne churches, with their chapels; the vills and churches of Stoke and Bادهfeild; the churches and tithes of Playforde, Helegleya, Denenetune, Burendys, Thatingetune, Suttune, Stradebroc, and Wyngefeild; the church of St. Margaret; the churches of Pelecoth, Thornham, and Melles; tithes in Ilstede, Helegestowe, Gosewelde, and of his demesnes in Eye, Stradebroc, Redelingfeud, Dinnetune, Thatingetune, Badingham, Keletune, Helesteya, Leestone, Laxfeud, Bergebi, Seckebroc, Weleburne, Orburne, and Cava; the tithes of pannage in his woods, of all his forests and essarts; the vill of Stoke; land in Alcote; a carucate of land in Badingham; land and a mill in Frasingfeld; the fisheries of Welles, and in Elyn; with soc, sac, tol, them, and infangenethef in Eye, Donewich, &c. After these donations, the founder confirms various gifts made to the monastery by his barons and other persons holding under him in military service. Roger de Huntingfeud gave two parts of the tithe of his demesne in Huntingfeud, Linestede, and Benges. Richard Honel gave two parts of his tithe in Winardestune. William Gulafre gave two parts of his tithe in Hukenholle. Ogerus, of his lands in Bedingfeud and Framlingham. Ernald fitz Roger gave two parts of his tithe in Wytingeham and Wasketon. Ralph Grossus gave two parts of his tithe in Cratinges. William de Roville, the church of St. Botolph Yca, two parts of his tithe in Clakestorpe and Glemham, and a socman in Petlegh. Hugh de Avilers gave two parts of his tithe in Brom and Selfhangre, the church and tithe of the vill, and tithe of thirty acres of land of the fee of the earl of Britany. Odo de Charune gave two parts of his tithes in Giselingham and Reydon. Godard de Giselingham and his wife gave half the church of Giselingham with certain land belonging to it. Hubert de Rikinhale gave two parts of the tithe of Rikelinghale. Hubert de Montecaniso gave his possessions at Jakesleia. Ralph de Glanville offered upon the altar of the church the gift of his house at Jakesleia. Robert Malus, the nephew, gave his tithe in Huntingfeud. Josceline de Heleseia gave the tithe of a hundred acres in Huntingfeud. Geoffrey de Brisewrda gave the church of Briseword with the tithe of his house. Fulcred de Pesenhale gave certain portions of tithes in Pesenhale. Jurdanus gave two parts of the tithes, with the church of Wikebegge and its appurtenances. In further augmentation of which the founder gave the church of Jakesleia, with all the churches and tithes of the manors appertaining to the castle of Eye; with the privilege of

"EYE.

"Eye Saxonice insulam significat, unde et Eye op. nomen accepit, quod esset quasi tota circumdata aquis, quibus quamvis in presentia non usque adeo abundet, loca tamen vicina uliginosa sunt, et hyeme plerumque obducta quis, manifestum inditium stagnantis olim paludis. Veniebant antiquitus et naviculæ onerariæ ad oppidum de portu Chromarico vel ex sinu Chromariæ vicino. Hoc satis vel ex hoc liquet, quod cum monachi Eyenses fossas purgent, inveniunt rudentes majusculas pice oblitæ, clavos nauticos, et cetera id genus arma navalia. Nunc vero naviculæ non perveniunt cis Burstane, qui locus ab Eya duodecim distat miliaribus.

"Eya olim nobile castellum habebat paludibus adjacens, cujus nunc tantum specula et murorum in aliquot locis ruinæ extant. Hoc castellum vi Gulielmi Normanni (ut oppidani prædicant) dirutum fuit, quod ejus violentum imperium non admiserit."

^b The churches of Dunwich underwent a singular fate. From Gardner's Historical Account of that place, we learn that one Church only was subsisting there in the time of King Edward the Confessor, dedicated to St. Felix; but that in the reign of the Conqueror the addition of two more was made. See Gardner, pp. 46, 47. Subsequently, several other churches were founded. The different structures were dedicated to St. Felix, St. Leonard, St. John Baptist, St. Martin, St. Nicholas, St. Peter, St. Michael, St. Bartholomew, and All Saints. The church of St. Felix, together with a cell to Eye which will hereafter be noticed, were undermined and swallowed by the sea very early. Ibid. p. 93. St. Leonard's also is said to have been early lost, Ibid. p. 47. St. Bartholomew's and St. Michael's were destroyed about 1331. "Circa annum Domini m.ccc.xxxi. Ecclesiæ sancti Bartholomæi et sancti Mich. Donewici consumptæ sunt per inundationem aquæ maritimæ, et fructus dictarum ecclesiarum valebant xl^{li}. annuatim quos fructus religiosi prioratus de Eya percipere consueverunt." Reg. Daron, fol. 53 a. See Harl. MS. 639, fol. 71. The last institution to St. Martin's was in 1335; and to St. Nicholas church in 1352. St. John Baptist church, which stood in the heart of the town, was taken down to save the principal materials from the sea in 1540. St. Peter's was not pulled down for the materials till 1702. See Gardner, ut supr. pp. 47, 48. Chapels to St. Anthony, St. Francis, and St. Catherine are also stated to have been swallowed up. Before the 23d of Edw. III. we are assured, that, beside these churches and chapels, four hundred houses in Dunwich, with certain shops and windmills, had been devoured by the sea. Gardn. p. 93.

holding a fair for four days. The charter thus granted was offered with all due solemnity upon the altar of the church.^a

Beatrix, the sister of Robert Malet, gave to the monks the little vill of Radingefeld.^b

King Stephen, in 1138, granted to this monastery a very full charter of confirmation; among the witnesses to which were Eustace his son and Matilda his queen.^c

William, earl of Bologne, Warren, and Moretaine, the son of Stephen, made another confirmatory grant, chiefly relating to the possessions of the monastery in Acolt and Stoke.^d

Thomas à Becket, as archbishop of Canterbury, granted the monks another confirmation.^e

These appear to have been the charters to Eye of primary importance.

Among the petitions entered on the Rolls of Parliament, two occur, early in the reign of Edward the Third, praying for the appropriation to the monks of Eye of the church of Laxfeld.^f The appropriation appears to have been made in the 7th of Edward III.^g

Eye underwent the usual fate of Alien Priories whenever a war broke out with France. The revenues were in consequence seized into the king's hands. An extent of the possessions of Eye, taken during the war with France in the 44th of Edward the Third, A. D. 1370, will be found a curious document.^h From the statements of this Instrument the total value of the rents and proceeds, at that time, appear to have amounted to 123*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

During any vacancy of the priorate, the earls of Suffolk, in their own right as patrons, had no claim to any profits from the monastery; they could only, in token of dominion, place a porter at the gate, to be maintained out of the House; and who at the installation of a new prior was to receive five shillings, or an ox, as his reward.ⁱ

In the 8th of Richard II. A. D. 1384, at the express instance of Anne, King Richard the Second's queen, and in consequence of the payment of sixty pounds by the prior and convent, the priory of Eye was made denizen;^k and so continued till the general Dissolution of Monasteries. The prior and convent in future were to be Englishmen only.

Sir Symonds D'Ewes, from different folios of the two Registers of Eye priory which will presently be more fully described, but chiefly from that called "Registrum Danoun," compiled a Catalogue^l of the

which the Editors have made the groundwork of the present List.

HUBERT, the first prior, occurs in the time of King William the Conqueror, and again in the reign of Henry the First.^m His death, without mention of the year, is placed on the 6th of the kalends of March, on the feast of St. Matthew the Apostle.ⁿ

GAULENUS occurs in the Register Danoun.^o Sir

Symonds D'Ewes considers him to be the same person with GAUSELENUS, who occurs in the Register Malet in 1130, 31 Hen. I.^p His death is placed upon the 2d of the ides of August.^q

OSBERTUS, or OSBERNUS, was prior in the reign of Henry II. His name occurs in one Instrument of the date of 1167;^r and again, "anno imperii regis Henrici junioris nono."^s His death is dated on the 3d of the kalends of September.^t

ROGER DE MUNGUMBRAY occurs in 1202, 4 Joh.;^u again 10 Joh.;^x and is probably the same prior who occurs by the name of ROGER only in the 12th Hen. III.^y He died, the year un-named, on the ides of September.^z

ROGER DE LA BRUER, or DE BRUER, occurs in the 16th of Hen. III., A. D. 1231.^a

RICHARD JACOB was prior in 1237, 21 Hen. III.^b

WILLIAM PULEYN, or POLEYN, occurs in the 28th of Hen. III.,^c and again in the 10th Edw. I., A. D. 1282.^d

NICHOLAS EVELYN, or YVELYN, occurs in the 29th of Edw. I.,^e and again in 1313, 6 Edw. II.^f He died on the 14th kal. July 1313.^g

DURANDUS FROWE had the temporalities of this priory restored to him Aug. 10th, 1313, 7th Edw. II.^h He is also mentioned in the 17th Edw. II. as having vacated by cession.ⁱ

ROBERT MORPAYN succeeded in 1323, 17 Edw. II. The temporalities were restored to him on March 10th that year.^k He died in 1347.^l

JOHN FARNHAM was the first prior who was by birth an Englishman. The date of his admission does not appear. His death is placed on the 3d of the kalends of November.^m His successors, it need not be added, were all Englishmen.

THOMAS FAKENHAM occurs Prior in the 9th Hen. V., A. D. 1421.ⁿ He died on the 14th kal. Novemb. 1431, 10 Hen. VI.^o The next prior was

JOHN EYE.^p

THOMAS CAMBRIGGE afterwards succeeded. He died on the ides of October, 1462, 2 Edw. IV.^q

THOMAS NORWICH, or NORTHWYCH succeeded.^r He was presented 21st March, 1470, by Alice duchess of Suffolk, to the church of Chedsey, in the diocese of Bath and Wells.^s He died on the 2d of the nones of April, 1487, 2 Hen. VII.^t

AUGUSTIN SCELTONE succeeded in the same year.^u

RICHARD occurs prior of Eye Aug. 28th, 1492.^x He was probably the same person with RICHARD NORWICH, who is noticed as prior in 1500, 15 Hen. VII.^y

WILLIAM HADLEY occurs prior in the 26th of Hen. VIII.^z He was the last prior.

Sir Symonds D'Ewes gives the names of several other priors of an early date, with the days of their respective obits:

"13 Kal. Maii obiit GICELINUS prior Eye.^a

3 id. Apr. obiit ROGERIUS prior Eye.^b

5 id. Apr. obiit GODWINUS prior de Eye.^c

Among other reasons alleged in petitioning for the impropiation of the church of Laxfeld, was the loss which the monastery of Eye had sustained at Dunwich by the ravages of the sea.

At the Suppression here were ten monks, whose yearly revenues, according to Dugdale, amounted to 161*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*: according to Speed, to 184*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* The little improvement in the income of this monastery from the 44th of Edw. III. to the Dissolution, can only be accounted for by the destruction of the monastic property at Dunwich.

The scite and precinct of Eye monastery were granted to Charles duke of Suffolk in the 28th Hen. VIII.^c They returned again to the crown in the 30th of Hen. VIII. when the duke of Suffolk exchanged the Honor of Eye, with numerous manors, the scites of the monasteries of Leyston and Eye, &c. for the reversions of the scites of Trentham and Burcester monasteries, with numerous other possessions.

Of the REGISTERS of Eye priory Bishop Tanner names two only: "Vide Registra duo hujus Prioratus, penes Thomam Dey de eadem villa mil. 1636, quorum unum MALET, alterum DANOUN nuncupatum fuit." The latter contained seventy folio leaves of vellum; and was, both in 1731 and when Blomefield compiled his History of Norfolk, in the possession of Mr. Thomas Martin of Palgrave.^d Where either of these manuscripts are at present deposited, the Editors of the Monasticon have not discovered.^e

Tanner also refers to "Cartæ et munimenta varia ad prioratum de Eya pertinentia, in codd. MSS. Norfolc. n. 221, in bibl. Reg. Societatis London:" but, upon examination, these turn out to be a few pleas, &c. relating to the Honor of Eye; not the Monastery. The whole book is a Register of Sibton priory in Suffolk.

Exclusive of these, the following records are referred to by Tanner:

The SEAL of this Priory was large and oval. An Impression of it on red wax is appendant to the acknowledgment of King Henry the Eighth's supremacy, remaining in the chapter-house at Westminster. It represents a full-length figure of the patron saint, St. Peter, with the keys in one hand, and an open book in the other. This Impression has been unfortunately broken, and much of the legend is gone. What remains is as follows:

SIGILLV ATVS . SANC EYE .

The instrument dated 20 Oct. A. D. 1534, has the signatures of William the prior, William Norwyche the sub-prior, and seven monks.

The mutilated impression of another seal, appended to the Harleian charter 44 D. 42, already described, in which it is designated as "sigillum commune Capituli nostri," bears the figure of a prior in the centre, in pontificalibus. The legend round the edge gone. It is, no doubt, the earlier of the two.

The RUINS of Eye monastery are still to be seen on the east side of the town.

In early times the monastery of Eye had a CELL at DUNWICH. Tanner, speaking of Dunwich, formerly called Domnoc, or Dommoc, says, "The episcopal seat for the kingdom of the East Angles was placed here upon the consecration of Felix the first bishop, about A. D. 630.^b And upon the division of this diocese, A. D. 673, the bishops of Suffolk continued their residence here, till the whole kingdom was re-united under the bishops of Elmham in the tenth century. After which here was a Cell of Monks, who were subordinate to Eye; but this, with many other churches and religious houses, was some ages since swallowed up by the sea."^c So Leland, who adds, that the monks of Eye in his time possessed an ancient manuscript of the Gospels, brought from this cell, called in later days 'The Red Book of Eye,' which had belonged to St. Felix himself.^d

Gardner speaks of what may possibly have been the last trace of this cell. "Common or Convent Garden," he says, "abutting on Sea-Field, at Dunwich, was a plot of ground whereon grew large crops of thyme, &c. which created in many people a belief that it was a garden for the service of the whole town. But the name rather imports the foundation of some convent thereabouts. Also mention is made of a cell of monks at Dunwich subordinate to Eye, destroyed some ages past, so probably it was a curtilage appertaining to the religious house. And as the sea made encroachments thereupon, many human bones were discovered; whereby part thereof manifestly appeared to have been a place of sepulture, which was washed away in the winter of ann. Dom. 1740."^e

NUM. XI.

[Pat. 8 R. II. p. 1, m. 3.]

REX omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Supplicarunt nobis dilecti nobis in Christo prior et conventus prioratus de Eye alienigenæ, in manu nostra occasione guerræ inter nos et adversarios nostros Franciæ motæ existentis, per quandam petitionem suam nobis per carissimam consortem nostram Annam reginam Angliæ, de cujus patronatu dictus prioratus jam existit exhibitam, ut cum prioratus prædictus retroactis temporibus sub tam debili gubernatione priorum et monachorum Francigenarum extiterit, quod idem prioratus penè destructus et possessiones suæ ad prolixos terminos pro plurimis chevanciis alienatæ existunt, sic quod divinum obsequium in eodem prioratu fieri consuetum multipliciter diminuitur; et quamvis prior et integer conventus ibidem fuisse consueverunt antiquitus, in præsentī tamen unus prior et tres seu quatuor monachi illuc vix sustineri valent, qui pauperrimam vitam de proficuis dicti prioratus ducere poterunt ultra xx. libr. quas ipsi ad scaccarium durante guerra prædicta nobis reddunt annuatim, dictusque prioratus pro defectu boni regiminis in tam magnis debitis pro firma ejusdem de tempore domini E. nuper regis Angliæ avi nostri existat, quod debita prædicta absque destructione finali ejusdem prioratus persolvi, seu prioratus ille relevari non possint, nisi eis per nos de gratiosis auxiliis succurratur; velimus eis ex benignitate regia, sanctæ caritatis intuitu in hac parte misericorditer subvenire. Nos ad supplicationem dictorum prioris et conventus, et ad specialem instantiam et requisitionem dictæ consortis nostræ; et pro eo quod ex credibili relatione accepimus, quod si pro relevatione dicti prioratus in præmissis juxta supplicationem prædictam providere dignemur, tunc duntaxat certe gentes de elemosinis suis magnos custus in auxilium relevationis et reparationis prioratus prædicti apponere intendunt et proponunt. Volentes pro relevatione dicti prioratus, et pro divinis obsequiis in eodem augmentandis, providere benigniter et devotè, ut iidem prior et conventus et successores sui pro statu nostro et dictæ consortis nostræ dum vixerimus, et animabus nostris cum ab hac luce migraverimus, specialius exorare teneantur, de gratia nostra speciali, et pro lx. lib. quas præfati prior et conventus nobis solverunt, pardonavimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, eisdem priori et conventui et successoribus suis, omnia debita quæ per ipsum priorem et conventum debentur aut exiguntur, seu exiguntur de prioratu prædicto ex quacunque causa de tempore dicti avi nostri.

Et concessimus ulterius pro nobis et hæredibus nostris quod prædictus prioratus exnunc indigena imperpetuum habeatur, et quod iidem prior et conventus et successores sui ut indigenæ et Anglici, et de eadem conditione sicut veri Anglici et non ut alienigenæ reputentur et perpetualiter teneantur; et quod prædicti prior et conventus, eundem prioratum, terras, tenementa et redditus, servicia, feoda, militum, advocaciones ecclesiarum, libertates et omnia alia ad prioratum prædictum qualitercunque spectantia, quæ eis tenore præsentium restituimus, exnunc integrè habeant et teneant sibi et successoribus suis imperpetuum, absque hoc quod prædictus prioratus seu aliqua parcella ejusdem in manus nostras seu hæredum nostrorum occasione alicujus guerræ motæ vel movendæ exnunc capiantur vel seisiuntur quovismodo, seu quod aliquod auxilium, impositio, taxa, aut aliud subsidium de ipsis ut de alienigenis quocunque modo exigatur in futurum, sed quod ipsi de quibuscunque finibus, firmis, subsidiis, oneribus, impositionibus et demandis impositis, vel in futurum imponendis, quæ de ipsis ut de alienigenis occasione præsentis guerræ seu alicujus alterius motæ vel movendæ exigī poterunt, exonerati quieti et absoluti existant imperpetuum, sine occasione vel impedimento nostri vel hæredum nostrorum seu ministrorum nostrorum, et ipsorum hæredum nostrorum quorumcunque.

Volentes insuper et pro nobis et hæredibus nostris concedentes, quod iidem prior et conventus et successores sui liberam electionem habeant, et quod nullus eligatur in priorem, seu prior existat ibidem, nisi verus Anglicus, et de natione Anglicana fuerit. Et quod prioratus prædictus, ac prior et monachi ejusdem de natione Anglicana amodo omnino existant, et quod ipsi de eadem natione, et non alia existentes, adeo liberè exnunc sint in omnibus sicut prior et monachi de Thetford, seu aliqui alii in regno nostro Angliæ existunt de patronatu nostro qualitercunque existentes. In cujus rei. T. rege apud Westmonast. xij. Julii.

IN

BEDFORDSHIRE.

ELSTOW, or Elnstowe Nunnery, about a mile and a half from Bedford,^a was founded in the time of King William the Conqueror, by his niece Judith, wife to Waltheof earl of Huntingdon, and dedicated to the honour of the Holy Trinity, St. Mary, and St. Helen.^b Bishop Kennett dates the foundation about the year 1078.^c

Among the entries of the lands of the countess Judith, in the Domesday Survey for Bedfordshire, two or three relate to the Nuns of Elstow. They held under the countess five hides a virgate and a half in Meldone, three hides at Winessamestede, and three hides and a half at Elnestou.^d A charter of King Henry the Second grants the churches of St. Andrew of Hiche^e and Westun; and, exclusive of the countess Judith's endowment, confirms two hides and three virgates of land in Mulesho, ten virgates and a half in Erendesby, land to the value of four marks in Oxineford, two mills in Risendune, lands in Avinton and Burn, and a mill in Dentun, all given by other benefactors: two or three of these benefactors making their donations at the time their respective daughters were admitted nuns.^f

Among the Quo Waranto Rolls we find the abbess's claim to exemption from aids, geld, danegeld, assises, &c. allowed in the 6th of Edw. I.;^g with a particular specification of the jura regalia enjoyed in the 15th of Edw. I. in Elstow, Wilshamstude, Kempston, and Maldon.^h Another specification to the same effect occurs in the 4th of Edward III.

Of the possessions of this monastery noticed by different county historians, Newcourt and Morant speak of the manor and advowson of the rectory of Inworth of Essex; the former of which the monks appear to have held in the 6th of Edw. III.ⁱ Sir Robert Atkyns speaks of the impropriate rectory of Stonehouse in Gloucestershire:^k Chauncy, of the impropriate rectory of Hiche in Hertfordshire.^l Burton notices ten yardlands in Arnesby, and lands and tithes at Knaptoft in Leicestershire.^m Blomefield notices certain temporalities of Elstow at Hockwold in Norfolk, valued at 15s. with lands in Walpole called Wyldole, which were granted, in the 2d of Mary, to Thomas Reeve and Giles Isham.ⁿ Brydges speaks of a rent of xx^s. issuing from the rectory of Braunston in Northamptonshire, with lands in Sywell:^o Willis, in his account of Buckingham, of the impropriate rectory and advowson of the vicarage of West Tring.^p

ABBESSES of ELSTOW.

CLEMENTIA occurs abbess in 1307, 1st Edw. II. when a fine was levied between her as querent and Roger Jory and Alice his wife impediens, of lands and woodlands in Mullesho, to the use of the abbess and church of Elstow.^q

^a In the former edition of the Monasticon this nunnery was placed by Dugdale in Berkshire: the name causing him to confuse it with the destroyed nunnery of Helenestow at Abingdon.

^e In the Abbreviatio Placitorum, 6 Ric. I. p. 8, we read:

"Reginaldus de Argentain petit versus Abbatissam de Alnestowe advocationem ecclesie de Wimundesle sicut jus suum. Et sicut illam quæ pertinet ad hereditatem suam quam tenet in serjeantiam de domino Rege in Wimundesle quam disrationavit versus Andream de Vitric, in quam ecclesiam ipsa habet nullum ingressum nisi per ablatorem suum. Et Simon le Guiz positus loco abbatissæ venit et defendit jus suum, et dicit quod Judith comitissa neptis Regis Willielmi Conquestoris, quæ fundavit abbatiam de Alnestowe, dedit ecclesie de Alnestowe villam de Hich cum ecclesia ejusdem villæ et cum capella de Wimundle quæ pertinet ad ecclesiam de Hich per cartam suam quam protulit, et quæ testatur quod ita dedit eam in liberam et perpetuam elemosinam; in qua etiam carta continetur concessio et confirmatio regis Willielmi Conquestoris inde et assensus Willielmi filii regis prædicti. Producit etiam Confirmationem regis Henrici inde, et postea confirmationem regis Henrici patris domini regis, et postea scripta episcoporum qui fuerunt officiales in episcopatu illo, et testimonium archidiaconi, quæ testantur quod ecclesia de Wimundel fuit pertinens ad ecclesiam de Hiche, et testimonium episcopi qui dedicavit ecclesiam illam et testimonium per scriptum Henrici regis, qui fuit tunc temporis legatus. Et Reginaldus dicit quod nunquam ecclesia de Wimundel fuit pertinens ad ecclesiam de Hiche: et quod nunquam rex Willielmus tenuit Wimundel in dominico, sed tempore suo tenuit terram illam, quidam Alfredus et presentationem personæ fecit ad ecclesiam illam, et post eam dominus rex dedit Wimundel sicut escaetam suam Reginaldo avo prædicti Reginaldi in serjeantiam, et inde fecit presentationem personæ ad ecclesiam illam duas personas quarum ultima persona fuit quidam Osbertus, et inde producit sectam, &c. qui hoc offert probare ut de viso suo consideratione curiæ. Et quia prædicta priorissa habuit inde ingressum per ablatores suos et inde ponit se super jur. patriæ; dies datus est, &c." rot. 22.

ANASTASIA, who is called prioress, occurs in a receipt dated Sept. 1370, 47 Edw. III.^a

MARGARET GODFREY received the temporalities as abbess March 23d, 1487.^b

ELIZABETH HERVY received the temporalities Nov. 5th, 1501.^c Her tomb, with her effigies in brass, are still remaining in the south aisle of the chancel of Elstow church. Mr. Cole, who saw her monument in a more perfect state in 1759 than it is in at present, gives the following account of it in his manuscripts. Above the head had been some religious representation, probably of the Trinity, with a scroll beneath; but both gone. There had also been four coats of arms, at the corners of the stone, one only of which, at the corner by the left foot, was then remaining: viz. Party per pale, first, quarterly 1 and 4 a lion rampant; 2 and 3 a bend, and on it something indistinct: impaling a chief dancettè. Mr. Cole conjectured, but without support from any other authority, that the first four quarterings were the arms of the Nunnery.^d On a brass fillet was this inscription:

"Orate pro anima Elisabeth Herwy quondam abbatissæ monasterii de Elnestow, quæ obiit—die mensis—anno Domini millesimo quingentesimo—cujus animæ et omnium fidelium defunctorum Deus propicietur Amen."

The Messrs. Lysons call Elizabeth Herwy the last abbess: and in accounting for the blank spaces for the dates, say, that "as she survived the Dissolution of the abbey, it is probable that her body never reached its intended place of sepulture."^e But whatever may have been the date of her death, she certainly had three successors as abbesses of Elstow previous to the Dissolution.

AGNES GASCOIGNE received the temporalities of the monastery from the king July 11th, 1524.^f

ELIZABETH STARKEY succeeded in 1529.^g

ELIZABETH BOYVILL was made abbess in 1530. She surrendered her house to the king Aug. 27th, 31 Hen. VIII.^h

The scite of this monastery was granted in 1553 to Sir Humphrey Ratcliffe, a younger brother of the earl of Sussex,ⁱ who resided in the abbey house, and died in 1566. In the reign of Charles the First, if not earlier, it belonged to the family of Hillersden. It is now, with the manor of Elstow, the property of W. H. Whitbread, Esq. by whose grandfather it was purchased in 1792.^k

Nothing in the shape of a REGISTER of this priory is now known to be extant.

Ryley, in his Placita Parliamentaria, Append. p. 656, gives a petition of the burgesses of Bedford against the abbess, 11 Edw. III. "de tertio denario redditus villæ de Bedford."^l

Among the original charters belonging to the Harleian collection, now in the British Museum, are two probably belonging to this priory: viz.

43 G. 24. Carta alia Ricardi Cant. archiep. de eadem querimonia.

In the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office, Exchequer, among the memoranda of that court, is a Record, bearing this title—"De literis patentibus abbatissæ de Elnstowe in com. Bedford. de exitibus temporalium ejusdem abbatissæ factis et irrotulatis. Mich. Record, 17 Hen. VII. rot. 21."

In the Augmentation Office there is a conventual lease of Elnestowe priory, dated 13 Jan. 30 Hen. VIII. demising the rectory and tithes of Kempston to George Carleton.

In this repository are also Court Rolls of the manor of Elnestow from 33 Hen. VIII. to 1 Edw. VI. both years inclusive, with the exception of the 35th year, which is wanting.

The Surrender of the monastery or abbey of the Blessed Mary of Elnestowe has been already alluded to. It is extant in the Augmentation Office, and bears the date before mentioned. It is under the seal of the abbess and convent, but without signatures. The SEAL is large, of an oval form; the impression on dark-coloured wax, representing, under tabernacle work, two female figures; one the Virgin with the child, the other St. Helen holding a cross; and in a cleft underneath them are several figures praying. The legend runs thus: SIGILLV SÇE . MARIE . DE . ELENNSTOWE. The whole of the seal is in good preservation, except the legend, which seems to want the word Monasterii.

A fragment, also, of a SEAL of this priory in green wax, of a small oval form, is appendant to an instrument in the British Museum already referred to.^o All that remains is a female figure crowned, holding a cross of this shape  in the right hand: probably intended for St. Helena the mother of Constantine the Great, who is said to have found the real cross. Toward the bottom of the letters ELE

Of the CONVENTUAL BUILDINGS there are few remains. The church of Elstow, which is now the parochial church, is large and spacious: partly built in the Norman style, and partly in the earliest style of Gothic architecture; the chancel forming the oldest part. The north door of the church has a semicircular arch with zig-zag mouldings. The tower, at the north-west end, stands detached.

The mansion-house, now in ruins, on the south-west side of the church, was built with the materials of the abbey in the time of James the First.

Some of the nuns of this monastery, (according to the Messrs. Lysons) who died after the Reformation,^p were buried in St. Mary's church at Bedford.

Priory of Penwortham,

IN

LANCASHIRE.

A Cell to the Abbey of Evesham.

F the Cell of Penwortham, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, our accounts are extremely scanty. Tanner says, "Warine Bussel having given the church and tithes of this place, with several other estates in this country, to the abbey of Evesham in Worcestershire, in the time of William the Conqueror, here was shortly after a Priory erected, and several Benedictine monks from Evesham placed in it." ^a It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Richard, the son of Warine Bussel, confirmed his father's donations; ^b which were also confirmed by Hugh Buissel, or Bussel, the nephew of Richard. ^c
Pope Alexander III. gave the monks of Evesham a bull, confirming to them the cell of Penwortham. ^d
In the 23d of Henry III. the custody of the manor of Waltone was granted to the prior of Penwortham during the minority of John de Banastre the king's ward. ^e
A charter of King Henry the Fourth, as duke of Lancaster and earl of Derby, to the monks of Evesham, granting in the latter part a portion of his waste to the monks of Penwortham, in the vill in which the cell was situated, has been already printed in the Appendix to Evesham monastery, num. XXI.

PRIORS OF PENWORTHAM.

ROGER NORREIS was appointed prior here by the pope's legate in 1213, upon his removal from the abbacy of Evesham. According to one account he remained prior of Penwortham three years; but a passage in one of the Registers of Evesham says five months only.^a

THOMAS DE GLOVERNIA, or GLOUCESTER, was preferred from the priory of Penwortham to the abbacy of Evesham in 1243.^b

RALPH DE WYLECOTE occurs as Prior (otherwise Custos) of Penwortham in 1320, in the time of Roger bishop of Lichfield and Coventry.^c

THOMAS DE BLOCKELEY was prior in 1321.^d

RICHARD HAWKYSBURY occurs prior in the 26th Hen. VIII.^e

The cell of Penwortham is stated, in the Harleian manuscript 3763, fol. 198 b, to have had no endowment distinct from that of the parent monastery; and the priors, as they were called, are expressly stated in Ralph de Wylecote's time never to have been either presented to, or instituted by, the bishop of the diocese. "Abbates [de Evesham] pro ipsorum libito voluntatis omni tempore effectualiter revocarunt et mutarunt, ac alios ejusdem monasterii monachos duntaxat revocandos ad dictam obedientiam perfererunt."

At the time of Pope Nicholas's taxation, A. D. 1291, the Church of Penwortham was rated at the annual value of 20*l.*; with the deduction of 2*l.* for the decima, or tenth part, which was the object of the taxation. The Cell itself, or Priory, does not appear in the Taxation, except in the following instance, where this entry occurs,

"Decanatus de Amundernesse.

"Porcio Prioris de Penewytham pro garbis quas percipit in parochia de Kirkesham, 2*l.*"

And once again to the same effect in another part of the Record.

In the Survey 26th Hen. VIII., according to Dugdale, in one place it was rated at 29*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.* per annum;^f in another he makes it 99*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.*^g According to Speed it was valued at 114*l.* 16*s.* 9*d.* per annum.^h

An entry relating to this priory occurs in the Originalia of the 23d Hen. III.:

"R. concessit priori de Penwirtham manerium de Waleton quod fuit Johannis de Banastr. cujus custodia ad Regem pertinet ratione terrarum Johannis quondam com. Linc. in manu Regis existentium, habend. usque ad legitimam ætatem hæredis ipsius Johannis."

Tanner refers to the following Records:

"Rot. Pat. 16 Edw. II. p. 2, m. 14, de terris in Penwortham, Faringdon, Tallingdon, &c." and

"Rom. 4 Edw. III. m. 3, pro eccl. de Leilond approprianda. Brev. Regis 5 Edw. III. n. 61, de dimiss. dominicorum manerii de Penwortham redd. xxxvj*li.* per annum."ⁱ Rot. Pat. 18 Edw. III. p. 1, m. 33, (referred to by Bishop Tanner as Pat. 18 Ric. III.) contains "Exemplificatio judicii quod Prioratus de Penwarthen existens Cella Abba-thiæ de Evesham sit liber de una putura pro Senescallo Libertatis de Penwortham in com. Lancast. et ministris, equis, et garcionibus dicti senescalli per unum diem et duas noctes de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas, viz. de esculentis, poculentis," &c.

A Memorandum "quid debeat Prioratus de Penwortham," has been already printed from the Cottonian manuscript Vitell. E. xvii. in the Appendix to Evesham monastery, num. XXXV.

The Minister's Accompt, 33^d Hen. VIII., does not specify in detail what constituted the possessions of this cell; but John Fleetwood, of London, farmer thereof, answers for the sum of 99*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.* for the lordship, manor, or late cell of Penwortham, lately united and annexed to the monastery of Evesham; with all tenements, houses, lands, barns, stables, buildings, fields, pastures, feedings, meadows, marshes, woods, underwoods, commons, &c. &c.: and, moreover, for the rectory of Penwortham and the rectory of Leyland in the county of Lancaster, and all tithes, oblations, &c. in Penwortham and Leyland, or in any town hamlet or place in the county of Lancaster, or elsewhere, demised to him John Fleetwood, gentleman, with the exception of the advowsons of the vicarages of Leyland and Metes, by indenture, under the seal of the convent of the said monastery, dated 11 Feb. 30 Hen. VIII., for the term of ninety-nine years. This lease is not to be found among the conventual leases in the Augmentation Office; but in that repository is a lease of a messuage and other premises in Penwortham, made by the abbat and convent of Evesham to John Barons, dated 8th January, 30 Hen. VIII. In 34 Hen. VIII. the premises so demised were granted to John Fleetwoode in fee.^k The Particular for the Grant is extant in the Augmentation Office.^l

The estate of Penwortham (including the patronage of the chapel) long remained in the family of Fleetwood, but it is now the property and residence of a family of the name of Barton.

The church at Penwortham, which is situated about a mile to the south of Preston, is only a donative, the tithes and other profits of it having been originally wholly appropriated to the priory. The present parish church was the church of the priory. The tithes, after they came into lay hands, were the subject of frequent litigations, as is evident from the following Records in the King's Remembrancer's Office, Exchequer; viz. Penwortham.—Tithes of Langton there. Lib. Ordin. Mich. 31 et 32 Eliz.—Possession of the Rectory. Lib. Ord. Pasch. 37 Eliz.—Decree touching the lands of Hatton in the said parish. Hil. 40 Eliz.

No SEAL of the priory of Penwortham has, as yet, fallen under the notice of the Editors of the new Monasticon.

The ARMS of this cell are given in the initial Letter of the present Account, on the authority of the Plate following p. 272 of the Abridged Translation of the Monasticon, fol. Lond. 1718. See also Num. LXXXI. in Tanner's Plates of Arms.

Nunnery of Kilburn,

IN

MIDDLESEX:

A Cell to the Abbey of Westminster.

FROM the instrument detailing the foundation of this monastery printed by Dugdale, it appears that in the reign of King Henry the First, one Godwyn, a recluse, built a hermitage at a place called Cuneburn, now Kilburn, in the parish of Hampstead, little more than two miles from London. Godwyn, having subsequently given this hermitage, with the land belonging to it to the abbey of Westminster, Herebert, at that time abbat, with Osbert de Clara the prior, and the convent, settled it upon three maidens, named Emma, Gunilda, and Christina, who, in one account are called maids of honour to Matilda, queen of Henry the First.^a The hermitage now became a nunnery of the order of St. Benedict. Godwyn was appointed Warden during his life, the future nomination of a warden being reserved to the abbat of Westminster; who, at first, had sole authority over the nunnery, Gilbert bishop of London having exempted it from the jurisdiction of his church.^b

By a charter subsequent to that of the foundation abbat Hereford bestowed on this nunnery a portion of land called Gara, in the manor of Knightsbridge, supposed to be at the spot now called Kensington Gore.^c

The nuns being still not sufficiently provided for, abbat Gervase, Herebert's successor, gave them two corrodies, in addition to one which it appears from his charter they had held before. Of these additional corrodies one was that which Ailmar the hermit had held, consisting of bread, beer, wine, and mead, and a pittance or small allowance of meat; the other was that of abbat Gilbert, who died in 1114.^d

Abbat Gervase also confirmed to the nuns the possession of their land at Knightsbridge.^e

Laurence, the next abbat of Westminster, gave a confirmation of the grants of Herebert and Gervase.^f

Walter abbat of Westminster, says Mr. Park, dying 27 Sept. 2 Ric. I. A. D. 1191, assigned the manor of Paddington, co. Middlesex, to the almoner of his abbey, for the purpose of providing hospitality at the celebration of his anniversary, on the festival of St. Cosmas and St. Damian. It was appointed that on this day he should also make allowance to the nuns of Kilburn both in bread and wine, as well as the provisions from the kitchen supplied on other days by the cellarer and the cook; and that the nuns should not lose their ordinary allowance on account of the extraordinary. It appears, however, that a retrenchment being afterwards made of the Anniversary, this dole was done away.^g

From a very early period, Mr. Park observes, mutual jealousies and discord had subsisted between the bishops of London and the abbats of Westminster, who, though within the diocese, and immediately under the eye of those prelates, were, by several ancient charters expressly exempted from their episcopal jurisdiction. It was probably in contemplation of some disagreement of this nature, that, on the first foundation of Kilburn Priory, the jurisdiction over it was expressly granted by charter from Gilbert bishop of London to the abbat; and afterwards strengthened by a confirmatory bull from Pope Honorius III. dated in the ninth year of his pontificate, A. D. 1225.^h Roger Niger, however, who was bishop of London at this latter date, again investigated the episcopal claim. A rescript of Pope Gregory IX. on this subject, dated in 1229, will be found in the Appendix,ⁱ referring the matter in dispute to the bishop of Rochester, the prior of Dunstable, and Thomas rector of Maidstone. A composition was in consequence entered into, after Bishop Niger's death, in 1231, between the dean and chapter of St. Paul's on one part, and the abbat of Westminster on the other. By virtue of this agreement the bishop for the time being was to have access to the cell of Kilburn, to be received with procession, to preach, hear confessions, and enjoin penances; but without being entitled to any claim for procurations. It was also conceded that the secular priest, or warden, who was set over the house by the abbat, should, upon his appointment, be presented to the bishop and pay canonical obedience to him, but to be removeable by the abbat alone. That the prioress of the house, though appointed by the abbat and his successors, should be under obedience to the bishop, saving in all things the canonical reverence and subjection which she assignari in quo loco sub honore Johannis Baptistæ consecrato, statuit tres virgines Deo sacratas domicellas videlicet cameræ Matildis bonæ reginæ consortis regis Henrici Primi."

owed of old to the abbat. That, however, the entire ordering or regulation of the house, concerning matters and persons within its precinct, with the correction of excesses and reformation of its abuses, and the institution or destitution of the prioress and nuns, should belong to the abbat and his successors for ever; provided, that in case any matters requiring correction among the nuns, or other regular or secular persons abiding there, should be neglected by him for the space of a month after warning having been given to him (or in his absence to the Prior) by the bishop, then, upon clear evidence of such neglect of reformation, it should be lawful for the bishop himself to proceed toward correcting and reforming them in such manner as "prout secundum Deum viderit expedire." It was further ordained that no monk but the abbat (or in vacancy, absence, or illness, the prior) should go near the nuns to hear their confessions, and enjoin penance. That the bishop should, when requested by the abbat, perform the office of blessing or consecrating the nuns, but that no other bishop should be in future introduced or admitted at Kilburn to perform any episcopal ceremony. Finally, that neither the bishop nor his chapter should, by reason of this composition, challenge any jurisdiction or subjection over the abbat and monks of Westminster, nor in any thing derogate from the rights of the aforesaid nuns, or their cell.^a

John, son and heir of Roger de Somerie, appears to have given the manor of Midleton, now Milton Borough, in Surrey, to the priory of Kilburn; which was possessed of it 9 Edw. II.:^b and on his decease, 21 Dec. 15 Edw. II. A. D. 1321, it was found by the inquest that the prioress held of him at that time the manor of Midleton, by the service of half a knight's fee, and suit of his court at Bradfield, co. Berks, every three weeks.^c

By a patent of the 27th Edw. III. the Prioress and Convent of Kilburn were acquitted of all tenths, fifteenths, and other taxations and tallages whatsoever, ecclesiastical or temporal, for all lands and tenements which they then possessed, and all goods and chattels which then or thereafter might belong to them.^d

Manning, in his History of Surrey, vol. ii. p. 667, says, "In the 39th Edw. III. A. D. 1366, Roger de Aperdele had licence to grant to the Prioress and Convent a messuage and thirty acres of land, eight acres of meadow, and ccc. iij^d. rent in Leddrede (Letherhead, co. Surrey); the messuage and twelve acres of land, and the eight acres of meadow, being held of William de Aperdele by the rent of vj^d.; the other eighteen held of John de Argentyn, chevalier, by the rent of xij^d. ob. of his manor of Paschevesham (Packenham). This estate afterwards obtained the name of the manor of Minchin, and was in some few instances confounded with the manor of Paschevesham, and styled Paschevesham, alias Minchin; but this last name is wholly improper, Minchin being merely a farm in Letherhead." This, Manning adds, is one of the many instances in which a farm has been dignified with the name of a manor, merely because it had belonged to a religious house.^e

In the 50th of King Edward III. Thomas de Walton clerk, and William Topcliffe, obtained licence to grant and assign to the prioress and convent of Kilburn, and their successors, for ever, one acre of land, with its appurtenances, in the parish of Cudham in the county of Kent, together with the advowson of the church of the same parish, held of the king in capite: and by writ of privy seal, dated at Haveryng Dec. 1st in the same year, the prioress and convent are empowered to receive the same, and to appropriate the said church to their own proper use, for the purpose of finding a chaplain to celebrate divine service daily, in the Church of the House of the said prioress and convent, for the welfare of the above King Edward, as long as he should live, and afterwards for the health of his soul, and for the souls of Simon, formerly cardinal of Canterbury, and all the faithful who had departed this life; notwithstanding the statute of mortmain, &c. saving to the king and his heirs the due and accustomed services from the said land and advowson.^f The church of Cudham was, in consequence, appropriated to the prioress and convent by the bishop of Rochester June 20th, 1377; the petition to the bishop, on that occasion, setting forth that the monastery was much decayed in its rents and profits, and, from its situation near a much-frequented highway, inevitably exposed to the burthen of affording hospitality to a large concourse of people, both rich and poor, continually passing on the road.^g

By Pat. 6 Rich. II. p. 3, m. 1, in consideration of the poverty of the priory, it was granted that the Prioress and Convent should be acquitted, for the space of thirty years, of all tenths, subsidies, and taxations, temporal or ecclesiastical, due upon the said church.^h

The former liberties and exemptions of this priory were further confirmed by letters patent in the 1st Hen. V. p. 4, m. 37, and in the 5th Edw. IV. p. 2, m. 28: to the latter of which was added a grant "de acquietatione theolonei."

Bishop Tanner, in addition to the Records already referred to, says,

"Vid. in Cartulario archiepisc. Cantuar. MS. in bibl. Bodl. Oxon. p. 87, cartam, qua priorissa et conventus tenentur annuatim reddere archiepisc. Cantuar. v. marcas pro ten. in Herewe et Hese.

Lysons, Envir. of London, edit. 1810, vol. ii. p. 348, refers to Pat. 49 Edw. III. p. 1, m. 22, pro ten. in St. Nich. Shambles.

Mr. Park, commenting on the Valor Ecclesiasticus of this priory, enumerates the particulars of certain other possessions.

"It is stated in a Record of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's," he says, "that forty acres of land in the parish of Wilsdon were in the cultivation of the nuns of Keleburne, an. 1181. State of the Churches, &c. belonging to the Dean and Chapter in that year. Reg. Dec. et Cap.

"In MS. Cotton. Nero E. vi. fol. 53, there is a lease from the prioress and convent of Kilburn to Geoffrey Marescall, London, of a tenement situated between the foss of London near Newgate and St. Sepulchre's church-yard; rent reserved v^s.

"In Liber Regis, under 'Priorat. Novi Hospitalis B. Mariæ Virginis extra Busshopesgate London,' the following entry is among the reprisals: 'Reddit. resolut. Priorissæ de Kilborne annuatim exeunt. de tent. in parochia sancti Olavi juxta Creplegate, iij^s.'

An original release from Emma de Sancto Omero, prioress of Kilburn, to John Graunt of Everdone, and John Heywode of Daventre, of a messuage called the Bell on the Hoop, and four shops adjoining, in the parishes of St Mary le Strande and St. Clements Danes, is still in existence, in private possession.

"The manor or manor farm of Wembly, alias Wymbley, in the parish of Harrow, appears to have belonged to the priory of Kilburn, in Claus. 2 Hen. IV. p. 1, m. 18—20. Among Bishop Tanner's MSS. in the Bodleian library (No. 223, fol. 87), there is a bond executed by Margery prioress of Kilburn and the convent of that place, securing the payment of five marks per annum to the archbishop of Canterbury, for the land and tenement which they held by the donative of William Hustard, in the manors of Hareways and Hese [Harrow and Hayes]."^a

The notice of a virgate of land belonging to the nunnery, at Estburnham in Buckinghamshire, occurs among the Placita of that county as early as the 8th Joh.^b

In a "Certificate of the value of the Monastery of Saint Sexburge within the Yle of Shepey," there is the following entry among the reprisals:

"Item, rents paid yerly for the Prioress of Kylborne, v^s."^c

The names of very few of the

The suppression of all religious Houses under the yearly value of 200*l.* anno 28 Hen. VIII. put an end to the existence of Kilburn priory. From an "Inventory of all the Goodes, Catalles, Implements and Store, as well quyk as ded, belonging to the Nonre of Kilborne the xj. day of May, anno xxviij. R. Henr. VIII^{vi}." The valuation of this monastery at the Suppression is variously stated. Dugdale says, the possessions amounted to the yearly value of 74*l*. 7*s*. 11*d*.: Speed to 121*l*. 16*s*. Weever says, 86*l*. 7*s*. 6*d*.; while Stevens makes that the gross sum, and the clear value 74*l*. 7*s*. 11*d*.

After the Dissolution, the scite, circuit, and precinct of Kilburn priory, with the demesne lands and other territory adjoining, were exchanged by King Henry the Eighth, by act of parliament, in the 28th year of his reign, with the prior and co-brethren of St. John of Jerusalem, for Paris garden and some other estates.^b

Upon the suppression of the Knights Hospitallers in 1540, the scite of Kilburn Priory came again, among their possessions, into the hands of the crown. It is said afterwards to have been in the tenure of Robert earl of Sussex.^c On the 27th March, 1st Edw. VI. the king, among numerous other lands and manors, granted this scite, then stated to be of the yearly value of 11*l*. to John Dudley earl of Warwick:^d who is said immediately to have aliened it to Richard Taverner.^e The latter conveyed it, in 1550, to John Lambe, at which time it should seem as if the chancel was then the only part of the conventual church remaining.^f The scite is at present the property of Richard Marsh, gent.

There are now no REMAINS of this priory; but the scite is very plainly to be seen in the abbey-field, nearly adjoining to a tea-drinking house called Kilburn Wells, from a mineral spring of a gentle aperient quality. The abbey farm consists of about forty-six acres.^g

There are two impressions of the SEAL used by this priory appendant to deeds in the chapter-house at Westminster. Both these deeds are without date; but the time when one of them was made may be ascertained by the name of one of the witnesses being Ralph Harldel, then mayor of London. By this deed, Joan prioress of the house of St. John the Baptist of Keleburne, and the convent of the same place, convey to Ralph de Lincoln, citizen called Kylborne woode conteynyng by estymacion xxix^{li}. acres, the woode behynde the orchearde there called Hungerells wyth the hedge rowes rounde about the same conteynyng by estimacion six acres, a wood or grove in Kylborn aforsayde called Flowrell woode with certeyne hedge rowes about the same contayning by estimacion xxij^{li}. acres and a half and seven rodes, the hedge rowes rounde about Gorefeld and Goremede conteynyng by estimacion xj. acres and a halff acre and xx^{li}. rodes, and the hedge rowes about Wormole conteynyng by estimacion ix. acres and a halfe, set and beyng in Kylborne and Padyngton aforsayde wyth all and singler theyre appurtenances; to holde the same of the kyng's highnes his heyres and successours in franke almes for ever. And also our sayde sovereign lorde the kyng in further consideration of the premysses, by the sayd indentures &c."

^b The grant of the scite of Kilburn priory is thus described in the act of the 28th Hen. VIII. chap. 38. "And our sayde sovereign lorde the kyng by the said indentures, in consideration of the said maner, londes, tenements and other the premysses, and also of and for all and singular covenants, graunts, promyses, and agrements, comprysed and specefyed in the said indentures on the partie and behalfe of the saide priour and his cobrethern to be observed, performed, and kepte, gave and graunted unto the sayde priour and his cobrethern and to theyre successours, all that the scyte, circuyte, and procyncte of the late Priory, Monastery, or House of Kylburne in the countie of Midd. comenly called the priory of Kylborn, wyth the Church, houses, and buyldyngs theruppon stondyng or beyng, and also the demayn londs of the sayde late priory, conteynyng by estymacion six acres, the Chapel felde, and the Lytell Hyll felde adjoyning to the same in Kylborne aforsayde, conteynyng by estymacion four acres, one fyld or pasture there called Hungerellys conteynyng by estimacion x. acres, and a fyld or pasture called the West Ende conteynyng by estimation xii. acres, and all other the demayne londes of the sayde late pryory lyeng and beyng in Kylborne aforsayde, Hamsted, Padyngton, and Westborn in the said countie of Middlesex; and also one mesuage or tenement set and beyng then before the dore of the church of the sayd late pryory wyth the londes therunto belongyng, one woode in Kylborne aforsaide and skinner of London, a message in the parish of St. Alban, Wood Street: by the other, Margery the prioress and convent convey to William Preest of London a certain place of land in the parish of All Saints, Fenchurch. The impressions of these seals, one of which is nearly perfect, but the other much mutilated, are on green wax, oval, and of a middling size: they are both taken from one matrix; that to Preest, which is nearly whole, represents St. John the Baptist, clothed in camels' hair, and bearing a scroll, with the words ECCE . AGNUS . DEI. The legend round the seal is SIGILL SĀI . JOH . BAPTE . DE . KELEBVRN.

Mr. Park, who has engraved the seal of Kilburn priory in his History of Hampstead, from an impression in private possession, fills the blank here left with the word CONVENTVS.

Prima Fundatio Monialium de Kylborne per Abbatem Westmonasterii Herebertum.

[Ex Registro quodam Westmonasteriensis Coenobii in bibl. Cotton. sub effigie Faustinae A. III. fol. 325 b.]

OMNIBUS hominibus tam futuris, quàm praesentibus notum sit, tempore Henrici regis, qui tertius ex Normannis regnavit in Anglia, Herebertum abbatem Westmonasterii, et priorem Osbertum de Clara, una cum omni venerabili ejusdem sanctae ecclesiae conventu, domino Gilberto Universali Londoniae sanctae ecclesiae praesule annuente, dedisse tribus puellis, Emmae videlicet, et Gunildae et Cristinae, heremitorium de Cuneburna, quod aedificavit Godwynus, cum omni terra illius loci, et omnibus illis quae inibi eadem sanctitatis vitae norma fruendi causa futurae sunt. Concessu tamen, atque precatu illius Godwyni heremita, quatinus eundem locum qui ad illum pertinet in elemosina pro redemptione animarum totius praedicti conventus fratrum possideant; eadem conditione atque libertate qua Ethelredus rex Anglorum, pater Edwardi regis, ad praedictam Westmonasterii ecclesiam dedit Hamstedam. Post cujus obitum etiam, praedictus Edwardus, qui regni gubernacula suscepit, illud idem confirmavit. Ad cujus villae possessionem ille praenotatus locus, antequam haec fierent pertinebat; ut Deus, omnium redemptor, omnes illorum animas in caelis inter sanctorum consortia, perseverare jubeat. Sit tamen semper locus ille sub custodia fratrum, ne temerario quolibet jure pejoretur, aut sinistra regatur. Huic ergo loco concessit dari dominus abbas Herebertus, et totus conventus duo perpetue beneficia: unum videlicet pro requie omnium animarum illius ecclesiae fratrum, et pro omnibus fratribus de Feschampa, tam pro vivis, quam pro defunctis; et aliud quod dederant Ailmaro, omni tempore vitae suae, ut omnipotens Deus, ab omni peste et clade omnes praedictorum fratrum animas eripiat; et sit ille praescriptus heremita Godwynus, magister loci, illarumque puellarum quamdiu vixerit custos. Et post ejus obitum eligat conventus puellarum seniore ydoneum, qui earum ecclesiae praesit, abbatis tamen concilio. Et non habeat potestatem aliquam abbas, priorve aut quislibet alter aliquam intrare faciendi absque illarum voluntate et licentia quae infra clausae fuerint. Capellanus vero qui in monasterio praefuerit de possessionibus, vel ecclesiae rebus, non se intro mittat, nisi illarum jussu, et omnes possessiones quas eis Deus donaverit, habeant liberè, sicut sanctus Petrus habet suas. Et in principio omnium beneficiorum dedimus eis, et concessimus imperpetuum xxx^s. de illa elemosina, quam Sweno pater Roberti de Estsexa dedit Deo et sancto Petro, scilicet, lx. sol. Quorum solidorum altera medietas, in cena Domini ad mandatum pauperum Christi faciendum constituta est. Hanc autem donationem fecimus illis ancillis Dei, pro statu ecclesiae nostrae in bonum, et pro incolumitate, et pace omnium seniorum abbatum, et fratrum, et benefactorum nostrorum vivorum, et pro redemptione animarum à poenis ex quorum beneficio descenderunt, et pro animabus omnium abbatum nostrorum et fratrum ecclesiae nostrae defunctorum. Huic loco etiam, Cuneburniae scilicet, dedit Ailmanus sacerdos unam terram in caritate in Southwerch, quae reddit per annum ij^s. Hiis testibus, &c.

HEREBERTUS abbas ecclesiae sancti Petri Westmonasterii, et totus ejusdem ecclesiae conventus, tam futuris, quàm praesentibus salutem. Notum sit vobis nos communi assensu totius capituli et consilio dedisse in elemosina, pro anima regis nostri Edwardi fundatoris ecclesiae nostrae, et pro animabus omnium fratrum et benefactorum nostrorum, ancillis Dei, quae sunt in ecclesia beati Johannis Baptistae de Keneburna, et omnibus quae ibidem ad serviendum Deo futurae sunt, quandam terram ad sartandum in tenetura manerii nostri quod dicitur Cnithtebruga in loco qui Gara appellatur. Volumus etiam et firmiter praecipimus, ut in pace, et quiete, liberè, et sine omni servitio teneant illam praedictam terram. Et si quis eis super hanc donationem, et donationis libertatem aliquam inde violentiam, vel dampnum, vel contumeliam, aut torturam aliquam fecerit, et elemosinam nostram violare, vel auferre a praedicta ecclesia praesumpserit, nisi illis ancillis Dei citam et congruam satisfactionem fecerit, ab omni conventu ecclesiae nostrae excommunicetur, et à Christo, pauperum suorum defensore, perpetuo anathematis gladio feriat. Amen. Hi sunt testes, Gregorius dapifer, Radulfus de Puntfret, Ricardus cocus, et multi alii.

Noverit universitas vestra quod cum inter nos et abbatem Westmonasteriensem et conventum quæstio verteretur super subjectione et jurisdictione Cellæ de Kilebourne cum suis pertinentiis, attendentes eandem cellam à fundatione sua cum pertinentiis suis dicto conventui et abbati Westmonasterii pertinere, concedimus et præsentem cartam nostram confirmavimus eidem abbati et successoribus suis in perpetuam jurisdictionem et subjectionem in spiritualibus prædictæ Cellæ cum suis pertinentiis; ita quod memorata Cella cum pertinentiis suis à jurisdictione et subjectione Londoniensis ecclesiæ in perpetuum penitus sit exempta. Et quod abbas Westmonasterii et conventus, et successores eorum, omnem habeant potestatem ordinandi et disponendi per se et procuratores suos quod eidem Cellæ viderint expedire, absque ulla contradictione Londoniensis ecclesiæ in perpetuum. Et ut hæc nostra Concessio et Confirmatio firma sit et stabilis, præsens scriptum sigilli nostri appositione roboravimus. Carta Gervasii Abbatis de tribus Corrodiis Monialibus de Kylborne concessis.

[MS. Cotton. Faust. A. III. fol. 327 b.]

NOTUM sit omnibus Ecclesiæ fidelibus tam præsentibus quam futuris quod ego Gervasius abbas Westm. dono et concedo pro salute animæ meæ et pro anima Regis Edwardi, necnon et pro salute omnium successorum meorum, ancillis Christi de Keneburna unum plenarium moniale corredium, illud videlicet quod habuit Ailmarus heremita in pane et cervisia, in vino, in medone, et in pitancia. Istud corredium prece ac petitione nostra communi consilio et consensu totius capituli nostri confirmari feci. Præterea notum sit quod nos communiter et concorditer voluntate corredium Gilberti abbatis illis concessimus; et tertium corredium quod secundum tenorem cartæ suæ antea habuerunt firmiter confirmo. Volumus igitur et constanter præcipimus ut hæc tria beneficia in pane et cervisia et coquina, in vino, in medone, et pitanciis, cum uno tantummodo clareto, sc. pro anima Gilberti abbatis, absque ulla contradictione et contrarietate, et diminutione, in perpetuam elemosinam habeant. Quicumque ergo hæc beneficia manutenuerunt, et manutenuendo pro Christo augere voluerunt benedictionem Dei et nostram percipiant; qui vero diminuere præsumpserit, semel et secundo ac tertio correptus, nisi digna emendatione satisfecerit iram omnipotentis Dei et nostram maledictionem incurrat. Deus omnipotens sit testis et conservator acceptor hujus donationis ac constitutionis nostræ. Amen.

[Ibid. fol. 328.]

GERVASIUS abbas ecclesiæ sancti Petri Westm. et totus ejusdem ecclesiæ conventus tam futuris quam præsentibus salutem. Notum vobis sit nos communi assensu totius capituli et consilio dedisse in elemosina pro anima regis nostri Edwardi fundatoris ecclesiæ nostræ, et pro animabus omnium fratrum et benefactorum nostrorum ancillis Dei quæ sunt in ecclesia sancti Johannis Baptistæ de Keneburna et omnibus quæ ibidem ad serviendum Deo futur. sunt quandam terram ad sarcandum in tenetura manerii nostri quod dicitur Knihteburga, et in loco qui Gara appellatur; volumus igitur et firmiter præcipimus ut in pace et quiete, et libere, et sine omni servicio teneant illam prædictam terram sicut eas inde saysivit frater noster Osbertus de Clara, et sicut meta et divisio illius terræ facta est per respectum et considerationem et mensuram hominum illius villæ. Et si quis eis super hanc donationem et donationis libertatem aliquam inde violentiam, vel dampnum, vel contumeliam, aut torturam aliquam fecerit, et elemosinam nostram violare vel auferre a prædicta ecclesia præsumpserit, nisi Ancill. Dei citam et congruam satisfactionem fecerit, ab omni conventu ecclesiæ nostræ excommunicetur, et a Christo pauperum suorum defensore perpetuo anathematis gladio feriat. Amen. Hii sunt testes Gregorius dapifer, Radulphus clericus, Mauricius clericus, Ricardus præpositus, et Hathewy qui idem manerium tenebat, et multi alii.

Rescriptum Gregorii IX. Papæ, A. D. 1229, de Spoliatione Jurisdictionis Cellæ Monialium de Killeborn.

[Ibid. fol. 204.]

GREGORIUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei venerabili fratri episcopo Roffen. et dilectis filiis Priori de Dunstaple et magistro Thomæ rectori ecclesiæ de Madestane, Lincoln. et Roffen. dioc. salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Dilecti filii abbas et conventus Westmon. transmissa nobis petitione, monstrarunt quod cum ipsi bonæ memoriæ episcopus et capitulum Lond. super eo quod ipsos quasi possessionis jurisdictionis cellæ monialium de Killeburne ad eorum monasterium pertinent, idem episcopus spoliaret et aliis coram te fili prior et tuis collegis auctoritate apostolica traxissent in causam iidem episcopus et capitulum præfatos abbatem et conventum super eisdem auctoritate cujusdam Rescripti apostolici quod ante spoliationem hujusmodi per biennium et amplius ad vos frater episcopus tunc archidiaconus et fil. magister tunc officialis Cantuar. fuerat impetratum prætextu illius clausulæ alias graves et injuriosi existentes eisdem postmodum convenerunt. Cumque super jurisdictione judicum quæstio suborta fuisset, tandem memoratus episcopus et decanus et quidam alii canonici London. qui tunc aderant pro capitulo, et præfati abbas et conventus in vos super tam prædicta unanimiter consenserunt, et licet coram vobis lite legitime contestata usque ad publicationem testium sit in causa processum te cum frater episcopus interim promotus de archidiacono in episcopum, et supradicto London. episcopo sublato de medio, tam ipsa remanet in suspensio pro eo maxime quod ex capituli parte asseritur sibi esse possessionem hujusmodi acquisitam ac ideo non esse contra episcopum, cum ipsi rem suam faciant procedendum et decanum et canonicos supradictos quorum in nos consensus accesserat capitulum nunquam habuisse cum in veritate post consensum hujus communis procurator a capitulo ad proseguendum causam ipsam fuerit institutus. Quare nobis prædicti abbas et conventus humiliter supplicarunt ut hujusmodi assertione capituli ac episcopi morte nequaquam obstantibus cum ei sit alijs substitutus causæ ipsi finem imponi debitum faceremus volentesq' ut finis litibus imposita discretioni vestræ per apostolica scripta percipiendo mandamus quatinus ad decisionem ipsius causæ juxta priorum continentiam literarum sine moris dispendio, appellatione remota, pervia procedatur. Contentio Cellæ de Kyleburn terminata inter Capitulum Sancti Pauli et Ecclesiam Westmonasterii.

OMNIBUS Christi fidelibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit R. Dei gratia Londoniensis episcopus, et R. Dei gratia abbas Westmonasterii salutem in Domino. Noverit universa vestra quod cum inter nos super jurisdictione cellæ de Kileburn auctoritate apostolica quæstio mota fuisset, tandem ita amicabiliter convenit de consilio peritorum, videlicet, quod dominus Londoniensis episcopus qui pro tempore fuerit ad cellam de Kileburn accedet quociens voluerit et quando voluerit, et cum processione et campanarum pulsatione et omni solempnitate et reverentia à priorissa et monialibus admittetur. Ingredietur etiam dominus episcopus capitulum monialium cum suis ad prædicantium verbum Dei, et audiet confessiones secretas et injunget pœnitentias monialibus volentibus confiteri. Nullam tamen dictus episcopus exigit procurationem. Custos verò secularis sacerdos canonicè prædictæ domui ab abbate et successoribus suis præficiendus, episcopo præsentabitur, et nisi aliquid canonicum obstiterit, sine difficultate admittetur, et eidem faciet canonicam obedientiam, qui à dicto abbate poterit sine contradictione ammoveri prout viderit abbas expedire, et alius ydoneus forma simili præsentari. Priorissa verò dictæ domus ab abbate et successoribus suis instituenda canonicam faciet obedientiam episcopo memorato in hijs quæ præsentem tangunt compositionem, salva in omnibus reverentia et obedientia debita abbati sæpedito canonica et antiqua. Tota verò ordinatio dictæ domus de rebus et personis tantum intra septa dictæ cellulæ contentis, et correctio excessuum et reformatio status in institutionibus et destitutionibus priorissæ et monialium et cæteris omnibus, ad abbatem et successores suos pertinebit in perpetuum. Si qua tamen in dicta domo fuerint corrigenda in personis monialium et regularium et secularium personarum ibidem existentium, et fama deferente, ad noticiam episcopi hoc pervenerit, et dictus abbas à tempore denunciacionis sibi factæ per episcopum, si abbas præsens fuerit, vel prior Westmonasterii, abbate in remotis partibus agente, circa dictam correctionem et reformationem per mensem negligens fuerit, et de ejus negligentia canonicè constiterit, extunc licebit episcopo ea circa quæ abbas ea vice negligenter se habuerit corrigere et reformare prout secundum Deum viderit expedire. Ita videlicet quod circa personam dictæ priorissæ contra præsentem compositionem nichil attemptetur per eundem. Nullus verò monachus excepta persona abbatis et prioris vacante abbacia vel abbate in remotis partibus agente, vel etiam ipso ægrotante, poterit audire confessiones et injungere pœnitentiam monialibus prænotatis. Dictus etiam episcopus cum fuerit ab abbate rogatus monialibus dictæ domus munus benedictionis seu consecrationis impendet, nullo alio episcopo ad aliquod officium episcopale dicto loco imposterum introducendo vel admitendo. Ratione verò præsentis compositionis episcopus Londoniensis vel capitulum suum in dictum abbatem vel monachos Westmonasterii vel in ipsum monasterium nullam jurisdictionem vel subjectionem poterunt vindicare, nec etiam hujus compositionis prætextu prædictæ cellæ monialium seu ipsis monialibus suo jure in aliquo derogabitur. Priory of Hurley,

IN

BERKSHIRE:

A Cell to the Abbey of Westminster.

GOFFREY de Magna-villa, or Mandeville, ancestor of the Mandevilles earls of Essex, toward the close of the Conqueror's reign, endowed the church of St. Mary of Hurley with certain lands which were adjacent to it; subsequently bestowing both upon the abbey of Westminster, to form a Cell.^a Osmund bishop of Salisbury, in whose diocese Hurley was situated, is stated to have dedicated the church, and King William the Conqueror to have approved and confirmed the donations made to it by the founder.^b

Madox, in his Formulare Anglicanum, has printed another Instrument of the founder to prevent injury to the woods on the territory of the monks at Waltham in Berkshire.^c

Geoffrey de Magna-villa, earl of Essex, son of the founder, was also a benefactor.^d

King Henry the First granted a charter of confirmation to the convent, printed by Madox.^e Another charter of confirmation was granted by King Henry the Second, the original of which is preserved among the archives of the abbey of Westminster.^f

William de Mandeville, earl of Essex, granted them the tithe of nuts in his park at Enfield,^g together with the woods of Hurley and Little Waltham.^h

William bishop of London, in the year 1218, confirmed the different grants made by Geoffrey de Mandeville and his successors to the priory; particularly mentioning the third part of the tithes of Walden, the tithes of Sabridgeworth, Thorley, Wiggefosse, Mose, Waltham by Pleshy, Easter, Mimmes, Senley, Bissex, and the park at Enfield.ⁱ

Subsequently to this, A. D. 1258, Godfrey, prior of Hurley, exchanged the greater part of the tithes already specified with the abbat of Walden for the church of Streatley.^k

The revenues of this priory in spiritualities and temporalities appear to have amounted in 1291, according to the taxation then made, to 67*l.* 14*s.* yearly.^l

In the 30th year of Edw. I. the prior of Hurley impleaded Ralph de Hurle for cutting down and destroying his woods in Hurle: Ralph alleged that he took the said woods for housebote and haybote, as reasonable estovers, &c. The prior produced a deed of covenant before made between Richard, formerly prior of the said place, and John Hurle, ancestor of the said Ralph; in which it was agreed between them that the said John and his heirs should have the said estovers by delivery of the forester of the said prior: and for as much as he took five oaks for housebote, as he acknowledged in pleading, and it is not now known how many oaks the same Ralph took, not carried away, therefore it is commanded to the sheriff that he do cause to come, &c.^m

In the 15th Ric. II. we find the prior and convent of Hurley petitioning the king for the appropriation of the church of Warfield, in Berkshire.ⁿ

PRIORS of HURLEY.

Of the priors of Hurley we have no complete list.

RALPH PAPILLON, or DE ARUNDEL, was promoted from the priorate here, in 1200, to the abbacy of Westminster.^o

RICHARD LE GRAS, or LE GREY, prior of Hurley, was promoted to the abbacy of Evesham A. D. 1236.^p Matthew Paris says in 1237.^q King Henry III. placed him at the head of the embassy which negotiated his marriage in the former year.^r

THEOBALD, prior of Hurley, in 1251, was in a commission for the visitation of St. Alban's monastery.^s

GODEFRIDUS, or GEOFFREY, occurs prior of Hurley in 1258.^t

JOHN, 2 Edw. I.^u

The priory of Hurley was suppressed among the lesser monasteries in the 26th of Henry VIII. A. D. 1535: when the annual revenues, according to Dugdale, amounted to 121*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.*: according to Speed, to 134*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*^a

By a deed enrolled 1 June, 28 Hen. VIII. the abbat and convent of Westminster conveyed to the king their garden called "Covent Gardeyn, and also seven acres of land lyeng without the said gardeyn and nere adjoynng to the same in the parrysche of Seynt Martin wythout the town of Westminster:" in recompence and full satisfaction whereof, by act of parliament, 28 Hen. VIII. chap. xxix. the lords spiritual and temporal in parliament assembled enacted that the abbat and convent and their successors should "have and hold to them and theyr successors for ever, one great wood called Hurley Wode within the county of Berks sometyme being parcel of the priory of Hurley, whiche amongs other thyngs was geven to oure said sovereign Lord by an acte of parlyament therof lately provyded and ordeyned."^b

A month after this an act of parliament passed, 28 Hen. VIII. chap. 49, for a more extensive exchange: by which, in recompence for the manor of Nete and other lands in Westminster, the priory of Hurley and the possessions belonging to it were granted to the abbat and his successors for ever.^c

In the 33d of Hen. VIII. the priory of Hurley was granted to Charles Howard, Esq.;^d and subsequently, in the 36th of Hen. VIII., the scite, then called Lady Place (the convent having been dedicated to the Virgin Mary), was granted to Leonard Chamberleyn, Esq.^e From him it passed to John Lovelace, Esq. in the same year, who died in 1558.^f The present proprietor is Gustavus Adolphus Kempenfelt, Esq.^g

No REGISTER of Hurley priory is known to exist. In the Walden Chartulary, formerly in the Earl of Suffolk's possession, now Harl. MS. 3697, we have

Madox, in his Formulæ Anglicanum, p. 250, gives the inscription (without describing the device) on the SEAL of Hurley priory in the time of prior Ralph de Arundell: SIGILLVM ECCLIE SCE DEI GENETRICIS DE HERLEIE. The form of the seal was oval.

On another impression of similar form was the head of the blessed Virgin, with the words ✠ AVE MARIA GRĀ PLENA: the whole circumscribed ✠ SIGILL. RAD. DE ARVNDEL PRIORIS HERL. On the reverse a counter seal, impressed with a lion, inscribed ✠ ECCE VICIT LEO DE TRIBV JVDA.

A few REMAINS of Hurley priory are still visible. The present parish church of Hurley was formerly the conventual church, and has a circular door-way, ornamented with a zig-zag moulding. The refectory has been converted into stables, which retain the ancient pointed arches of the windows.ⁱ

Priory of Malvern Major, or Great Malvern,

IN

WORCESTERSHIRE:

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Peter Westminster.

ANNER says, here, in the great wild forest, was an hermitage, or some kind of religious house for seculars, before the Conquest, with some endowment by the gift of King Edward the Confessor.

Dr. Nash, speaking of Malvern, in his Collections for the History of Worcestershire, vol. ii. p. 121, says :

“ Before the Conquest it was a wilderness thick set with trees, in the midst of which some monks who aspired to greater perfection, retired from the priory of Worcester, and became hermits. The enthusiasm spread so fast, that their number soon increased to three hundred, when forming themselves into a society, they agreed to live according to the order of St. Benedict, and elected Alwin one of their company to be superior. Thus was this monastery founded about the year 1083, with the consent and approbation of St. Wolstan bishop of Worcester.^a It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.^b

“ In the Register of Godfrey Giffard who was elected bishop of Worcester A. D. 1268, is an account of the foundation of this Priory in the following words: ‘ Quidam eremita nomine Aldwynus vitam suam duxit in loco ubi nunc situatur Prioratus Majoris Malverniae tempore sancti Edwardi regis. Præterea venit comes Glouc. Hudde nomine, et ad petitionem illius eremite concessit sibi locum ubi dictus Prioratus situatur una cum bosco ibidem usque Baldyate unde idem eremita collegit sibi monachos, et constituit etiam subpriorem Andream nomine, ad regulandum secundum ordinem beati Benedicti inter eos. Præterea idem eremita subjecit dictum Prioratum quatinus in ipso fuit absque conniventia diocesani et fundatoris Westm. qui pro tempore illo fuit. Præterea post multum temporis curriculum dominus Silvester quondam episcopus Wigorn. præfecit fratrem Thomam de Wychis monachum ibidem in priorem, et confirmavit eundem sic creatum. Walterus vero de Cantelupe quondam Wigorn. episcopus confirmavit priorem Malvern. Johannem de Cleyne, mortuo illo, præterea confirmavit Tho. de Bredone, quo mortuo præterea confirmavit Willielmum de Wykewane: Godefridus nunc Wigorn. episc. fratrem W. de Ledebury.’^c Priory of Great Malvern, Worcestershire. R. W. Allen.

Quat and Fuleford in Staffordshire, Hathfield in Herefordshire, and other lands.^a

"Gislebert, abbat of Westminster, with consent of his convent, assigned to them several manors and estates, whereupon this monastery was looked upon as a cell, or at least subordinate to Westminster abbey.^b

"Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, lord of the forest, contributed largely to the revenues of this House. Osborn and Richard Fitzpontz, or de Pontibus, were likewise considerable benefactors."^c

In the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth, A. D. 1291, are enumerated the possessions, as well temporal as spiritual, which the priory possessed at that period.^d

Among the additions made to the account of this priory in the second volume of the former edition of Dugdale, is an extract from the Pleas taken before the king at York in Michaelmas term 11 Edw. II. rot. 28, wherein the prior says, that sometime before the Conquest there was a congregation of hermits at Malvern; that soon after, the abbat of Westminster, with consent of Urso d'Abitot, placed there a prior and monks, and gave them the manors of Newland, Wortesfeld, and Poiwyk; Osbert Fitzpontz gave them the manor of Longeneye; Guy Fitz-Holgod gave them two hides of land; and Roger de Chaundos the town of Hatfeld; which donations Henry the First confirmed, and gave them likewise ten pounds worth of land, with its appurtenances, in Badenhale, Malverne, Northwod, and Fulford, to hold free from all services.^e

"Wolstan prior of Worcester, with consent of his convent, gave to the church of Great Malvern sundry lands in Powick, Braunceford, and Leigh.^f

"The church of Powyke was appropriated to the priory of Great Malvern by Walter de Maydeston, about the year 1314, and the vicarage instituted in the year following.^g William Lynn, bishop of Worcester, in the year 1368, confirmed to the priory the church of St. Thomas the Martyr of Malvern, the church of Powick, and the church of Longeney.^h

"The church of Upton Snodsbury was appropriated to the priory of Great Malvern by Henry Wakefield about the year 1392.ⁱ

"The prior and convent were likewise lords of Knightwick; which manor they assigned over to Godfrey Giffard, bishop of Worcester, with consent of King Edward, son of Henry.^k They had before this the manor of Canterbauh-

Madox, Formul. Anglie. Pref. p. xxii. noticing some singular demises, says, "Thus Herbert abbat of Westminster" [made so A. D. 1221] "granted to the monks of Malvern 'manerium de Powica ad firmam, pro xxiiii. libris per annum. Hæc pecunia per iii. terminos reddenda est, scilicet &c. Et tamdiu teneant, quamdiu obedientes fuerint et subjecti nostræ matri ecclesiæ, et de hac obedientiâ fideliter servierint; et illas consuetudines habeat abbas in eodem manerio quas habet in omnibus aliis maneriis quæ similiter sunt ad firmam.'" ^k Ibid. Reg. Giff. fol. 195. See also Thomas, Antiq. Priorat. Majoris Malverne, Chart. orig. pp. 143, 146, 151. This conveyance, Dr. Nash says, was made by order of King Edward, in order to terminate a dispute which had long and violently subsisted between Richard Ware, abbat of Westminster, and Godfrey Giffard, concerning the subordination of the priory of Malvern: the litigation was, at length, settled thus, that the bishop should have Knightwick, and that the priory should be subordinate to Westminster. The dispute seems to have begun in the reign of Henry II. when both the abbat of Westminster and bishop of Worcester claimed the jurisdiction of the priory, the right of appointing priors, of visiting, and receiving procurations: the monks wishing to be exempt from the power of their diocesan, and subject to Westminster, persuaded the abbat to institute one Walter, whom they had chosen for prior: at this the bishop, being offended, suspended the Prior, and recovered his jurisdiction about the year 1165. Anno 1279, William de Ledeburg was elected prior, approved by the abbat of Westminster, and instituted by the bishop: he, being a man of an irregular course of life, was admonished by the bishop, but not reforming his morals, a regular institution was held, and he was deprived, being charged with many atrocious crimes, "Invenit Priorem illegitimum, dilapidatorem, irregularem, fornicationis, adulterii, et incestus criminibus, non minus quam cum viginti et duabus mulieribus notorie defamatum." William de Wykewan was elected in his room, which the abbat of Westminster resented, and the old dispute was revived with great violence, both the bishop and the abbat appearing to be men of high spirit, and very tenacious of their rights: however, they were both appeased at the expence of the priory of Great Malvern, the bishop having Knightwick given to him and his successors, and the jurisdiction of Malvern, together with the profits dependent thereon, being given to the abbat of Westminster. Nash, Collect. Hist. of Worc. ut supr. note l.

The greater part of the Instruments printed in the Appendix to Thomas's "Antiquitates Prioratus Majoris Malverne," 8°. Lond. 1725, relate to the above dispute. The titles of the charters are here given. Those marked with an asterisk will be found in the Appendix to the present Account.

RICHARD WHYTHORNE, or WHITBORN, alias BEDYL, the last prior, had a pension, A. D. 1541, of 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* :^d which was vacated before 1553.^e

Bishop Latimer's letter to Lord Cromwell in favour of the prior of Great Malvern, immediately before the Dissolution, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments. It is valuable as a specimen of English composition: and doubly valuable as it regards the good management of Great Malvern Priory at a time when few monasteries found friends to produce such testimony in their favour.

In the 36th Henry VIII. the scite of the priory of Great Malverne was granted, together with certain lands and tenements there and in Upton and Hanley, to William Pynnok and his heirs: who in the following year alienated the same to John Knottysford, Esq.^f

Although Great Malvern was a cell to Westminster, the prior and convent appear to have acted in the management of their estates, &c. as an independent corporation.^g

The revenues at the time of the Dissolution were valued, according to Dugdale, at 308*l.* 1*s.* 5½*d.*: according to Speed, at 375*l.* 0*s.* 6½*d.* Tanner's MS. Valor and Stevens's Supplement, vol. i. p. 30, give 307*l.* 1*s.* 4¾*d.* as the Summa clara.

No CHARTULARY or LEIGER-BOOK of Great Malverne priory is now known to be extant.

Except the CONVENTUAL CHURCH, a Gateway is all that now remains of the once sumptuous priory of Great Malvern.

The CHURCH was purchased of John Knottesford, already mentioned, by the parish.^a This magnificent structure is in length a hundred and seventy-one feet, by sixty-three in breadth. The height of the nave is also sixty-three feet; and that of the tower, which springs from its centre, a hundred and twenty-four feet.^b

The body of this church is really of early Norman architecture: the whole, however was re-edified in the time of King Henry the Seventh by Sir Reginald Bray, whose skill and taste were so much employed in the construction of King Henry the Seventh's chapel at Westminster, and in the completion of that of St. George in Windsor Castle.

Dr. Nash has given the following account of the painted windows and other decorations with which this church was formerly adorned, partly taken from Mr. Habington's manuscripts:

"The upper part of the great window was divided into twelve compartments, in which were painted the twelve

^a The old parish church was dedicated to St. Thomas the Apostle, and stood not far from the present church, at the north-west corner of the church-yard. It was in length ninety-feet, in breadth thirty-six, and had one small chapel to the south. See Thomas, p. xci.

apostles: in the lower part were sixteen divisions, in which were described several transactions of our Saviour's life; such as his riding on an ass, celebrating the Passover with his disciples, washing their feet, his agony, his being betrayed by Judas, brought bound before Pilate, sent to Herod, condemned, clothed with purple, scourged, bearing his cross, nailed to the cross, his death, his body taken down from the cross, his burial, the stone of the sepulchre sealed, the women bringing spices, his resurrection, his appearance to Mary Magdalen, his appearance at the sea of Tiberias, to his disciples at Emaus, his ascension, descent of the Holy Ghost.

"In the upper part of the choir are six windows: in the first from the east, on the north side of the church, are certain images of saints, with this inscription:

'Orate pro anima domini Johannis Malverne, qui istam fenestram fieri fecit.'^a

In the second are likewise representations of saints, and two monks praying, with this inscription:

'Orate pro animabus Johannis West, et Thome Lye, monachis hujus loci.'

There are likewise two figures of knights with their shields; on one of them, three Catherine wheels Sable; on the other, a fesse indented Argent, with this broken inscription

'Thome Carter et Ricardi Oseven, et Agnete uxoris ejus, et Thome filii eorundem cujus munera in ista ecclesia

In the third window are the arms of Westminster-abbey, and two others: Az. two keys in saltire, one Or., the other Arg. Az. on a chief indented Gu. two gerbes Or.

"On the south side of the choir, in the first window from the east, were represented the three Magi offering their gifts; above, the arms of Henry VII. and his son Prince Arthur.

"In the lower part of the second window still remain Peter, Andrew, James, and John; the arms of Lord Beauchamp of Powick, and on the left side in a shield Argent a cross Gules. The saints in the upper part much broken and confused.

"The third window is very much broken, having only the arms of Lord Berkley and Lord Stafford.

"In the north side of the nave are six windows, with six compartments in each. In the first on the west side is represented Christ crucified, with St. John supporting the fainting Virgin, and the centurion confessing Jesus to be the Christ; below, the three Marys, supported by St. Philip, St. Simon, and St. Jude; at the bottom two benefactors, and under them these words:

'Vos qui inspicitis animabus rememoretis P. Dene, nec non fratris Maculini.'^b

In the upper part of the second window were three angels and three saints, Lawrence, George, and Christopher; at bottom three benefactors and their wives kneeling, and on their mantles a shield with the arms of Crofte, party per pale a fesse indented Az. and Arg. in the first quarter a lion passant guardant Or.

"In the upper part of the third window were three angels and three saints, namely Leodgarius, Elphegus, and a third; at bottom two benefactors praying, with the arms of Lyttelton and Stafford.

"In the fourth were likewise three angels and three saints, Wannard, Martin, and Nicholas; at bottom two benefactors, with the arms of Besford and Bracie; the latter of whom owned Madresfield in this neighbourhood.

"In the fifth window were six saints; Paul, John the Evangelist, John the Baptist; at bottom Mark, Giles, and Leonard, with their names; and benefactors kneeling.

"The sixth and last window represents in the upper part St. Andrew, St. James, and St. Peter; at bottom Ursula, Margaret, and Catherine, and three benefactors with their wives praying, with their names, Richard Holker and his wife; Richard Toillewak and his wife; and Richard Frewen and his wife.

"In the south side are likewise six windows of the same size and shape, in which are painted many histories of the Old and New Testament; in the first, second, third, and fourth compartments of the first window are several histories from the creation to the expulsion of Adam out of Paradise; in the fifth is John Alcock bishop of Worcester, sitting in a pontifical chair; before him these words:

'Pontificem dominum presento Johannem;'

behind him his arms in a shield, Argent a fess Sable between three cocks' heads erased, their combs and gills Gules, with this inscription:

'Orate pro bono statu religiosi viri Johannis Alcock episcopi Wigorn. cancellarii Angliæ.'

"In the four first compartments of the second window were the history of Noah and the Tower of Babel; in the fifth compartment, benefactors praying.

"In the four first compartments of the third window were the history of Abraham, Lot, Isaac, Jacob, and Esau; at bottom, benefactors praying.

"In the four first compartments of the fourth window was the history of Joseph. The fifth window contained the history of Moses and the Israelites in Egypt and the Wilderness; and at bottom, benefactors as before.

"Of the sixth window nothing remained in Dr. Thomas's time but Aaron in his priest's dress, and Moses with his glorified face.

"In the great west window were fourteen compartments, representing the Resurrection, and Christ coming to judge the world; the Virgin Mary and saints in the seven lower compartments: benefactors to this window were, as appears by their arms, Richard III. and Anne his wife, daughter and coheir of Richard earl of Warwick and Salisbury.

"In the eastern window of the north aisle were three compartments: in the first was the Virgin Mary; in the second a priest saying mass; in the third St. John; under the Virgin two persons praying, having their arms there painted, S. a cross G. between 4 maids' heads, and quarterly 1 and 4 A. a sun Or. 2 and 3. under St. John,

'Orate pro animabus Willielmi Harnis et Roberti Hille.'

"On the north side of the choir are three windows, each divided into four compartments: in the first towards the east were four doctors of the western church; at the feet of each the figure of William Braci, and in the upper part his arms G. a fess O. in chief A. 2 spur rowels: also quartering cheque O. and Az. and again A. frette S. and again V. a bend O. between 2 cottizes G. also impaling and quartering Az. a cross indented O. and A. and Az. a cross A. Per fess indented Az. and A. in the dexter quarter a lion rampant O. 2. G. 3 lions rampant A. 3. per pale G. and Az. 3 lions rampant A. 4. broke, except in chief G. 3 stags' heads O.^a

"In the south side of the nave of the church was a door which led to the cloisters; near this in a little window were Braci's arms, and above it a monk kneeling, with various figures of an unclean spirit; in the lower part a devil vomiting out an infant, which is received by other devils, and an angel praying for it. From hence to the west end are five little windows, of three compartments each; in the first an angel, an archangel, and a cherubim; in the second St. George, St. Sebastian, and St. Vincent; in the third St. Margaret and St. Wulstan; in the fourth St. Giles and St. Leonard; and under each of these is written, in the fifth St. Katherine, St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Margaret, with these words:

'Orate pro anima Ricardi Freuen prioris hujus loci.'

"In the north aisle were painted in five windows various histories from the New Testament; twelve stories in each window: in the first the espousals of Joachim and Anne, an angel saying to Anne,

'Cum veneris ad partem auream virum tuum obvium habebis.'

the angel appearing to Joachim; the rest broke; in the second the angel appearing to the Virgin Mary, Mary saluting Elizabeth, Christ's birth, presentation in the temple, the Magi inquiring for him, and offering their gifts, and returning into their own country, the angel appearing to Joseph, Joseph and Mary flying into Egypt, murder of the Innocents, Christ baptized by John. In the third, Christ turning water into wine, healing a paralytic, casting out a devil, tempted by the devil, placed on a pinnacle of the Temple, carried to an high mountain, shewed the glories of the world, the pool of Bethesda; the rest are broken. In the fourth window, Christ walking upon the sea, casting out a devil, making clay, and opening the eyes of the blind, curing a fever, and the woman with the issue of blood; the rest broken. In the fifth window nothing remains but the crucifixion.

"From this aisle you go to Jesus chapel, in which are two windows: in the large one to the north are twelve compartments, six above and six below. In the upper are represented the Trinity crowning the Virgin, a chorus of angels and saints praising God on various instruments, Christ received into heaven, Michael fighting with the Devil, our Saviour bringing Adam and Eve out of hell; the rest broken: below were the figures of Henry VII. armed, and crowned with an imperial crown; on his upper garment the arms of France and England; behind him Elizabeth his queen, with the same arms on her garment; behind her Arthur prince of Wales likewise armed; behind him Sir Reginald Bray, bearing in a shield Argent a chevron between three eagles' legs erased Sable; behind him John Savage, Esq. and Thomas Lovell, Esq. all kneeling, bearing palm branches lifted up to heaven, with this inscription:

'Orate pro bono statu nobilissimi et excellentissimi regis Henrici septimi et Elizabethæ regine ac domini Arthuri principis filii eorundem, necnon predilectissime consortis sue, et suorum trium militum.'

This beautiful window was perfect in the year 1720, but soon after a violent storm blew it down, and being very much broken, an ignorant glazier misplaced the pieces that were left.

"The last window to be described is the west window of this chapel, in the upper part of which were two coats of arms, one erm. O. and Az. the other erm. A. and Az. and under them the Trinity, with the elevation of the host, and underneath the baptism of adults and infants; under this the Trinity repeated, and the pope with his cardinals, and these words, in the middle compartment was the last supper, and in the third the town and church of Malverne, with the chapel of St. Michael, situated on the side of the hill; in the southern angle of the window an archer in the forest shooting a stag; underneath a prior and his monks; on one side of the prior his relations, on the other his monks kneeling, with this inscription:

'Parata sunt vobis loca in coelo.'

'Orate pro animabus domini Ricardi Bone prioris hujus loci et Maculini Simonis, Nicholai, Agnetis, Willielmi, Mariane parentem eorundem.'

The floor and walls of the choir were paved and decorated with square bricks, painted with the arms of England, the abbey of Westminster, Mortimer earl of March, Bohun earl of Hereford, Clare and Despencer earls of Gloucester, Beauchamp earl of Warwick and baron of Powick: some of these quarries are dated 1453, others 36 H. VI. anno r. H. VI. xxxvi. some few have the arms of Skull of Wichenford and others those of Stafford of Grafton."

The state of decay into which this magnificent pile had gradually fallen, occasioned a subscription to be commenced for its repair in the year 1802, which finally amounted to 976*l.* 3*s.*: the sum remaining to make it a thousand pounds, viz. 23*l.* 17*s.* being made up by a parish rate.^b

Between this time and 1812 two thousand pounds were expended chiefly in restoring the roof and whitewashing the walls.*

In 1815, the Rev. Henry Card having been inducted to the vicarage, a new fund was set on foot for completing the repairs, the arduous task of superintending which was undertaken by that gentleman himself. The sum expended up to 1818 amounted to 1672*l.* 6*s.*; of which 1256*l.* 6*s.* appear to have been raised by the individual zeal and influence of the vicar. A window, executed by Mr. G. Rogers of Worcester, has recently been put up in what is called the Vicar's chapel at the end of the north aisle of the church, containing the armorial bearings of the principal persons by whom Mr. Card was aided.

No SEAL of Great Malvern priory has, as yet, fallen under the inspection of the Editors of the new Monasticon.

AUCOT, or AVECOTE, in Warwickshire, which will presently be described, and BROCKBURY, in the parish of Colwall, in Herefordshire, were CELLS to this monastery.

De Fundatione Malvernensis Cœnobii.

[Plac. coram Rege Apud Ebor. term. Mic. 12 Edw. II. rot. 28.]

PRIOR dicit, quod Prioratus Majoris Malv. aliquo tempore ante Conquestum fuit quoddam heremitorium, de fundatione cujusdam Ursonis D'abytot fundatum: et postmodum quidam abbas Westmonasterii, prædecessor abbatis nunc, de assensu ipsius Ursonis, constituit ibidem quendam priorem et monachos, et contulit eis et successoribus suis maneria de Nova Terra, Wortefeld, et Poiwyk. Et similiter quidam Osbertus filius Pontii contulit eis manerium de Longeneye, Guido filius Holgodi duas hidas terræ, et Rogerus de Chaundos villam de Hatfeld; habenda et tenenda sibi et successoribus suis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam: quas quidem donationes dominus Henricus rex primus (scil. regis Willielmi Conquestoris filius) ratificavit, concessit, et confirmavit; et etiam dedit eisdem priori et conventui decem libratas terræ cum pertinentiis in Badenhale, Malverne, Northwod, et Fulford, habenda et tenenda sibi et successoribus suis in formâ prædictâ, quietâ ab omni onere et servicio seculari, pro animâ ipsius H. regis, et animabus progenitorum et hæredum suorum.

De Episcopis Wigornensibus.

WLSTANUS in sanctitate nostro sæculo nominatissimus, de quo de se amplior porrexerit sermo, nullum quæso tædeat, &c.

— Aldwinus erat quidam ab eo factus monachus sicque in vastissimo illo saltu quod Malvernum vocatur eremiticam vitam cum Guidone socio exercebat. Guidoni post longos agones compendiosius ad gloriam visum, ut Jerosolymam iret, ubi labore itinerario vel Domini sepulcrum videret, vel feliciter manu Sarracenorum mortem anticiparet. Aldwinus eidem sententiæ inductus consilium tamen cum patre Wlstano quæsivit. Dissuasit pontifex, et ardentem refrigeravit, dicens: Noli sodes Aldwine quoquam ire, sed in loco mane; crede mihi, mirareris si scires quod scio; quantum in loco illo per te Deus operaturus est. Discessit hoc audito monachus, firmoque jam durabat in proposito, leviabatque spe prophetiæ omne genus erumnæ. Nec multo post vaticinium properavit impleri: veniebantque ad Alwinum alter post unum, tertius post alterum, et ita usque ad tricenarium numerum; affluebatque eis imprimis victualium copia, vicinis beatos se judicantibus, qui aliquid Dei famulis impertirentur. Quod verò eis deerat, fide supplebant, dum parvi facerent, si carerent carnali cibo, qui spirituali pinguescebant gaudio.

Alia Carta Regis Henrici I.

HENRICUS Dei gratia rex Anglorum et dux Normanorum, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, omnibusque baronibus et ministris suis, Francis et Anglis, totius Angliæ salutem. Sciatis communiter, me non tantum modernitatis, verum etiam antecessorum meorum et posteritatis meæ utilitati providentem. In nomine sanctæ et individue Trinitatis, ob honorem et amorem gloriosæ Virginis Mariæ genetricis Dei, ecclesiam Malverniam ipsius nomine dedicatam, et monachorum habitationi perpetuo deputatam, cum omnibus ad illam pertinentibus, pro redemptione animæ meæ, pro animabus patris et matris et fratris mei, et pro successorum meorum salute, in regis potestatis meæ manutenemento et defensione suscepisse. In primis itaque locum ipsum in quo præfata ecclesia constructa est, cum terris et possessionibus ab antecessoribus meis regibus, bonæ videlicet memoriæ rege Eduuardo et Willielmo patre meo, vel etiam à meipso sibi collatis, sicut in omnipotentis Dei et beatæ Virginis obsequio, pro remissione peccatorum meorum, pro pace regni et stabilitate indesinenter occupatum manere desidero, ita enim ab omni seculari servicio cunctis temporibus liberum et quietum clamo et firmiter esse præcipio. Assarta denique quæ à fratribus ejusdem monasterii vel eorum sumptu in foresta Malverniam licentia patris mei vel mea facta sunt, cum una virgata terræ in Baldeh, de feudo in Hanley quam rex Edwardus dedit, sicut pater meus rex W. concessit libera esse præcipio; et de iiij. sol. qui de prædicta virgata ad scaccarium reddebantur antequam monachi eam haberent, ipsos inperpetuum quietos esse concedo. Novam quoque terram cum Windeff et Limberg sitam inter Porwicam et Bald. sicut Walterus de Gloucestr. et alii barones mei ex parte mea et Gisleb. abbas Westmonaster. et conventus per Hugonem et Warnerium monachos suos ex parte sua præ-nominatis fratribus liberaverunt et dederunt, ab omni seculari servicio liberam esse concedo et confirmo.

Huic etiam regali munificentie augmentum dono, villam scilicet de Langen sitam in Gloucestersire, cum ecclesia et cunctis pertinentiis suis, quam Osbertus filius Poncii prædictis fratribus apud Wintoniam, in præsentia mea dedit, sed ut eam futuris temporibus honorabilius possiderent, in manu mea illam sicut quam non parentum successione, sed patris mei gratuito dono habuerat, ab omni sui vel hæredum suorum reclamazione solutam et quietam reddidit, et ego eam præfato monasterio et ejusdem loci fratribus manu propria dedi, et in perpetuam elemosinam regia auctoritate confirmavi, ut ipsam de cætero cum omni libertate et quietudine secularis servicii de me et successoribus meis in capite teneant. Hoc autem determinatè observandum constituo, ut nec abbas Westmonasterii, nec quælibet alia persona secularis vel ecclesiastica, de hoc beneficio nostro jus vel potestatem habeat aliud statuendi, vel illud ad alium locum transferendi. Dono insuper eis duas hidas terræ quas Wido filius Holgodi in manu mea reddidit, quarum una est in Wyrecestersire, et altera in Staffordesire, nomine Quata, quietas omnino de omnibus geldis et omnibus aliis querelis et scotis, prædicto modo de me et successoribus meis in capite tenend.

Concedo quoque eis et confirmo villam de Fuleford sitam in Staffordesire, quietam et liberam ab omni seculari servicio, sicut unquam eam tempore patris et fratris mei melius tenuerunt. Dono etiam eis terram de Northw. ad sartand. inter Hanekesbroc et Lindrugesithe ab Henedunea in Sabrinam, quiete et liberè inperpetuum possidendam; et ex altera parte Sabrinæ dono eis duas solidatas terræ, id est Hakiesheia, cum quadam parte silvæ quæ pertinuit ad Stottesd. per terminos illos quos Fulco vicecomes perambulare fecit, qui eos inde per præceptum meum seisivit; et de illis duobus solidis et de omnibus aliis serviciis eam liberam esse concedo. Dono quoque eis et confirmo villam de Hathfeld sitam in Herefortesire, cum suis pertinentiis, quam concessu meo excambiaverunt Rogero de Chandos pro terra quam prius dederam illis in valle de Strade, in liberam elemosinam de me et successoribus meis in capite tenendam. Volo igitur et firmiter præcipio quatinus prænominati fratres terras omnes præscriptas cum suis pertinentiis, sicut dominicam elemosinam meam puram et liberam, bene et in pace et honorifice, cum libertatibus quæ sake, sockne, tol, et team, et infangenetheof nominantur, perpetualiter teneant, quia eas ab omni regia consuetudine et ab omni collectione census quæ geld, vel denegeld, seu scot Anglicè vocatur, ab omnibus placitis et querelis, et sciris et hundredis, et auxiliis vicecomitum, et ab omnibus rebus et occasionibus, et ab omni castelli seu quocumque opere servili, vel etiam servicio seculari, quietas inperpetuum clamo, et liberas esse concedo. Et ne aliquis super hoc eis vim vel violentiam vel injuriam aliquam inferat, vel inferre præsumat, potestate regia defendo. Contestor itaque omnes hæredes meos et reges omnes qui post me in Anglia regnaturi sunt, per tremendum judicium Dei, ut hanc meam et illorum elemosinam manuteneant et defendant ut Deus regnum ipsorum gubernet, et adaugeat, pacificet, et defendat, et ipsi post temporale regnum habere mereantur eternum. Quicumque autem eam infregerint vel infringere temptaverint seu diminuerint nisi factum suum digna satisfactione correxerint, in præsentia, fame et clade pereant, et cum Juda traditore Domini partem habeant in futuro. Abecote or Aucot Priory,

IN

A Cell to the Priory of Malvern Major.

IF Aucot Priory, the materials for the history of which are extremely scanty, we cannot do better than speak in Sir William Dugdale's own words.^a

"This place, being originally a member of Sekindon, and with Shuttenton obtained from the Earl of Leicester, by William Burdet, was in anno 1151, scil. 5 Hen. II. granted therewith to the Monks of Great Malvern, in com. Wigorn. upon condition that they should send two of their convent to serve in the church here from the feast of St. Michael till that time twelvemonth; and, the next year following, to add unto them two more: and moreover, that afterwards, so soon as the building of the monastery here could be completed, according to the capacity thereof, more monks to be received therein, by the advice of the abbat of Westminster, and other religious persons of these parts; and the Prior to be constituted always by the Prior of Malverne before specified. Unto which agreement so made betwixt the said William Burdet and Roger then prior of Malverne, in the presence of the before-mentioned abbat of Westminster, as also the abbats of St. Albans and Malmesbury, Robert earl of Leicester, amongst others, was a witness.^b founded is said to be this; viz. that the said William Burdet, being both a valiant and devout man, made a journey to the Holy Land, for subduing of the infidels in those parts; and that his steward, whilst he was thus absent, solicited the chastity of his lady, who resisted those his uncivil attempts with much scorn: whereupon he grew so full of envy towards her, that so soon as he had advertisement of his master's arrival again in England, he went to meet him; and to shadow his own foul crime, complained to him of her looseness with others: which false accusation so enraged her husband, that when he came home, and that she approached to receive him with joyful embraces, he forthwith mortally stabbed her; and that to expiate the same unhappy act, after he understood the truth, he built this monastery. Of this story though I have nothing but tradition, yet that he was the founder hereof is most certain, from what I have before expressed; and doubtless that monument, situate in an arch of the wall, on the north side of the church here at Aucote, is for him; which is only a plain free-stone, covering the coffin wherein his body resteth, curiously embossed with the sculpture of a large cross.

"The occasion whereupon this little monastery was

^a Hist. Warwicksh. edit. 1656, p. 815.

"The benefactors that this priory had, were but few, that I find; viz. Robert de Bramcote, who gave a meadow called Bramcote-meadow:^a and William Burdet, grandchild to the founder, who having conferred thereunto the rent of xij^d. issuing out of a certain tenement in Aucote, for the maintenance of a lamp to burn before the altar of our Lady in the church here, of S. Blase,^b when he lay upon his death-bed added the grant of half a yard land and a water-mill lying in Radclive in com. Leic.^c so that all the revenues belonging thereto, were by the Survey^d made in 26 Hen. VIII. valued at no more than 34*l*. 8*s*. 0*d*.: out of which lx^s. being yearly paid to the priory of Malverne (whereunto it was a cell) xx^s. to Sir Humphrey Ferrers knight, then high steward thereof, and other reprints, which in the whole amounted to 6*l*. 2*s*. 10*d*. left the clear value but 28*l*. 6*s*. 2*d*. In so much as it being exposed to dissolution by the statute of 27 Hen. VIII. and so coming to the crown, was granted out in 34 Hen. VIII. (together with Shuttenton) unto Thomas Lord Audley lord chancellor of England,^e and by him to Joane Robinson widow,^f who died seised thereof in 1 Eliz. leaving William her son and heir.^g Which William had issue Thomas, who mortgaged it with Draiton-Basset in com. Staff. to one William Paramour a Londoner.^h After which it was not long ere that Robert Dudley earl of Leicester, coveting that fair lordship, obtained Paramour's title, and so justling out Robinson, past this with Shuttenton unto Queen Elizabeth in exchange for other lands: so that, ever since, it hath been in the crown."ⁱ

Dr. Thomas, in the second edition of Dugdale's Warwickshire, vol. ii. p. 1130, gives the names of three of the

WILLIAM DE WICKWANE, A. D. 1282.^k

WILLIAM DE BEAULIS, monk of Great Malvern, made prior 4 kal. Nov. 1305.^l

RICHARD DE MALVERN, prior of Aucote, was admitted to the cure of the church of Shuttington, appropriated to the Cell of Aucote, at the presentation of the prior of Malvern, vacant by the death of William de Bello-loco, the last prior of the same cell.^m

Another prior, WILLIAM SUTTON, occurs 26 Hen. VIII.ⁿ

William Hamper, esq. of Birmingham, is in possession of an inspeximus charter from W. prior of Coventry and his convent relating to this monastery.^o

Priory of Sudbury,

IN

SUFFOLK:

A Cell to the Abbey of Westminster.

WULFRICUS, says Bishop Tanner, "monetarius regis Henrici II. uti videtur," gave the church or chapel of St. Bartholomew, near Sudbury, to the abbey of Westminster; whereupon a priory of Benedictine monks, Cell to that abbey, was here fixed, and continued till the Dissolution.^a WULFRIC, however, made his gift in the reign of Henry the First, as is evident from that King's charter of confirmation.^b Roger bishop of Salisbury, who attests the charter, died in 1139. Wulfric, at the time of his donation, became a monk of Westminster.

King Henry the Second confirmed to this Cell two parts of the tithe of Thorp.^c

Pope Adrian the Fourth, in the second of his bulls dated in 1157, and granted to the abbey of Westminster, confirms this place as "Cellulam Sancti Bartholomei de Suthber. cum omni obedientia et subiectione, et cum ecclesia Sancti Gregorii ejusdem villæ, et omnibus aliis pertinentiis suis."^d

According to the Ecclesiastical Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth, A. D. 1291, this small priory had then the following property in the deanery of Sudbury:

"Paroch. sancti Petri in Sudbury. Prior sancti Bartholomei de redd. 4s. 2d.

"Aketon. Prior sancti Bartholomei de reddit. 3s.

"Paroch. sancti Gregorii in Sudbury. Prior sancti Bartholomei de terr. redd. et fœtu animalium 3l. 3s. 4d."

It does not appear that this priory had any other temporalities in the county of Suffolk than those above enumerated, nor any spiritualities but a portion in the church of Thorp rated at twenty shillings.

Among the ancient Deeds relating to this priory which remain in the archives of the dean and chapter of Westminster are several concerning the following places, where the priory had formerly possessions: viz. Chelveton, Clare, Kedington, Melford, Thorp, and Wrating.^e A Terrier, or account of the number of acres which the priory had, is also in the same repository.

The Inquisition referred to in the Patent Roll 35 Edw. III.^f whereby licence was given to Richard Roke, senior, to convey to the abbat and convent of Westminster certain lands in aid of their poor Cell of St. Bartholomew, near Sudbury, is preserved among the Inquisitions at the Tower of the 33d year of Edw. III.

Tanner, referring to records relating to this house, says,

"Vide duas compositiones super quibusdam terris globalibus, necnon super decimis majoribus et minoribus inter magistrum Warinum de Fouldon rectorem eccl. S. Gregorii Sudbur. et relig. vv. abbatem et conventum Westmon. ac fratrem SIM. DE HENLEGH Priorem S. Bartholomei extra Sudbury ratificatas per episcopum et priorem et capitulum Norwic. A.D. 1323. The General Ecclesiastical Valor, 26 Hen. VIII. does not particularize the estates which belonged to this priory; the only mention of it there being under the head of the Monastery of Westminster, where it is noticed thus:

"Suff. Valet in prioratu sancti Bartholomei juxta Sudbury ex recognitione domini abbatis monasterii prædicti x^{li}.

IN

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

R. GORHAM has done so much for this Monastery in "The History and Antiquities of Eynesbury and St. Neot's in Huntingdonshire, and of St. Neot's in the county of Cornwall," that little of material consideration can be added to his account. The Editors of the Monasticon were among those who contributed their mites to his assistance; and they have in return received from Mr. Gorham some facts and references additional to those contained in his History.

Of St. Neot himself it will be requisite to say something. Considerable obscurity hangs over his birth-place and parentage. His biographers make contradictory statements on these points; and some of their assertions are not to be reconciled with decided historical facts.

The father of St. Neot is variously stated to have been king of the East Angles, king of the West Angles, and of Kent, and tetrarch of Kent.

Respecting the name of his progenitor, also, there is a disagreement. Two Narratives conceal it. The other authorities state that St. Neot was the son of a king named Fidulf, Eldulf, Edulph, or Adulph, which Mr. Gorham considers merely as orthographical varieties for Ethelwulph. St. Neot, if the son of Ethelwulph, must consequently have been the brother of Alfred the Great.^a

To reconcile this position with historical facts, Mr. Gorham justly says, is no easy, if it be a possible, task. The early chronicles of English history inform us that Ethelwulph had four sons, Ethelbald, Ethelbert, Ethelred, and Alfred, who successively inherited the crowns of West Saxony and of Kent. He had also a son (born before these, and of a different mother) named Athelstan, upon whom he bestowed the principedom of Kent, whilst he himself retained the kingdom of West Saxony. Every ancient record (with the exception of the Lives of St. Neot) is silent as to any other descendant of Ethelwulph. Whitaker, however, the historian of Manchester, (in a Life of St. Neot) attempts to solve this difficulty by hazarding a conjecture that Neot is to be identified with Athelstan.^b

The reputed royal birth of St. Neot must certainly be considered as a very doubtful matter, supported by no other direct testimony than that of the monks who wrote his Life in the eleventh century. Some other writers, however (though silent respecting the alleged descent from Ethelwulph), state that Neot was the near relative of Alfred the Great.

"Upon the whole," Mr. Gorham says, "it appears probable, that Neot was descended from a collateral branch of the royal house of West Saxony; and that his zealous biographers (either misled by the circumstance of his intimacy with his relative Alfred, or ensnared by the desire of enhancing the honor of the saint,) hastily pronounced him to be one of the sons of Ethelwulph, or the brother of Alfred."^c

St. Neot appears to have been born between the early and the middle part of the ninth century. He assumed the habit of a monk at Glastonbury about A. D. 850, and afterwards became sacristan of the abbey. His learning and devotion are said to have attracted immense multitudes, who flocked from all parts to Glastonbury to receive the benefit of his instruction. Hence he determined to retire from this public station, and to lead the life of an anchorite in some less frequented spot. The place he selected for his residence was a lone valley in Cornwall, ten miles from the convent of St. Petroc; the neighbouring village to which was then called Ham-stoke, afterwards Neot-stoke, and subsequently St. Neots. In this retirement he passed seven years. He then visited Rome, to receive the pope's blessing and to obtain his counsel respecting some scruples as to the expediency of changing his eremitical life. The Roman pontiff, however, dissuaded him from solitary devotion: when St. Neot, having again sought his retired valley, founded a Monastery or College of Priests, and gathered together some religious brethren, over whom he was constituted abbat.^a All the different testimonies agree that St. Neot lived and died at Ham-stoke. The most probable date of his death, after a very careful examination of authorities, Mr. Gorham fixes in 877. His decease occurred on the 31st of July. He was buried with due honour in the Church which he himself had built, upon the site of the more ancient Chapel dedicated to Saint Guerir. After seven years had elapsed, a larger Edifice was constructed by the religious brethren of Neot-stoke (as it was then called), and the body was removed to the north side of the altar.^b Mr. Gorham conjectures the new building of Neot-stoke to have been erected about the year 884.

About a century later the remains of St. Neot were removed into Huntingdonshire. The particulars of the removal will be presently detailed. The patron saint having deserted Neotstoke, the lands with which the College of Priests had been endowed fell a prey to the rapacity of power; for, at the Norman invasion, the earl of Moretaine seized on this ecclesiastical property, leaving the priests no more than a single acre.^c From that period the Cornish convent, or college, is no more heard of: it was, probably, entirely suppressed in the reign of the Conqueror. Not a vestige of this Saxon institution remains, nor is it known in what part of the parish of Neot-stoke the edifice stood.^d

We now come to the history of the priory of St. NEOT in Huntingdonshire, anciently called Eynulfesbury, or Henulfesbiri. Tanner says, "If credit may be given to the Ely historian, St. Neot first placed monks here, who being dispersed by the Danes, were afterwards restored."^e Mr. Gorham gives a different account, and treats the assertion of a monastery having been founded here by St. Neot himself as manifestly incorrect.

"In the reign of Edgar," he says, "a shameful description of robbery had obtained among ecclesiastical bodies: the stealing of relics, upon a pretended divine revelation. In those days it was no uncommon practice for powerful abbies to despoil the weaker monasteries, or to rob defenceless villages of their sainted remains, in order to increase the celebrity of their own foundations. That the body of Neot was stolen out of Cornwall, and brought into Huntingdonshire, by one of these pious frauds, is evident even from the varnished accounts of the Bodleian biographer^f (who acknowledges the violence of the act) and of Thomas a monk of Ely (who incidentally gives a clue to the names of the parties). This narrative presents us with a melancholy picture of the superstition and demoralization of the times; in which a king, a bishop, an abbat, and a nobleman, are found conspiring in a theft intrinsically contemptible, but of no mean value as a source of ecclesiastical revenue.

"About the year 974,^g Earl Alric, a powerful nobleman in Huntingdonshire, and his countess Ethelfleda,^h founded and endowed a priory at Eynesbury, subordinate to the recently established Monastery at Ely. It is possible that a religious house previously existed at Eynesbury, dedicated to Ernulph; but this is uncertain. The interest of Brithnod the first abbat of Ely, and the influence of Ethelwolde bishop of Winchester having been obtained, the sanction of King Edgar immediately followed.ⁱ A patron saint, however, was wanting, to give popularity to the new monastery: by what circumstance the choice was directed to St. Neot it would be fruitless to conjecture."^k

The warden of St. Neot's shrine is stated, himself, to have decamped with his trust from Neot-stoke in Cornwall on St. Andrew's day, and to have reached Eynesbury eight days after, where it was received into the residence of Earl Alric.

"No sooner," says Mr. Gorham, "were the remains of Neot safely deposited at Eynesbury, than Earl Alric raised over them a Chapel, and converted the palace of Earl Elfrid^l into a monastery, which was dedicated to the saint. The site of these religious edifices was on the east bank of the Ouse, on the north side of the present town of St. Neots. In honor of the Saint the name of the place was changed to Neotsbury. At the dedication of the Conventual Chapel, Ethelwolde bishop of Winchester, Æscwin bishop of Lincoln, Brithnod abbat of Ely, Earl Ægelwin, Ædric Pope, Ædelm Polga, and many others were present. Before the whole congregation, Earl Alric and his lady Ethelfleda intreated abbat Brithnod and Bishop Ethelwolde, that they would take the Convent under their protection, and furnish it with monks. In compliance with the petition of the founders, some brethren were sent from Ely and others from Thorney. A Benedictine monastery was thus established. It was further agreed that the Monastery should be for ever subject to the church of Ely; and that the Priors should always be sent from Ely, unless a person should be found at Neotsbury fit for the office and approved by the brethren of the mother abbey. The endowment by Earl Alric consisted of eighteen hides of land, two of which were in Eynesbury, six in Waresley, and nine in Gamlingay. The deeds by which these lands were conveyed were written in Anglo-Saxon: one was given to Bishop Ethelwolde, and was deposited in the church [of Ely?], where it still remained towards the close of the twelfth century; another was given to Bishop Æscwin; the third was retained by the founders at Neotsbury.^m

"Ailwyn, alderman or duke of the East Angles, was the patron of this Priory. At the dedication of Ramsey Abbey, in 992, Duke Ailwyn, the abbats of Ely, of Peterborough, of Thorney, and the chief and potent men of Huntingdonshire, together with the celebrated and venerable matron Ethelfleda who had founded and endowed the monastery of Eynesbury,ⁿ were assembled. ^g The precise year, Mr. Gorham says, is uncertain. It was in the time of abbat Brithnod, and therefore between 970 and 981. The body having been removed in the reign of Edgar (Leland, de Script. cap.

cxiii.) the event could not have occurred later than 975. It appears also that some of the monks of St. Neots were brought from Thorney, which abbey was founded in 972: this, consequently, is the earliest date which can be assigned to the foundation of the priory of St. Neot. The period, therefore, is limited to 972—975.

^h The names of the first Founders are variously given. The Bodleian biographer speaks of them as "a certain very powerful and rich person, and his venerable wife." Life of Neot, MS. Bodl. 535. Thomas de Ely calls them, simply, "Leofric a man devoted to God and his wife Leofleda." Hist. Cœnob. Elen. li. ii. cap. xxviii. He mentions also that Ægelnof was his brother: cap. xxix. Leland designates them as "Ethelric, a great nobleman in Huntingdonshire, and Ethelfleda, a lady scarcely to be equalled." De Script. cap. cxiii. "The memorable hero, the celebrated almoner, and the devoted worshipper of God, Ethelric," and "the renowned matron Ethelfleda." Itin. vol. iv. App. p. 22, quoting a MS. on the translation of St. Ivo. "Earl Alric," Collect. tom. i. p. 68. The valuation of St. Neot's priory, 1534, denominates them "Earl Aylric and Elflada his wife." Nothing appears to be known of them from other sources.

and the above-mentioned abbats, after having demanded of all persons present whether they had any claim upon their respective abbeys, or on the monastery of Eynesbury, bound themselves by a solemn vow to protect these Houses with all their power.^a

"Only a few years, however, elapsed, before the newly founded monastery was disquieted by apprehensions of Danish violence. In anticipation of the possibility of such a disaster, the remains of Neot were removed to a part of the country less exposed to barbarian ravages. This precautionary translation was effected by a lady of Eynesbury named Lewina,^b a person of great property, and sister of Osketul abbat of Croyland. This event may be placed (with the highest probability) in the year 1003; when the Danes under Sweyn landed to revenge the massacre of their countrymen by Ethelred. The general panic occasioned by the Danish atrocities induced Lewina to convey 'the sacred mould of the confessor Neot' in a shrine adapted to the purpose, to her villa at Whittlesea; from which place she instantly dispatched a messenger to Croyland, beseeching her brother Osketul to come with a respectable retinue of monks, and to receive the relics into his abbey as a more secure sanctuary. The abbat immediately repaired to Whittlesea with some of the brethren. They returned to Croyland in a solemn procession, bearing away the relics through the marshes (at that time almost impenetrable) while the air was filled with the chants and sacred melodies of the holy brethren. On reaching the abbey, the remains were deposited, with much devotion, on the north side of the altar of St. Mary. After the state of the country had become more settled, these relics were restored to the monastery of Neotsbury.^c The monks of Croyland, nevertheless, continued to boast the empty honour of still possessing these remains in their abbey:^d probably some trifling relic, which they had retained, gave colour to this claim. It is certain, however, that Neot was one of the principal saints who received superstitious veneration at Croyland. Ingulph abbat of Croyland, towards the close of the eleventh century, mentions the fire which burned before the altar of St. Neot; and Malmesbury, near the middle of the twelfth century, speaks of Neot uniting his shield to that of Guthlac for the protection of the natives.^e

"The alarm which occasioned the temporary dismissal of the patron saint from his monastery, was not a vain anticipation; for the edifice was afterwards burnt by the Danes.^f It is probable that the convent escaped the immediate danger apprehended by Lewina in 1003; for it does not appear that they then marched into this part of England. It can scarcely be doubted that the destruction of the priory of Neotsbury by these savage invaders occurred in 1010. In that year the Danes are traced from Buckingham, by the Ouse, to Bedford and Tempsford, within five miles of Neotsbury, burning every thing in their way;^g they then returned to their ships at Ipswich, shaping their march (in all probability) to Cambridge, where they had recently gained a victory; this course would necessarily bring them into contact with the ill-fated monastery of St. Neot, which was, doubtless, at that time given to the flames.

"The convent either was not entirely destroyed in 1010, or was rebuilt, for it still continued to support some monks, and was subject to the church of Ely, at the Norman Conquest. At that period it was seized by Gilbert earl of Owe. The Ely monks were then violently expelled; partly (it may be presumed) in revenge for the resistance which the mother abbey had recently (in 1069) offered to the Conqueror, and partly to make room for some foreign monks. Three of the Ely brethren remained in the convent at Neotsbury, with unconquerable obstinacy; neither stripes nor hunger could force them from their favourite retreat. The enraged earl at length sent them into Normandy, and charged the abbat of Bec to keep them in perpetual confinement beyond the channel."^h

Richard Fitz-Gilbert de Clare (son of the above-mentioned earl of Owe) and Rohais his wife, sent to the abbey of Bec for a colony of French monks, to replenish the vacant convent at Neotsbury, which was, henceforth, to become a Cell to the Norman house. Anselm, who had just been promoted to the abbacy, sent over several brethren from his monastery. This event occurred in the year 1078 or 1079.ⁱ A letter written by the Norman abbat on this occasion commends the French monks to his liberality.^k

The precise Order of monks established in this cell by Anselm does not appear to be clearly understood. Leland (on his visit to this monastery in the reign of Henry VIII.) was informed that Anselm introduced from France White monks, of a different profession, however, from the Cistercians.^l Bishop Tanner suggests that they were Tironensians;^m but Stevens asserts that the earliest house of that denomination was not founded till thirty years later.ⁿ Whatever was the precise Order, the monks placed in Neotsbury by abbat Anselm were reformed Benedictines with a white habit; which was afterwards, however, changed for the black dress, for this priory (like the mother abbey) became a regular Benedictine House.^o

One entry only relating to the monastery of Neot in Huntingdonshire occurs in the Domesday Survey. St. Neot is said to hold three carucates of land in demesne at Einulvesberie.^p

^d In times, says Mr. Gorham, in which it was not unusual to seize on relics by violence, it was also common for Abbots to refuse to restore remains temporarily committed to their protection. So common were such pitiful thefts, that the monks of Croyland boasted of never having restored the remains of Neot, entrusted to their charge in a moment of danger; preferring rather to impute to themselves a dishonesty of which they were not in fact guilty, than to forego the advantage of claiming a possession which tended to enhance their celebrity among the superstitious. In 1078-9 the shrine was inspected at Neotsbury by Anselm, who shortly after (when archbishop of Canterbury) officially attested the fact of the body being there. Nevertheless, a century later, the abbat of Croyland insisted that this honor belonged to his House. Some of the monks were sufficiently sincere to profess their doubts as to the fact: these scruples were soon removed by the Abbat, 'who by the light of wax candles, broke open the chest with awe; when he found the skull, the collar bones, the shoulder blades, some bones of the thorax, with those of the legs and thighs.' In 1213 these pretended relics of Neot were removed by the abbat Henry Longchamp, and were 'placed by an altar erected to his honor.' Joh. de Tinmouth Sanctilogium, MS. Cotton. Tib. E. i. See Gorham's App. V. p. 272. As a proof of the futility of these claims, in 1295 Oliver bishop of Lincoln issued a second Attestation, reciting the testimonial of Archbishop Anselm; this document states, that the original instrument of Anselm was even then in existence; that the parchment and writing were uninjured; though the seal was partly destroyed by time. *Archives Linc. ⁱ "This date," Mr. Gorham says, p. 62, "may be fixed with certainty, from the following considerations. It could not be earlier; for the French monks were sent over by Anselm (Lel. Collect. tom. iii. p. 10), who was not made abbat of Bec till 26 Aug. 1078. Nor was it later; for in the first year of his abbacy, Anselm visited the convents already subjected to Bec (*Eadmer, Vit. recorded in the Cotton Chartulary, is probably that of Simon first earl of Huntingdon.^a The next which occurs in 1100 is that of Matilda de St. Liz (daughter of Earl Simon, and wife of Robert fifth son of Richard Fitz-Gilbert de Clare), who gave to the convent one third of her manor of Cratefield in Suffolk.^b This gift was bestowed with the stipulation that the brethren of St. Neots "should receive into their house two priests with the monkish habit to be perpetually maintained by this endowment."^c

The great endowment, however, was that of Rohais wife of Richard Fitz-Gilbert de Clare, A. D. 1113. She gave to the monks the whole of her manor of St. Neots.^d Rohais was consequently reputed the second foundress. This donation was confirmed in 1250 by Richard de Clare earl of Gloucester and Hertford.^e

From the various Deeds contained in the Chartularies of this priory it appears that the monks of St. Neot had possessions in Bedfordshire, at Barford, Beeston, Begory, Bidenho, Blesworth, Blunham, Bushmead, Caldecot, Chalvesterne, Charlton, Colesden, Colmworth, Crandon, Dulow, Eaton-Socon, Eaton-Ford, Edworth, Girtford, Kimerwick, Mogerhanger, Roxton, Salston, Sandy, Staplow, Tensford, Thorcote, Turvey, and Wyboston: in Cambridgeshire, at Bourne, Caxton, Croxton, Gamlingay, Granchester, Madingley, and Wells (supposed Upwell): in Essex, at Wimbish: in Hertfordshire, at Westmill: in Huntingdonshire, at Abbotsley, Buckworth, Caldecot, Everton, Eynesbury, Hail-Weston, Midlow, Monks-Hardwick, Offord D'Arcey, Paxton, Puttock's Hardwick, St. Neots, Testworth, Waresley, Weald, and Wintringham: in Norfolk, at Beecham-Well, Burton-Bendish, and Marchford: in Northamptonshire, at Barnwell St. Andrews, Brampton-Dingley, Clopton, and Hemington: in Oxfordshire, at Cotesford: in Rutlandshire, at Wing: in Suffolk, at Cratefield, Heveningham, and Ubbeston: in Wiltshire, at Boscombe and Cheldreton.^f

King Henry I. about A. D. 1137, granted to the prior and convent the privilege of a market on Thursdays. He also granted them three chartered fairs: to be held, first, on Ascension-day, its eve, and the following day; second, on the day of the imprisonment of St. Peter, its eve, and the following day; third, on the festival of St. Neot, its eve, and the succeeding day.^g

Several valuable Fisheries at Wells (supposed to be Upwell), in Cambridgeshire, were given to the monks of St. Neots by the foundress Rohais in the time of Henry I. They possessed also a fishery at Marchford, in Norfolk. Two fisheries in the Ouse, between St. Neots and Eaton, were given to the convent in the reign of Henry II. or Richard I. by Hugh de Beauchamp; and another fishery in the Ouse, in the parish of Eaton, in the time of John, by William de Sudbury.^h

Hugh de Beauchamp gave the monks liberty to take fuel from his woods in Eaton-Socon for the kitchen of their convent.ⁱ

Of the churches belonging to this priory, in Bedfordshire, Edworth was given to the monks by Roger Barnard between 1175 and 1181; Melchburn by Richard de Clare in the time of Henry the First or Stephen;^k Tensford in 1129 by Robert de Carun; and Turvey by William le Heyr in the reign of Richard the First. In Huntingdonshire, Everton was given by Gilbert de Clare, earl of Pembroke, between 1137 and 1148; Eynesbury by Simon de St. Liz, first earl of Huntingdon,^l and St. Neots, about 1179, the rectory being appropriated to the monastery about the year 1183.^m A chapel in the hamlet of Wintringham in St. Neots, founded by William de Brito about 1218, also belonged to the priory; with another chapel in Weald in the parish of Eynesbury. In Norfolk, the churches of Barton-Bendish and Beecham-well were given by Roger de Clare, earl of Hertford, before 1172. In Northamptonshire, Brampton-Dingley belonged to the monks at an early period; and Hemington in that county was appropriated to them about the year 1170. In Oxfordshire, the church of Cotesford (if it was not one of the Codfords in Wiltshire) was given by Roger Barnard between 1175 and 1181. In Rutlandshire, Wing belonged to the convent at the beginning of the thirteenth century. In Suffolk, the advowson of Cratfield was bestowed on the monastery by William de Albeni Brito, between 1154 and 1167; and Heveningham by Walter baron of Dunmow, before 1198, together with the church of Ubbeston. In Warwickshire, Pillerton belonged to the monks, the presentation to which, after the beginning of the thirteenth century, was jointly in the prior and convent and Thomas Basset. In Wiltshire, East Boscombe and West Cheldreton churches were given to the monastery between 1175 and 1181 by Roger Burnard. The church of Auca, county unknown, was given to this priory by Gilbert de Montfichet about A. D. 1170.ⁿ Auca, Mr. Gorham has since discovered, should be Aieta, now Ayot St. Peters, near Welwyn, in Hertfordshire.

Like the other alien priories, that of St. Neot became the property of the English crown on the breaking out of the French wars, and was restored to the abbey of Bec on the return of peace. A writ of restoration occurs as early as the time of Henry III. A. D. 1244.^o Mr. Gorham thinks it was probably seized by Edward I. in 1285. It appears to have been again retained by King Edward II., and restored by Edward III. in 1327.^p In 1337 it was again siezed, and the estates restored in 1361.^q In 1370 we find it once more in the king's hands. The possessions were restored for the last time by King Henry the Fourth in 1399.^r

At length, in 1409, this convent was relieved from the jurisdiction of the foreign Abbey of Bec, and received the privilege of denization by letters patent from King Henry the Fourth.^s The priory was then in the patronage of Humphrey earl of Stafford, afterwards duke of Buckingham.^t The reasons for rendering it independent of the French house are stated to have been, that divine services had been much neglected, and that the establishment was in danger of being finally subverted on account of the maladministration and unworthy conduct of some preceding alien priors, and of the immense debts which they had incurred. It was therefore decreed, by an order in council, that Edward Salisbury, a native of England (who had been presented to the priorate in 1405), should preside over this house as indigenous, and no longer subject to the control of the Abbey of Bec; that his successors should be chosen only from natives of the realm; and that none but English monks should, from that time, be received into the convent.^u

In 1414 the prior and convent petitioned King Henry the Fifth to confirm the letters patent of Henry the Fourth for their denization, and to cause them to be "enacted and enrolled in due form in the Roll of Parliament, for the honour of God, and as a work of charity:" which petition, having been received in both houses, obtained the royal assent.^x

^t Mr. Gorham says the patronage of the priory of St. Neot belonged to the family of De Clare: it descended through the earls of Gloucester and Hertford to the last earl, Gilbert de Clare, in 1313. Ralph earl of Stafford, having married Margaret daughter and coheir of the said earl Gilbert de Clare, became the next patron. ^p Gorham, p. 97. In a note to the Editors of the Monasticon, Mr. Gorham says, "This prior appears to have suffered great abuses to exist in the convent. The bishop of Lincoln visited this priory in person on the 26th July, 1507, and issued fourteen injunctions for the correction of these disorders. 1. The brethren to conform strictly to the rule of St. Benedict. 2. Not to wander beyond the precincts of the priory into the town of St. Neots, without special leave and a guardian. 3. After the evening services not to drink or play, but retire quietly to the dormitory. 4. The gates of the cloister to be shut after the night service. 5. The monks to sleep in the dormitory, in separate cells and beds. 6. After dinner to retire to the cloister for meditation. 7. No deeds to be sealed without the bishop's leave. 8. All deeds to be read to the monks in full chapter. 9. The Prior to be obeyed cheerfully. 10. The monks to dress uniformly with respect to inner and outer garments, hosen, and shoes. 11. Once in the year the state of the house to be made known to the monks. 12. The prior to make two inventories of jewels, &c. 13. The convent to be repaired. 14. These injunctions to be fixed in the dormitory, under peril of excommunication."

"The prior confessed his faults in his chapter-house, before the bishop, and was enjoined to repeat the Psalter and seven penitential Psalms before the ensuing Michaelmas. He was probably dismissed for his irregularities, for in the following year his resignation appears, and he was allowed a pension of 10*l.* as is above noticed, from his successor. Archives of the Bishop of Lincoln."

Nov. 24, 1508. In the year 1512, while he still continued to preside over the convent, he was instituted to the vicarage of the new parochial church of St. Neots.^a On the 26th of July, 1534, he signed, with eleven monks, the acknowledgment of the king's supremacy; the original instrument of which is preserved in the Chapter-House at Westminster. He resigned his priory to the king Dec. 21, 1539,^b and died in 1540.^c

From the returns made upon official valuations it appears that the annual income of the monastery of St. Neot in 1291, as Mr. Gorham has stated it, was 198*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*; in 1534 it was estimated at 256*l.* 1*s.* 3½*d.*; and in 1540 the Ministers' Accompts stated it at 256*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* In 1544 the property of the late convent was valued at 233*l.* 15*s.* 8½*d.*^d

The number of monks supported by this establishment was originally fifteen beside the prior. Before 1339 it had been reduced to twelve brethren; which was probably the usual number till the Dissolution. Eleven, as has been already stated, signed the acknowledgment of the supremacy in 1534. Seven only had pensions in 1539.

On the 18th of February, 1542, the site of this priory, its demesne-farm and lands at Monks-Hardwick (together with certain lands at Eaton and Colmworth), were granted by King Henry VIII. to Sir Richard Williams, alias Cromwell, knt. of Hinchinbroke, a great favourite of the king, who reaped a rich harvest from the spoils of abbey lands. This grant^e was made in consideration of the manors of Brampton, Hemingford Grey, &c. transferred to the king by a deed of exchange.^f The particulars may be seen by the extract in the margin.^g The site of the priory contained forty-nine acres; the demesne-farm three hundred and sixty-four acres; and the monastery-lands at Monks-Hardwick six hundred and seventy-two acres.^h

The following is the account of the descent of the priory lands at St. Neots, as given in another part of his work, by Mr. Gorham:

"In 1597 Francis Cromwell, esq. of Hardwick, died seized of the site of the late monastery of St. Neots (called 'the Fermerie'), and 80 acres of pasture at Great and Little Wintringham ('the Birches'), held of the crown by military service.ⁱ Henry Cromwell, esq. his son, succeeded him in his estates. Edmund Anderson, esq. died 1638 seized of the site of the priory, and the farm of Hardwick, held of the king by military service. Sir Stephen Anderson, bart. of Eyeworth, Beds. held this estate in the time of Charles II.; but the family becoming extinct in 1773, the property (consisting of 1263 acres) devolved to Charles Anderson-Pelham, esq. afterwards Lord Yarborough. From him it was purchased, in 1793, by O. Rowley, esq.; whose family residence at Priory Hill (built in 1796) commands a pleasing view over the town of St. Neots and along the vale of the Ouse. Monks-Hardwick passed, by sale in 1812, to the devisees of Dr. Moss, bishop of Oxford, and, by marriage, to John King, esq. The site of the priory was transferred to the earl of Sandwich: the priory farm (the antient demesne of the convent) is still the possession of O. Rowley, esq."^k

The only REGISTERS of St. Neot's priory at present known to be extant are,

1. A Chartulary preserved among the Cottonian manuscripts in the British Museum, marked Faustina A. iv. a quarto volume of a hundred and fifty-one leaves of vellum, written in a small hand of the thirteenth century. Leland, in his Commentarii de Scriptoribus Britannicis, cap. cxiii. speaks of the LIBRARY of St. Neots monastery : "Vidi ego, excussa hujus monasterii Bibliotheca, duos non elegantes de Vita Neoti libellos, sed suppresso in utroque codice autoris nomine. Unus in liturgia ejusdem templi in usu erat : alter partim prosa, partim etiam carmine scriptus, affectatam nescio quam eloquentiam potius quam historiæ fidem integram exhibuit."

In another of his works,^c Leland gives some extracts from a "Chronicon Fani Neoti incerto autore;" chiefly agreeing with Asser's Annals. This MS. is now in the library of Trinity college Cambridge, under the class-mark R. 7. 28. from which it was published, in 1691, by Gale.^d The manuscript itself, Mr. Gorham says, is not older than the thirteenth century.^e

Among the RELICS formerly kept at this monastery, Leland saw the cloak and comb of St. Neot.^f

An Impression from the most ancient SEAL now extant of St. Neots priory is appendant to the Harleian charter 83 A. 35, already mentioned, of the time of prior Reginald, who was instituted in 1226. The obverse, of an oval form, represents a female figure, probably that of Rohais de St.

Liz, delivering a crozier to a monk. All that now remains of the legend is ✠ SIG MARIE N . . . TIS. On the back is a small counter-seal, round ; a head in the area looking to the right, circumscribed ✠ REGINALD^g : DE : S^o : NEOTO.

Mr. Gorham has engraved a later conventual seal of this priory, attached to an instrument in the chapter-house at Westminster. Its device, within an oval ribband containing the inscription, consists of the Virgin crowned and seated under a trefoiled canopy, holding in her left arm the infant Jesus ; her right presenting a prior's staff to a figure in a kneeling posture. Supposed by Mr. Gorham to represent the delegation of the pastoral charge to a monk, who, from his diminutive stature, may perhaps have been intended for Neot, the first abbat of the Cornish house, and the tutelary Saint and patron of the Huntingdonshire convent. The area behind the figures is diapered. The inscription, SIGILLVM : PRIORIS ECCLESIE : S^{ci} : NEOTI. Mr. Gorham fills the deficient part with the words et Conventus.^h

A small Seal, annexed to a discharge in 1383 for a portion of tithes in Granchester received by the prior of St. Neots from the Master of Bene't college Cambridge, and preserved among the archives of that society, was seen by Mr. Cole in 1747. The design was a man's head filleted with a wreath. In the area, ^P/_R. Mr. Gorham supposes this to have been the private seal of the Prior, William de St. Vedast, or of his deputy, John Shyrebourne, by whom the receipt is signed.ⁱ

No REMAINS of the priory of St. Neot at present exist. The columns of the south-west gate, with the pointed arch forming the entrance to the porter's lodge, its last vestiges were taken down in 1814.

Mr. Gorham says, there is reason to conclude that, about 1589, the ruins of this convent were used as a stone-quarry for building the adjoining bridge over the Ouse.

The buildings mentioned in an indenture of the 26th June, 1536, were the Church, Cloister, Dormitory, Fraternity, and Buttery.

[MS. Bodl. 535. Gorh. Hist. St. Neots, p. 261.]

SANCTUS igitur Neotus fecundæ Britanniae, quæ nunc Anglia dicitur, Eöis traditur parentibus cretus; qui usque adeo quippe carnali viguere stemmate, quod etiam Orientalium-Britonum regno regali succederent sorte Horum Deus diligentem assignans ex summo devotionem, in nullo fore dissimilem eis attulit hæredem In ætate namque puerili adhuc positus, puerorum lascivias mundanis cum omnibus neniis spernens penitus, comptis moribus crescebat et actibus. Adhuc quoque adolescentulus, cunctis parentum expositis rebus, mundum, nondum vir ætate, viriliter tamen cum omnibus pompis suis abegit

Erat in illis temporibus famosum in Britanniae Anglicæ partibus cœnobium, urbs Glæstingæ nominatum Hunc igitur locum Dñi omnipotentis adolescens toto mentis enisu amplexatus est, tanquam munitissimum asyllum contra calidi hostis multimodum jaculum Specialiter autem frequenti erat incumbens orationi; illius non immemor verbi Dñi, 'Orate ne intretis in tentationem,' et apostoli, 'sine,' inquit, 'intermissione orate.' Sæpenumero quoque adeo furtivis intempestæ noctis silentio vigilabat supplicationibus, ut quis esset mutatis penitus dissimularet vestibus Mox autem imminebant crepuscula lucis; assuetis resumptis induviis regularibus tota die inserviebat obsequiis

Quum^b in Christo mandatis omnibus indeficiens Dei servus anhelaret Neotus, superno admonitus oraculo, ut virtutum novalia alio excoleret Domino Deo, Occidentalium partes gentis Anglorum Britannicorum (natio enim illa a Romanis affertur Cornu-Galliae vocabulata) perlustrare disposuit Mox, ubi quod percipiebat comperit, viz. aptum solitudinis recessum, arduam virtutis austerioremque vitam ducere constituit. A sancti autem Petroci monasterio hæc distat heremus x. fere lapidibus; tracto vero ab ipso beato viro homine, Neotestoe a^c loci incolis est appellatus. Qui locus nemorosis undique vallatur arboribus, perspicuisque emanat fluminibus, maris quoque superstat affinitate contiguus Solitarie igitur, in Dei omnipotentis servitio, uno integro lustro annisque duobus, paucis admodum notus permanens, pii laboris desiderio, amore exignitus divino, Romæ principum apostolorum Petri et Pauli visitare proposuit limina. Quod exoptato percurrens animo, cum honore maximo a Dño susceptus est apostolico Dein benedictione fretus apostolicâ præelectum capiens locum Cœnobium cepit edificare fratrum Eadem itaque tempestate, Dei famuli Neoti famam rex Anglorum concipiens Hæluredus toto se corpore pronus ante eum advolvens more sub antiquo benedictionem sibi dari expostulavit Domini autem miles Neotus, ut etiam sibi consanguinitate proximum carnis honorifice suscipiens, multa eum in divinis edocuit, atque deinde ex suis pravis actionibus correxit Ex hoc deinceps tempore sæpius dari idem rex Dei alumnum requirebat Neotum Quadam siquidem die rex præfatus de more familiariter cum adeo paucis ad Dei hominem accessit. Quem Dei famulus Neo-

tus, inter alia plurima, acriter iterum de suis nequissimis actionibus increpuit, etiam ignis pœnas apposuit, potentes potenter tormenta pati demonstravit, et præter hæc omnia fere quæ ei affutura erant præsago spiritu protulit. 'Tanta,' inquit, 'rex ab adversantibus infortunia pateris; atqui tam multa adhuc patieris. Namque regno, quo tumes, quo immoderatam debacchando tyrannidem exerces, privaberis; a gentibus exteris Christum ignorantibus invaderis; vix solus ab adversariis evadens, profugus latitabis divinitus, sicque peccato cogente aliquot diebus manebis Pro tui igitur regni salute ac statu, sanioribus usus consiliis, legatos Romam cum muneribus reverendissimo papæ Marino dirige; hunc obnixius deprecare, quatenus Anglorum scholis Romæ libertatem dignetur concedere. Ego enim universæ carnis viam ingrediens, Dño meo Jesu Christo mihi hoc revelante, meque de hoc seculo vocante, in proximo concedam naturæ. Cum vero divina quod disposuit prudentia super te adimpleverit Gubernantis omnia auxilium protinus invoca, et tibi optatum præstabit subsidium' Quibus rex auditis, vehementer ex intimis pavefactus medullis, oratione pariter et benedictione petita, largis diutius perfusus lachrymis, abiit tristis. Apparatis tamen ex famuli omnipotentis Dei jussu magnifice legatis, Romam (quemadmodum edoctus fuerat) misit; quod petiit ex voto absque ulla intercapedine a venerabili papa impetravit. . . .

Non multo post igitur vir Dei Neotus, corporis attactus languore, et hoc perindies ingravescente postquam se Dominici corporis ac sanguinis participatione munivit (pacem propriis commendans oviculis, ac multis quibus animæ salus assequitur in communi exhortamine prolatis), suo in omnipotentis Dei misericordia contradito spiritu, inter ipsa psalmodiarum et oraminum verba, alacris sanctam cœlo animam reddidit Venerabile vero corpus ejus in sua, cum omni diligentia, tumulatum est ecclesia.

Unde res expetebat opportuna, servi Dei corpusculum alias in eadem ecclesia transferendum; quod devotissime excubiis, orationibus, ac jejuniis est inde levatum; et eximie ad aquilonarem ejusdem ecclesiæ altaris partem, idoneo satis loco, constitit reconditum

De Translatione S Neoti, circa A. D. 1003.

[Ingulphi Historia Croyl. Gale, Rer. Angl. Script. Vet. tom. i. p. 55.]

IN tempore domini Osketuli abbatis Croylandiæ, cum Dani totam terram inquietarent, indigenæ de villis et vicis ad civitates et castella, et plurimi ad paludes et lacuum loca invia, refugientes, Danorum transitum et discursum pro anima præcavebant. Accidit ergo quandam magnam dominam villæ, quæ Elnophesbyry vocatur, Lefwinam nomine, sororem scilicet ex parentum propagine domini Osketuli abbatis Croylandiæ, ad Witlesey tunc villam suam venire, et secum sacras reliquias, scilicet sacratissimam glebam sancti Neoti confessoris, de Elnophesbyry, quia minus honorifice jacuerant, ac Danorum depredationi patuerant, in scrinio ad hoc aptato deferre. Quæ dirigens celerem nuncium ad fratrem suum dominum abbatem Osketulum, supplice postulabat supplicatione, quatenus cum congruo fratrum suorum comitatu Witleseiam placeret accedere, et dictas reliquias sancti Neoti confessoris secum in suum monasterium cum digna reverentia deportare. Ille gaudens et exultans, assumptis secum quibusdam fratribus, Witlesiam adiit, et dictas sanctas reliquias, cum debita honorificentia et psalmodiarum melodia, ad Croylandiam transtulit; ac juxta Sanctæ Dei genitricis Mariæ altare cum devotione debita collocavit.

qua Danorum pervasione jacuit diu miserabiliter desolatus. Post plurimorum autem temporum curricula venerabilis pater Ædeluuoldus^a locum eundem sicut cætera per Angliam loca veneranda relevare, et ad pristinum decorem divini obsequii reformare studuit, monachos adducens de Ely, denuo adhuc regulariter sub priore collocavit. Deinde, coram omnibus episcopum atque abbatem humiliter postulabant, quatinus pro Dei amore, et sanctæ religionis reverentia, eis, tanquam suis providerent atque consulerent, ut vitam religiosam dignè observarent, et esset locus ipsi abbati et cunctis successoribus suis, ecclesiæ de Ely semper subjectus sed et prior illic jugiter de ecclesia de Ely haberetur, nisi ex ipsis talis posset inveniri, et hoc assensu atque consilio fratrum de Ely qui ipso officio dignus existeret. Ad victum vero eorum et vestimentum decem et octo hydas continuò statuerunt necessitati illorum utiliter providentes; duas videlicet in prædicta villa de Henulvesburi, et vj. apud Woveresle, et novem apud Gamingeia, unde testes fuerunt Æscuvinus episcopus qui ecclesiam tunc dedicavit, Ægeluvinus alderman, Ædricus Pape, Ædelmus Polga, et cæteri qui ad dedicationem illam fuerant congregati; atque hoc tribus scriptis Anglicè constat esse firmatum, unum habuit episcopus Ædelwoldus, quod in ecclesia pro testimonio hactenus servatur; aliud Æscuvinus episcopus, tertium ipsimet sibi retinuerunt. Locus autem ille ad Ely diu pertinuit, donec Anglia subjugatur à Normannis; sed ecclesia gemens in suis oppressionibus, illud, cum multis et magnis injustè sibi ablatis calumpniatur, et continuè ad Deum cum Psalmista querimoniam facit adversus eos, qui dixerunt: 'Venite et disperdamus eam de gente, et non memoretur in ea nomen Israel ultra;' nam postea Normannis Angliam obtinentibus, unus illorum Gilebertus de Clara eundem locum sibi vendicavit, fratresque de Ely, uti in proprio illic degentes, fugavit. Tres vero non fame, non verbere depellere valens, apud Beccum in custodiam ultra mare delegavit, ac monachos inde adducens ibi locavit, expulsis violenter indigenis, ut in sequentibus dicitur.

culo, inter Cornubiæ confinia, remota quæsivit solitudinis loca, unius clientis nomine Barii, quem sui fecerat secreti conscium contentus comitatu. Sicque, ipso ducente quo præmonente, ad locum sibi à Deo præparatum devenit. Distat enim heremus illa à sancti Petroci in Cornubia monasterio, milliariibus fere decem; et, tracto ab ipso viro Dei nomine, ab incolis locus ille Neotstoke appellatur. Erat autem locus ille nemorosus fluviis perspicuus, et mari affinis. Transactis autem in illo loco feliciter annis vij. Romam profectus, à papa Martino honorificè susceptus, utroque alterius recreato solamine, postulata cum benedictione assecutus, domum rediit, et monasterium construxit, et monachos congregavit, &c.

Translata postea fuerunt ossa illa ab abbate Henrico, et juxta altare, in honore ejus constructum collocata anno Domini mccxij. Diebus tamen nostris, in monasterio S. Selby Abbey,

ING William the Conqueror is stated by Simeon of Durham to have founded Selby Abbey as early as the year 1069.^a The Charter of foundation will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^b The abbey was dedicated to St. Mary and St. German. The year after the foundation, King William repairing hither with his Queen to settle the endowment, she is said to have been delivered here of her youngest son, afterwards King Henry the First.^c

It is remarkable that no notice whatever of Selby or its monastery occurs in the Domesday Survey.

The privileges granted to this monastery by our kings were considerable.

King William the Conqueror, in the charter already referred to, freed the monks from all exactions, granting them a court, sak, sok, toll, theam, and infangenthef, with all such customs as had been enjoyed by the church of St. Peter at York.

King William Rufus gave the patronage of this abbey to Thomas, the first of that name, archbishop of York, and to his successors, along with the church of St. Oswald at Gloucester, in lieu of the jurisdiction which that archbishop claimed over Lindsey in Lincolnshire. But not long after, the archbishop regranted this church of St. German's, and made the monks free from all custom, "excepta Christianitatis causâ."^d And these monks, says Burton, upon vacancies, had licence from the crown to elect abbats.

King Henry I. confirmed all that his father, William the First, had granted; and also, in the time of Osbert the high-sheriff of Yorkshire, confirmed the grant of Crull made by Geoffrey de Wirce, to be free from danegeld; and King Stephen and King John confirmed the same.^e

In 1 Henry III., A. D. 1217, the king exempted the monks from payment of danegeld, aids of the high-sheriffs, wapentakes, hundred, shire, temental, and murder; from payments for carriage, assize, summons, pleadings, &c. and for guarding the forests, from blodewite, &c. granting them sak, sok, &c. with the privilege not to be obliged to try any cause, but before the King: dated 5th Dec. test. H. Dunelm. episc. Joh. et Wil. Marescal.^f

In 5 Hen. III. the King granted the monks free warren in Stanford super Avon and Crul, with the liberty of fishing, and of using all they should catch except the royal fish, test. Simone de Tateshall.^g

In 14 Hen. III. they had another grant of lands and privileges.^h

In 36 Hen. III. the king granted them free warren in their lands at Selby, Thorpe, Brayton, Hamelton, Frieston, Hillam, Acastre-Selby, Chelleslawe, Holme, Snaith, Rouclif, and Estoft, if not within the liberty of the forest. He also granted them sak, sok, and infangenthef, in Crul and Stallingburg.ⁱ

In 8 Rich. II., A. D. 1315, the king granted them free warren in Gunby.^k

Pope Alexander the Second granted to the abbat of Selby and his successors, for ever, a faculty to use the ring, mitre, pastoral staff, dalmatic coat, gloves, and sandals; and of blessing the palls of the altar and other ecclesiastical ornaments, and of conferring the first tonsure; dated at Avignon May 31st (i. e. 2 kal. Jun.), in the third year of his pontificate, A. D. 1076; all which, on the 3d of the ides of April (March 30th), A. D. 1308, were confirmed by William Greenfeld archbishop, and by the dean and chapter of York.^l

The following minute List of the premises given to this abbey, with the names of the Benefactors, has been chiefly derived from Burton.^m

Acastre-Selby. K. Richard I. confirmed this town given to the monks in K. William the Conqueror's time,

^a "Anno M.lxix. Cœnobium sancti Germani de Selebi sumpsit exorditum." Twysd. Script. X. col. 198.

^c Burton, Monast. Ebor. fol. York, 1758, p. 387, says, "They show the painted Chamber at this day, wherein they pretend that this King was born; but that is an error, for it seems to have been built by an abbat, as part of an inscription upon the cross beam on the top, yet legible, shows, viz. '..... istud edificium per Rob. Deeping abbate hujus monasterii.' And this opinion is greatly strengthened by an escutcheon of the Arms of the abbey of Croyland, upon a ceiling in this chamber of the minister's house, viz. quarterly, 1st, Three knives erect, 2d, Three whips, 3d as 2d, 4th as 1st, within a bordure charged with eight cross-crosslets; of which house this Robert Deeping was a monk, when elected abbat of Selby."

^d Ibid. p. 139. In A. D. 1220, 8 Henry III. the church of Brayton was thus divided, viz. the third part of the tithe-corn, hay, wool, and lamb thereof was assigned to the prebend of Wistow, who demised them for the rent of 14*l.* per annum (which see under the hist. of that prebend): and in A. D. 1293, the church here was appropriated and annexed to the archdeaconry of York; when William de Hamilton, then archdeacon, was presented to this church, whereby he had the whole right of the same united to his dignity, and held by him as one benefice. Reg. Johannis Romain, p. 23.

The said William de Hamilton, having the advowson hereof given him by John de Lascy (Metham's Regist. p. 417); yet, for all this, the patronage of this church ever belonged to the abbat and convent of Selby.

On the 27th of May, A. D. 1348, William Melton, archbishop of York, ordained, that out of the fruits of the church of Brayton (appropriated to the abbat and convent of Selby), thereof a competent portion should be allotted for the maintenance of a secular vicar, to be by these religious ever presented; which vicarage should consist in these following things, viz. in one competent mansion, to be built in a place called Parson's-intak, lying on the north side of the church, containing two acres or more, with its edifices, to be erected by the said abbat and convent at their own costs; also in twenty-three acres, vulgarly called Courtenay's-land, together with the common of pasture to the same belonging (except in the common wood, or hag, in Brayton): also the vicar to receive the pension of 1*l.* per annum, which the rector had out of the prebendary of Wistow, and the tithes of foals, pigs, calves, geese, swans, hens, pigeons, line, and hemp, of curtilages, and of milk, honey, and bees; and also of wool, paid either in the fleece or money for it; also the tithe of toll and pulley, as they ought to be paid in money; likewise the tithes personal and quadragesimal, and all kinds of oblations within the said church, as well in wax as money; and all mortuaries, as well live as dead, of the defunct; also the pennies for the vigils of the dead, and spousals given. The portion of the vicarage to be taxed at 22 marks sterling: furthermore ordaining, that the vicar for the time being should bear all archiepiscopal and archidiaconal burdens; and all other ordinary burdens whatsoever, belonging to the church. But the abbat and convent were to build anew and repair the chancel as oft as need required. And as to extraordinary burdens incumbent on the church, the vicar to be taxed pro rata; but the tithe corn, hay, wool, and lamb, to be payable as well in the fleece as in money, and the tithe of pullen, as oft as it happened in all bodies; also the tithe of mills of the whole parish, and other rents, profits, and emoluments to the church belonging, excepting those which made the portion of the vicarage, were to appertain to the abbat and convent of Selby, and their successors, for ever. Carleton. Peter de Brus gave the grange here, which the monks had held of Agnes, late wife of Ranulph Fitz-Swain.^f Richard abbat of Selby granted to Robert prior of Drax all the tithe from the north part of the oak called Fair-haia, in the wood of Birne, or Berlay, through the middle of the marsh to Hundolfsweith; and from thence by the strait ditch directly to Espholm, and all the tithe from Espholme to Appletreholme, as the ditch goes to the new foss or ditch of Carleton: and the prior granted to the abbat all the tithes on the south to the new ditch, and from thence to the river Ayre. And Adam de Bellaqua gave this oak tree, called Fair-haia, as a boundary, never to be cut down (ad standum in perpetuum et non rescindendum), binding himself and his successors never to cut it down or root it up, sub pœna anathematis.^g In A. D. 1240, 8th of Stephen, R. de Pote gave lands here, lying near to the monks granary, on condition that R. abbat of Selby granted leave to the parishioners of this town to have a chantry and a proper chaplain, who should swear to observe all the rights of the church; and if he did not, the abbat, without contradiction, might remove him: the parishioners finding necessities for their chaplain and clerk.^h

Carleton, near Lincoln. Thomas Machurst gave three oxgangs of land in this territory in a culture called Hildalewang.ⁱ The abbat held here one toft, called Ramptonhall, two other tofts, a third part of the manor, eight acres, three selions, and one place called Joneldale, and another called Kathildale.

Challeflower, or Chatteflower. This manor is said, in the Register of York, to have belonged to the abbat of Selby;^k but it is apprehended to have been a mistake for Chelleslowe, in Bradford-dale. Robert de Everingham gave this place for the good of his own soul, and that of Isabel his wife,^l which she afterwards in her widowhood confirmed;^m and John de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, did the same.ⁿ

Croule. Galfrid de la Wyrce the fourth, in William the First's time, gave to Benedict the abbat a hundred of land (hundredum terræ) with sac and soc in this place, free from all services and customs;^o which was confirmed by King Henry I. free from all services, except danegeld; and also by King Richard I.^p and by Nigel de Albineio, who also gave them the wapontac and warren, that he might be a monk in their house. Duffield. King Richard I. confirmed to them one carucate of land here, given by Swane, homo Gilberti Tisun.^z By an Inquisition taken 13 Edw. II. A. D. 1320, it appears that the abbat of Selby had one messuage and one carucate of land (probably the same) in North Duffield.^a

Elvelay, now Kirk-Ella. In William the First's time, Gilbert Tysun gave the tithes and the church at Elveley, which were confirmed to them by King Richard I.^b In the 2d of Edward II. the abbat, having obtained the king's license, exchanged this church with the priory of Hauteprice for other lands.^c This church was confirmed to them by Roger de Mowbray,^d by Eustace de Vescy,^e by William Constable de Flaynburgh,^f and by John de Beauer.^g

There was a strong contest between John de Hesel, rector of this church, on the one part, and Osmund de Stuteville, rector of the church of Cottingham, on the other part, touching the tithes of Newland, and Newland fields; and of the town of Hull, from Hundolfgote to the road leading to the passage over the river Hull; and Beringham, or Deringham, Haverflat, Common-grange and Charter-grange, Suthinge, from a place called Prestenge, or Frestenge, towards the south, as Grinderdesty extends itself to Hundolfgote, and of the Whichri.

At last, in the 4th year of the pontificate of Godfrey de Kinton, archbishop of York, A. D. 1261, 45 Henry III., by the consent of the abbat of Selby, patron of Elvelay, and of Sir Hugh Bigod, patron of Cottingham church, it was agreed, that the rector of Cottingham should have the proper tithes of Newland, and of the fields called Newland-fields, and of the town of Hull, &c. as above: and the rector of Elvelay to have only the greater tithes of seventeen oxgangs, in the field of Skiteby; and of thirty-two oxgangs and five acres in the field of Wil-lardby; and of twenty-two acres, in parcels there, and in the field of Stenton; of sixteen acres, in a place called Stockinge, and in the . . . nineteen acres; and of thirty-two acres and a half in Newton, of which he might receive great and small tithes, saving to the rector of Cottingham all the lesser tithes of those places, excepting the thirty-three acres and a half in Newton. The Survey of this monastery made by the Commissioners in conformity to the king's letters missive, dated 23d of March, 31 Hen. VIII. given from the original in the Augmentation Office, will be found a curious document.^a

In the 32d of Henry the Eighth the site of Selby abbey was granted to Sir Ralph Sadler;^b Burton says in consideration of 736*l.* paid down, and 3*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* per annum. He adds, that in the same year Sir Ralph Sadler had licence to alienate the said site, with the land called the Little Park, containing by estimation ten acres, and the manor of Selby, with the appurtenances in Selby, to Leonard Beckwith and his heirs. It afterwards descended to the Walmsleys of Dunkehalgh, in Lancashire, whose heiress married Lord Petre.^c

Labbe, in his Nova Bibliotheca MSS. Librorum, fol. Par. 1657, tom. i. p. 594 to 626, has printed a legendary HISTORY of Selby Abbey, chiefly in illustration of the miracles of St. German: "Historia Selebiensis Monasterii quod fundatum est in Anglia, in honore sancti Germani Antissiodorensis episcopi, anno ab Incarnatione Domini millesimo sexagesimo nono." It appears to have been written by an anonymous author about the year 1184. In the preceding account of the Abbats of Selby it has been referred to for occasional facts.

Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, notices three REGISTERS of this monastery.

1. "Registrum abbatiae de Selby, penes Thomam Walmsley de Dunkehalgh in com. Lancast. arm. A. D. 1620, postea penes Carolum Walmsley de Skyner arm. contin. foll. cxxii. in membr."

Dugdale's Extracts in the Appendix to the present account were principally taken from this manuscript.^d See also MS. Rog. Dodsworth in Bibl. Bodl. tom. cxviii. fol. 1—41; tom. cxlv. fol. 55. A transcript of this Register, formerly in the possession of Nathaniel Johnston, M. D. of Pontefract, has been frequently referred to in some of the preceding pages as quoted by Burton.

2. "Chartularium in Archivis Ducatus Lancastriae:" two Instruments from which are copied by Dugdale.^e Extracts also occur from it in MS. Dodsw. tom. cxxxvi. fol. 85.

3. "Registrum penes Tho. Hurst de Ludburgh in com. Lincoln."

A few Instruments relating to this monastery are preserved in the Cottonian manuscript Cleop. D. III.^f

In the same collection was formerly preserved, marked Vitellius E. xvi. a Register of Charters and other Instruments during the abbacy of John Shirburn, but it perished in the fire of 1731.

Two Pleadings in Quo Waranto relating to warren and other privileges upon the lands of the abbey in Yorkshire, 9 and 21 Edw. I. will be found in the Appendix to the present account.^a Another occurs respecting remission of geld, danegeld, aids of sheriffs, &c. in the manor of Stanford, and its members in Northamptonshire.^b

In the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office in the Exchequer, Memoranda 21 Edw. III. rot. 4, is an enrolment of a charter relative to the possessions of this abbey.

In the King's Remembrancer's Office, "Carta regis abbati de Selby," enrolled Term. Trin. 27 Edw. III.

In the Augmentation Office, the particular for the grant of the site of the abbey, &c. to Sir Ralph Sadler, 32 Hen. VIII.; and divers depositions in the Court of Augmentations during the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edw. VI. as to the site and demesne lands.

An impression from an ancient SEAL of Selby Abbey is attached to an instrument of the year 1282, in the Harleian collection of charters, marked 44 i. 16. The obverse presents the figure of an abbat in pontificalibus, seated, but without a mitre; the right hand uplifted, as in the act of giving benediction: the left holding a crozier. The inscription, . . . ILLV . SĒI . GERMANI . SELEBIENSIS . ECLE. At the back is a Counter-Seal, in the centre of which, indented, is a head with a diadem (apparently an ancient gem) with the words DN . HONORIVS . AVG . in small characters. Extending beyond this indentation is another inscription, in characters considerably larger: CAPVD . NOSTRVM . CRISTVS . EST. William de Aslakeby was at this time abbat.

Among the ancient Seals engraved by Mr. George Vertue for the Society of Antiquaries,^c there is one of Richard, an earlier abbat, who seems to have used either the one above described, or a similar Counter-Seal. Lewis, in his Dissertation on the Antiquity and Use of Seals in England, 4to. 1740, p. 26, has this remark upon it: "The Seal of Richard abbat of Selby has for its reverse the impression of the head of Honorius the Roman emperor, with this very inscription round it, D . HONORIVS . AVG . and yet his ignorance suffered him to mistake it for the head of Jesus Christ, and there is actually a rim put round it on which is inscribed in very bad Latin, CAPVD HOC CRISTVS EST."

Appendant to an ancient deed in the office of the duchy of Lancaster is a Seal also of a Richard abbat of Selby. The impression is of red wax, large and oval, representing an abbat at full length, having his staff in his left hand, and his right in the act of giving benediction to a youth. The legend is, RICARD . DEI . GRA . MINISTER . HVM . ECCLIE . SĒI . GERMANI . DE . SELBE .

At the Chapter-house Westminster, appendant to an instrument 22d Hen. VIII. is a Seal representing a mitred abbat with his crozier standing under a richly ornamented Gothic canopy, with the following legend: SIGILLVM . ROBTI . SELBY . ABBIS . SELBY. In a shield under the abbat's feet are the Armorial bearings of the abbey.

The ARMS of Selby Abbey were, Sa. Three swans Ar. They occur so emblazoned in a Procession Roll of the Lords to Parliament in 1512;^d as well as in a Visitation of the North, by Thomas Tong, Norroy, began Aug. 7th, 1530.^e A Collection of Arms, however, among the Lansdowne manuscripts, said to be in the hand of Sir William Dethic, Garter, gives the swans Or.^f

The third of the Plates of Monastic Arms in the last editions of Tanner's Notitia Monastica, by some mistake, appropriate the Arms of Selby abbey to York.

The CHURCH of Selby is still an edifice of extraordinary beauty, though built at different times and in different tastes. The nave and north part of the transept are of Norman architecture; the choir and east end in the pointed style. The tower, in the centre, appears to have been rebuilt at the beginning of the eighteenth century: the former tower having fallen down on the 30th of March, 1690, and destroyed the south end of the transept and the roof of the south-west aisle. The western entrance is through a rich Norman doorway. The east end had formerly what was called a Jesse-window, representing the genealogy of Our Saviour in painted glass; very few fragments of which are now remaining. A chapter-house is attached to the south side of the choir.

The following are stated to be the dimensions of the church. The length, from east to west, two hundred and sixty-seven feet; the body, from north to south, fifty feet; length of the transept, a hundred feet; the east and west ends being of equal distance from the pillars supporting the tower.

The west end of the church differs materially from the representation engraved of it in the former edition of the Monasticon Anglicanum.

Burton, in the Monasticon Eboracense, p. 387, speaking of the OFFICES of the monastery in his time, A.D. 1737, says, "The chief buildings were on the west and south side of the church, to which they joined by the supposed chapter-house, arched with stone, towards the east end, and by a cloister towards the west end, near adjoining to the minister's house, with a row of four round stone pillars, supporting its groined arched roof of stone. The first is now the vestry, over which is a chamber used as a school; the latter is turned into an open stable, and upon the arch a garden. The barn, with part of the granary, and chief entrance, or great gateway, facing the north, are yet remaining. On the side of the latter is the porter's lodge, &c.: over these, arched with stone, are two chambers, in which the abbats held their courts, and transacted public business; and they are applied to the same use at this time."

The Conventual Church of Selby was made parochial by the king's letters patent, dated 20th March, 16 James I. A.D. 1618.

The CELL to Selby Abbey at SNAITH in Yorkshire, in the Deanery of Pontefract, has been already noticed.^a Tanner says it was granted, as parcel of the possessions of Selby, in the 4th of Edward VI. to John earl of Warwick.^b

The Hospital of GLANFORD BRIGGE, in the parish of Wrauby, in Lincolnshire, was also subordinate to Selby Abbey; one of the monks of which was usually appointed Master.

[Ex orig. in domo Capitulari Westmonast. asservato.]

ABBAS de Seleby summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo waranto clamat habere tol et them, sok et sak, blodwyte, wreck, et weyf, infangenthef, utfangenthef, pillorium, tumberellum, furcas, et feriam, et emendas assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ in Seleby, et habere liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis in Seleby, Thorp, Brayton, Hamelton, Fuston, Hillum, Acastr', Chelleslawe, Holm, Snayth, Routhelcliff, et Estoft, et esse quietus de geldis et danegeldis, auxiliis vicecomitum, et sectis comitat. shirarum, hundred. et wappent. et de omnibus finibus et amerciamentis, et esse quietus pro se et hominibus suis de villis prædictis de passagio, pontagio, muragio, stallagio, et teolonio per totum regnum domini regis Angliæ quæ ad coronam et dignitatem domini regis pertinent sine licentia et voluntate domini regis et progenitorum suorum regum Angliæ.

Et Abbas per attornatum suum venit. Et quo ad tol et them, sok et sak, weyf, infangenthef, pillorium, tumberellum, furcas, mercatum per diem Lunæ, et feriam die sancti Germani, et in vigilia, et in die sequenti prædictum diem, &c. et emendas assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ in Seleby, dicit quod ipsas libertates clamat ab antiquo. Et quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria semper pacifice usi sunt prædictis libertatibus absque aliqua temporis interruptione. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et quo ad blodwyte, wreck, et utfangenthef dicit quod abbas libertates ad præsens declamat, &c. in isto Comitatu. Et quo ad liberam warennam in dominicis terris suis, &c. dicit quod ipsam clamat per cartam domini Regis patris domini regis nunc, dat. anno regni sui tricesimo sexto, quam profert, et quæ testatur quod idem dominus rex concessit cuidam Abbati de Seleby prædecessori istius abbatis et ejusdem loci conventui quod ipsi et successores sui imperpetuum habeant liberam warennam in omnibus dominicis terris suis maneriorum suorum de Seleby, Thorp, Brayton, Amelton, Friston, Hillum, Acastr', Chelleslawe, Holm, Snayth, Routhelclive, et Estoft in com. Ebor. dum tamen terræ illæ non sint infra metas forestæ domini regis, &c. Et quo ad hoc quod clamat esse quietus, &c. Dicit quod quidam prædecessor suus tempore domini regis Henrici, patris domini regis nunc, perquisivit ten. quæ ipse modo tenet in Thorp; quo ad homines suos prædictæ villæ non clamat quod sint quieti de communibus finibus et amerciamentis, &c. nec de theloneo, &c. Sed clamat esse quietus pro se et hominibus suis in Villis prædictis, prout in Breve continetur, exceptis prædictis hominibus suis de Thorp ab antiquo. Et dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria semper pacifice usi sunt hujusmodi libertate, &c. absque aliqua temporis interruptione, &c. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam, &c.

Et Rogerus de Hegham qui sequitur pro domine rege dicit quo ad tol et them, sok et sak, et weyf, infangenthef, pillorium, tumberellum, furcas, mercatum, et feriam, quod prædictus Abbas abutitur illis libertatibus, &c. Et petit quod inquiratur pro domino rege qualiter usus est, &c.

Et quo ad blodwyte, wreke, et utfangenthef, quas prædictus abbas declamat, Rogerus dicit quod ipse abbas illis usus est, &c. Et petit quod inquiretur pro domino rege, &c. Et quo ad liberam warennam in villis prædictis Rogerus dicit quod prædictus abbas auctoritate prædictæ cartæ appropriavit sibi liberam warennam in terris liberorum vicinorum suorum, et terras illas tenet inwarrennatas, &c. Et hoc petit quod inquiretur pro domino rege, &c. Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus abbas clamat esse quietus pro se et hominibus suis in prædictis villis, exceptis hominibus suis de Thorp, Rogerus dicit quod non sunt quieti, nec esse debent, &c. Et hoc petit quod inquiretur pro domino rege, &c. Dicit etiam quod prædictus abbas et prædecessores sui perquisiverunt diversa tenementa de novo quæ quidem ten. sectam darent ad com. istum et ad wapp. domini regis, &c. quam quidem sectam prædictus Abbas penitus subtraxit, &c. Et hoc petit quod inquiretur pro domino rege, &c. Ideo rei veritas inquiretur, &c. Et similiter prædictus Rogerus dicit pro domino rege quod prædictus Abbas non permittit ballivos domini regis intrare in terris suis ad aliqua officia facienda, &c. Immo impedit, &c. in contemptum domini regis manifestum, &c. Et hoc petit quod inquiretur, &c.

Et abbas dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria semper huiusmodi libertatem habere consueverunt, quod quando ballivus domini regis aliquod officium debeat exercere in Seleby venit ad ballivum ipsius Abbatis et ei committet huiusmodi executionem faciend. et ipse ballivus ipsius Abbatis executionem factam testabitur ballivo domini regis, &c. Et si ballivus ipsius abbatis negligens fuerit, tunc bene licebit ballivo domini regis ob defectum ballivi ipsius Abbatis huiusmodi executionem facere, et de huiusmodi statu fuit ipse abbas et prædecessores sui seisi, &c.

Et Rogerus dicit quod nec prædictus abbas nec prædecessores sui huiusmodi statum unquam habuerunt, &c. Et hoc petit quod inquiretur pro domino rege, &c. Ideo rei veritas inquiretur, &c.

Et Simon de Kyme, et alii iuratores ad hoc electi, dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus Abbas et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo extat non memoria semper habere usi sunt sok et sak, tol et tem, sicut eas clamat, &c. Et quo ad weyf dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus Abbas et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria semper habere usi sunt weyf. Et dicunt quod ipse abbas, quando percipit huiusmodi animalia quæ dicunt weyf, ipse non facit proclamationem fieri de eis infra annum et diem secundum cons. &c. sed statim ea detinet ad opus suum. ro. 14.

Et quo ad infangenthef et furcas, dicunt quod prædictus abbas et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria semper pacifice usi sunt habere infangenethef et furcas, sed dicunt quod quando aliquis captus est ibi cum manuopere, &c. et ad sectam, &c. pro latrocinio facto in geldabili comitatu extra potestatem et feodum ipsius abbatis, ipse abbas in curia sua de Seleby si huiusmodi feloniam recognoscit, &c. illum dampnat. Et si se posuerit in inquisitionem, &c. prædictus abbas faciat inquisitionem per homines suos et per eorum veredictum illum dampnat seu quietat, &c. Et iuratores quæsi si aliquis Coronator intersit huiusmodi recognitionibus seu inquisitionibus, &c. dicunt quod non. Et quo ad pillorium et tumberellum, mercatum, et feriam, dicunt quod prædictus abbas et prædecessores sui, a tempore quo non extat memoria, semper usi sunt huiusmodi libertatibus, &c. &c. Et similiter de emendis assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ in Seleby; sed dicunt quod ipse semper punit transgressores per misericordias et redemptiones judicialium, sed non ponendo eos super pillorium et tumberellum. Et quo ad blodwyte dicunt super sacramentum suum quod abbas illud capit tam sine secta quam ad sectam. Et quantum ad wreke dicunt similiter quod ipse capit in aqua de Use ea quæ invenit periclitata super feodum suum de batellis et huiusmodi tamquam wreke, et similiter cepit ibi unum batellum periclitatum cum lignis ad valenc. duorum solidorum. Et dicunt quod abbas similiter capit ibi nomine wreke omnes stergiones captos in partibus illis, in aqua illa, per quemcumque capti fuerint. Et dicunt quod homines prædicti abbatis insecuti fuerunt homines Willielmi de Atton qui vulneraverunt ibi quendam porpiscem usque ad mortem, et voluerunt abstulisse ab eis sturgionem illum et sic voluerunt appropriasse ad prædictum abbatem sturgionem illum in forisfactura prædicta; sed homines prædicti Willielmi hoc non permiserunt, ita quod per contentionem inter eos ortam homines episcopi Dunelm. piscem illum ceperunt, &c. Et quo ad utfangenthef dicunt super sacramentum suum quod nec prædictus abbas nec prædecessores sui unquam fuerunt in seisinâ huiusmodi libertatis. Et quo ad warennam, dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus abbas tenet dominicas terras priorissæ de Apelton in Acastr. inwarennatas, &c. et impedit priorissam ibi fugare. Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus abbas clamat esse quietus de communibus finibus, et amerciamentis, et sectis, &c. ab antiquo, dicunt quod, post tempus regis Ricardi, prædecessores prædicti abbatis perquisiverunt diversa tenementa in prædictis villis unde diversa servicia domino regi sunt subtracta, videlicet, jam sexaginta annis elapsis, perquisiverunt dimidiam bovatom terræ in Holm in Spaldingmor' pro qua feoffator prædicti abbatis et omnes antecessores sui solebant facere singulis annis unum adventum ad generale wapp. regis, &c. Et valet per annum adventus ille sex denar. Et similiter prestabant singulis annis unum obolum pro tenemento illo ad opus domini regis de fine wappentach. &c. Et similiter, jam quadraginta annis elapsis, prædecessores prædicti abbatis perquisiverunt septem tofta et quatuor bovatas terræ in Stillingflet pro quibus feoffator prædictorum abbatum et omnes antecessores sui facere solebant unum adventum singulis annis ad generalem com. Ebor. et unum adventum ad generale wappent. regis, &c. Et valent illi adventus duodecim denar. per annum, et similiter, jam viginti annis elapsis prædecessor prædicti abbatis perquisivit tria tofta et duas bovatas terræ in Brayton pro quibus feoffator prædicti prædecessoris et omnes antecessores sui solebant facere singulis annis unum adventum ad generale wapp. regis, et valet adventus ille per annum octo denar. et jam viginti et octo annis elapsis prædecessores prædicti abbatis perquisiverunt unum toftum et unam bovatom terræ in Gayeford, pro quibus feoffator suus et omnes antecessores sui singulis annis solebant facere unum adventum ad generale wapp. domini regis et valet adventus ille per annum sex denar. Et similiter jam triginta annis elapsis perquisiverunt prædecessores prædicti abbatis duas partes villæ de Thorp, et omnia prædicta tenementa; et similiter tenementa quæ prædictus abbas tenet in Acastr' sunt geldabilia ad communes fines et amerciamenta et huiusmodi. Et dicunt quod a tempore quo prædicta ten. devenerunt ad manus abbatum de Seleby, prædictæ sectæ sive prædicti adventus et prædictus finis oboli, &c. domino Regi de prædictis tenementis fuerunt subtracti, sed pro prædictis tenementis ipsius abbatis de Thorp, dicunt quod archiepiscopus Ebor. pro tenementis illis eo quod de ipso tenentur per senescallum suum facit sectam sicut et pro aliis tenementis suis. Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus abbas et homines sui de antiquis tenuris ipsius abbatis, videlicet villani sui de tenuris illis de omnibus rebus emptis ad opus suum proprium sint quieti de theoloneo præstando in omnibus villis quæ habent libertates suas per posteriorem concessionem, quia abbatia de Seleby habet suas, &c.; sed in villis quæ libertates suas habent per anteriorem concessionem, &c. sicut in villis de Ponte Burgi et Pontefracto, prædictus abbas et homines sui non sunt quieti, &c. Et quo ad hoc quod prædictus abbas clamat executiones fieri in Seleby per ballivos suos et non per ballivos domini regis, &c. dicunt super sacramentum quod tempore domini Henrici regis patris domini regis nunc, ballivi ipsius domini regis solebant facere ibidem omnimodas executiones, &c. Et dicunt quod circiter per tres annos ante ultimam guerram fuit quidam Petrus de Percy vicecomes hic. Et tunc voluit quidam Thomas abbas de Seleby prædecessor istius abbatis per ballivos suos fecisse huiusmodi executionem, sed prædictus vicecomes per totum tempus suum nunquam id permisit, sed semper fecit fieri huiusmodi executiones per ballivos domini regis; et sic fecit vicecomes proximus prædecessor suus. Et postea post prædictam guerram, &c. prædecessores prædicti abbatis appropriaverunt sibi huiusmodi libertatem, et illa postea usi sunt, et sic impediverunt ipsi ballivos domini regis ad faciend. ibi huiusmodi executiones, &c. Et ideo quo ad sok et sak, tol et them, pillorium, tumberellum, mercatum et feriam, et utfangenthef, concessum est quod prædictus abbas ad præsens inde sine die salvo jure domini regis, &c.

Et quo ad blodwyte et wreke quæ declamavit, &c. quia per jur. istam convictum est quod illis libertatibus usus est, ideo concessum est quod prædictus abbas in misericordia, &c. Et inhibuitur eidem abbati quod de cætero illis non utatur. Et similiter per juratam istam convictum est quod idem abbas abutitur libertatibus suis de weyf, infangenthef, et emend. assisæ panis et cervisiæ fractæ, et warennæ, et etiam quia . . . clam. ab antiquo esse quietus de sectis, et theloniis, et communibus finibus et amerciamentis, &c. de terris et tenementis quæ prædecessores sui perquisiverunt, tempore Regis Ricardi et post, et similiter, quare prædicta servitia domino R. subtraxit et detinuit. Ideo ipse in misericordia. Et dominus rex recuperet arreragia hujusmodi, sectas, et servicia, et prædicta tenementa ipsius abbatis quæ tempore regis Ricardi consueverunt esse geldabilia rem. geldabilia. Et abbas pro tenementis illis contribuat ad communes fines et amerciamenta, &c. Et quia prædictus abbas impedivit ballivos domini regis facere executiones, &c. ubi ballivi domini regis hujusmodi executionem facere solebant, &c. Ideo ipse custodiatur. ro. 14 d.

NUM. XXII.

Processus pro rationabili auxilio ad primogenitum Regis filium in militem creandum.

DOMINUS rex mandavit hic breve suum de magno sigillo suo quod est inter communia de hoc anno in hæc verba: Edwardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ et Franciæ et dominus Hiberniæ thesaurario et baronibus suis de scaccario salutem. Ex parte dilecti nobis in Christo abbatis de Seleby per petitionem suam coram nobis in præsentis parlamento nostro exhibitam nobis est supplicatum, ut cum ipse per cartas progenitorum nostrorum quondam regum Angliæ, quas per cartam nostram confirmavimus, teneat, ipseque et prædecessores sui abbates loci illius, à tempore confectionis cartarum et confirmationum prædictarum hucusque tenuerunt omnia terras et tenementa sua in singulis comitatibus regni nostri Angliæ in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam, de omnibus auxiliis regum quieti, absque eo quod ipsi auxilium aliquod nobis seu eisdem progenitoribus nostris pro primogenitis filiis ipsorum progenitorum nostrorum militibus faciendis seu filiabus suis maritandis seu aliquod hujusmodi servitium pro eisdem terris et tenementis à tempore prædicto hucusque facere consueverunt, velimus demandæ quam collectores auxilii nobis ad primogenitum filium nostrum militem faciendum concessi in quibuscumque comitatibus regni nostri Angliæ, eidem abbati pro hujusmodi auxilio ad opus nostrum pro terris et tenementis suis prædictis præstando faciunt supersederi, et ipsum inde jubere omnino exonerari.

Nos, ipsum abbatem contra formam cartarum et confirmationum prædictarum nolentes in hac parte indebitè onerari, vobis mandamus, quod visis dictis cartis confirmationum, si per inspectionum earundem vobis constare poterit, prædictum abbatem terras et tenementa sua prædicta in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam in forma prædicta tenere, tunc demandæ quam iidem collectores præfato abbati pro hujusmodi auxilio nobis ratione terrarum aut tenementorum suorum prædictorum ad opus nostrum præstando faciunt supersederi facientes, ipsum abbatem de quibusdam pecuniarum summis ab ipso occasione præmissa exactis ad dictum scaccarium exonerari et quietum esse faciatis, et distractionem, si quæ ei ea occasione facta fuerit, sine dilatione relaxari faciatis eidem. Teste me ipso apud Westmonast. xj. die Februarii anno regni nostri Angliæ xxij. regni verò nostri Franciæ ix.

Et modò videlicet ad crastinum Purificationis beate Mariæ venit hic prædictus abbas per fratrem Walterum de Halton et advocatum suum, quæsitum esse per collectores auxilii Northamptonæ, Leycestriæ, ac partibus et Estriding, in comitatu Eborum, et de Lyndeseye, in comitatu Lincolnæ, pro diversis pecuniarum summis regi solvendis de auxilio prædicto, ratione videlicet terrarum et tenementorum suorum in hundredo de Stanford super Avene, in dicto comitatu Northamptonæ, villa de Stormesworth, in dicto com. Leicestriæ, villis de Selebya, Rouclif, Fristuna, et Selebya Minore, Hameltona et Acastria et Hillum, in dictis partibus de Westriding, de Gumby, et Holm, cum pertinentiis in dictis partibus de Estriding, et in hundredo de Crull in dictis partibus de Lindeseye: et hoc minus justè, quia dicit quod ipse in præsentis tenet, ipseque et prædecessores sui à tempore confectionis cartarum et confirmationum prædictarum hucusque tenuerunt omnia terras et tenementa sua in comitatibus et partibus prædictis sita in singulis comitatibus Angliæ, in liberam, puram et perpetuam elemosinam, de omnibus auxiliis regum quieti. Et inde exhibuit curiæ dictam cartam de confirmatione, cujus data est apud Westmonasterium, quinto die Martii, anno secundo regis hujus. Quia quidem carta visa compertum est, inter cætera, contineri in eadem quod feoffatores subscripti dederunt Benedicto quondam abbati de Seleby et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus terras tenementa, et loca subscripta, videlicet, Willielmus Conquestor fundator abbatiae de Seleby, Selebyam, et Rouclyf. Thomas quondam archiepiscopus Eboracensis, Fristunam et Selebyam Minorem. Gilbertus de Lacy, Hameltonam. Osbertus quondam vicecomes Eboracensis, Acastriam. Thomas secundus quondam archiepiscopus Eboracensis, Hillum. Quidam Gilbertus Teyson, Gumby, cum pertinentiis, et Holm. Quidam Guido de Rencourt, hundredum de Stanford super Havene. Gaufridus de la Werchy, hundredum vocatum Crull. Tenendum et habendum ab omni exactione et molestia ac vexatione soluta et quieti, prout elemosinam regiam in perpetua pace decet tenere, prout plenius patet in dicta carta de confirmatione, cujus tenor irrotulatur in memorandis anni xxj. regis hujus inter recorda de termino sanctæ Trinitatis ex parte alterius rememoratorum. Et petit dictus abbas quod de hujusmodi distractione indebitè sibi facta in terris et tenementis prædictis, ac eorum pertinentiis quæ sic tenet in liberam puram et perpetuam elemosinam supersedeatur, et quod de summis sic ab eo exactis de auxilio prædicto ratione terrarum et tenementorum exoneretur, et quod hoc fiat juxta formam brevis regii et cartæ prædictorum.

Et quia in dicta carta non fit mentio de aliquo loco seu villa de Stormesworth, in quo ut in cæteris distingitur pro auxilio prædicto ut superius suggestum est, quæsitum est ab eodem abbate qualiter velit informare curiam inde. Qui dicit, quod locus de Stormesworth est parcella et de pertinentiis dictæ villæ de Stanford, asserens ipsum abbatem seu aliquem prædecessorum suorum non adquisivisse post dictum quintum diem Martii anno secundo aliquas terras et tenementa in dicto loco de Stormesworth, neque in aliis villis seu locis prædictis. Et hæc omnia prætendit verificare qualitercumque curia, &c. Super quo habita deliberatione, quia visum est curiæ legitime procedi non posse ad finalem exonerationem dicti abbatis in hac parte faciendam, quousque dicti collectores auxilii in comitatibus et partibus prædictis computaverint, &c. Concordatum est quod mandetur eisdem collectoribus, quod de demanda quam faciunt præfato abbati pro auxilio prædicto ratione terrarum et tenementorum prædictorum supersedeant usque super compotum suum, &c. Proviso semper, quod si idem abbas seu prædecessores sui quicquam perquisierint post dictum quintum diem Martii in villis et locis prædictis hujusmodi auxilium inde levetur, &c. Et mandatum est eis per diversa brevina xij. die Februarii hoc anno.

of Shrewsbury, who had been the house of St. David, the coat of arms of the house of St. David, to put on, caused himself to be clothed in the habit of a monk of Shrewsbury with the consent of the king. He then, the witness of him, that three days before his death he wrote a letter to the convent of Shrewsbury with the contents. He died on the 24th day of August, A.D. 1094, and was honourably buried in the church of the monastery. Such is the relation of Geoffrey of Monmouth. Powell, in his Hist. of Wales, asserts that he was slain on the March between Cardiff and Brecknock.

Benedictine Abbey of Shrewsbury,

IN THE COUNTY OF

SALOP.

SHREWSBURY had a monastery dedicated to St. Peter before the foundation of the abbey. In Domesday it is expressly said, "In Sciropesberie civitate facit Rogerius Comes abbatiam; et eidem dedit MONASTERIUM S. Petri, ubi erat parochia civitatis."^a In the church of St. Peter here alluded to,^b Roger earl of Arundel and Shrewsbury, called also Roger de Belmeis and Roger de Montgomery, in 1083, vowed the construction of an Abbey, placing his gloves upon the altar in token of his intent.^c Adelaisa his wife joined him in the work: the absolute building of which appears to have been principally left to Rainaldus and Frodo, two monks of the abbey of Seez, in Normandy.^d

The "Foundationis et Dotationis Historia" given by Dugdale from the Abbey Register^e places the foundation in 1087, but may be considered as rather alluding to the time of the endowment. The completion of the buildings, it is probable, and the settling in them of the first monks, who were all brought from Seez, may be fixed to the early part of the reign of William Rufus. Ordericus Vitalis, speaking of the first abbat, expressly says, "primus abbas illius monasterii, Gulielmo Rufo regnante, eloquens Fulcherus fuit."

The new monastery was constructed in the east suburb, beyond the river, on a spot called FORIETE.^f

The founder's endowment may be seen in his charter.^g

In the Domesday Survey we find the abbey of Shrewsbury holding eight hides and a half of land in Aitone, nine hides in Aiminstre, and one hide in Burtune.^h Beside these possessions, we learn from the entries of the lands belonging to Earl Roger himself that the abbey of St. Peter held of the earl the church of Recordine with one hide, the church of Bascherche, the church of Odenet, the church of Alnedstrev with five hides, the church of Corfan with one hide, the church of Nessham with a virgate, and the church of Stodesdone with two hides and a half. Under Beritune it is said, "hujus æcclesiam et presbyterum tenet S. Petrus in Sciropesberia."ⁱ Rainald the sheriff is also said to have given the manor of Dodefort for the good of the soul of his predecessor Warin.^k of Shrewsbury, obtained from the house of Cluni, in Burgundy, the coat of St. Hugh sometime abbat there, for himself to put on, caused himself to be shorn a monk in the said abbey of Shrewsbury with the consent of his wife; where it was observed of him, that three days before his death he wholly applied himself to devout conference and prayers with the convent. He died on the 6th kal. of August, A. D. 1094, and was honourably buried in the church of the monastery. Such is the relation of Ordericus Vitalis. Powell, in his Hist. of Wales, asserts that he was slain by the Welsh between Cardiff and Brecknock.

^b Compare Domesd. tom. i. foll. 253, 254 b.

^a See the Append. of Instrum. Num. IV.

^b The Charter of foundation, Num. III. speaks of it as dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul. Tanner says, "Its dedication to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Milburgh I find no where but in Gervase Cantuar."

^c Ordericus Vitalis. See Num. I.

^g Dugdale has collected numerous particulars concerning Roger de Montgomery in his account of the earls of Arundel and Shrewsbury in the Baronage, vol. i. pp. 27, 28. Adelaisa, named in Roger de Montgomery's foundation charter, was his second wife, daughter of Ebrard de Pusaic. Roger himself, having, by the hands of Reginald then prior

King William Rufus granted to the monks of Shrewsbury a copious Charter of Confirmation,^a which was afterwards succeeded by another from King Henry the Third.^b

Hugh earl of Shrewsbury, the son of Roger de Montgomery the founder, added to his father's donations the tithes of his various manors in Shropshire.^c

The Lord Walter de Clifford gave to the monks a hundred and twenty acres of wood-land at Luhtune, which his daughter Matilda de Lungespe confirmed.^d

Walchelin Mayminot gave the vill of Lea juxta Ellesmere.^e

These appear to have been among the more prominent of the early benefactors.

Richard Fitz-Alan earl of Arundel, in the 20th Edw. I. gave the monks, in alms, beside a portion of his land in Iselham, the advowsons of the churches of Opton, Trohford, and St. Oswald de Albo-Monasterio, with several chapels.^f

Some legal proceedings relating to the churches of Walton^g and Stodesdon,^h and the manor of Foriete Monachorum in Shrewsbury, occur among the Placita de Quo Waranto of the 20th and 21st of Edw. I.ⁱ

In the 2d Edw. II. the abbat of Shrewsbury fined to the king for licence to hold lands in Aldbrighton Use, and Harlascote.^k

In the 12th Edw. II. the abbat fined a hundred shillings for licence to hold lands in Potton, with the advowson of the church.^l

In the 18th of Edw. III. for a fine of ten marks, a licence was obtained for adding to the possessions of the monastery the manor of Burton juxta Condovre.^m

ABBATS of SHREWSBURY.

FULCHERED, a monk of Seez, was the first abbat. His appointment appears not to have taken place till the reign of King William Rufus. Stowe is certainly mistaken in calling him a son of the founder.ⁿ Willis places his death in the month of March, A. D. 1113.^o

GODFREY, who had also been a monk of Seez, was the next abbat. He died on the 11th kal. of April, 1128.^p He was succeeded by HERBERT, who had been a monk of Shrewsbury.^q He is said to have procured for his monastery the translation of St. Winifred's relics from Wales.

ROBERT occurs in 1140. He died in 1167,^r and was succeeded by

ADAM, who was deposed in 1175:^s when

RALPH succeeded.^t

WILLIAM is mentioned as abbat by Willis, in 1182.^u

WALTER, prior of Leominster, was made abbat of Shrewsbury, according to one account, in 1218; according to other authorities, not till 1221.^v Willis says he died or resigned in 1225: from the Patent Rolls, however, it seems that the royal assent was given to the election of

HENRY, who had previously been prior of the monastery, on August 24th, 1223.^y

ADAM was elected abbat in 1244, 28 Hen. III.^z Upon his cession, another

ADAM, sacrist of the monastery, was elected abbat. The royal assent to his election was given May 21st, 1250.^{aa} In the same year, on August 19th, 34 Hen. III. the royal assent was given to the election of

WILLIAM, sub-prior of Coventry.^{ab}

HENRY, a monk of Evesham, was elected, according to Willis, in 1251.^{ac} In the 41st Hen. III. he was sent envoy to Spain.^{ad} Upon his cession,

THOMAS, precentor of the monastery, was elected. He obtained the royal assent Dec. 26th, 1258.^{ae} Upon his death,

WILLIAM DE UPTON was elected. He received the temporalities of the monastery Aug. 11th, 1266.^{af}

LUKE DE WENLOCK received the royal assent to his election Jan. 24th, 1272;^{ag} upon whose cession,

JOHN DE DRAYTON was elected. He received the temporalities of the monastery Feb. 11th, 1279.^{ah} Upon his death,

WILLIAM DE MOKELEG, or MOCKELEY, was elected. He received the royal assent on June 20th, and had the temporalities July 2d, 1291.^{ai}

ADAM DE CLEBURY was elected on Mockeley's death. He received the temporalities on June 8th, 1332.^{aj}

HENRY DE ALSTON received the royal assent to his election Aug. 3d, and the temporalities Aug. 11th, 1355.^{ak} Upon his death,

NICHOLAS STEVENES was elected; to whom the temporalities were restored Dec. 11th, 1361.^{al}

THOMAS DE PRESTBURY received the royal assent to his election August 17th, and had the temporalities Sept. 7th, 1398.^{am} He seems to have engaged in the politics of the time. He received a pardon from the king in the 14th Hen. IV. and again, when indicted for felony, in the 3d of Hen. V.^{an} Upon his death,

JOHN HAMPTON was elected abbat. He received the royal assent Aug. 17th, and the temporalities September 1st, 1425.^{ao} He died in 1432: in which year

THOMAS LUDLOW, D. D. was elected. The temporalities were restored to him Sept. 5th, 1432.^{ap}

THOMAS MYNDE, B. D. received the royal assent to his election Jan. 22d, and had the temporalities restored Feb. 4th, 1433.^{aq}

RICHARD LYE received the temporalities of the monastery Jan. 20th, 1495.^{ar} In the Procession Roll to Parliament of 1512, copied among Mr. Cole's manuscripts in the Museum, he is called Lord Richard Lys. In this year in the month of March, while in attendance in Parliament, he died; and was buried in the church of Little St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, with this epitaph,

"Hic jacet dominus Ricardus Lye quondam abbas Salopiæ, qui sua industria, sumptibus magnis, et suis laboribus, Deo suadente, recuperavit libertates suæ Ecclesiæ Salopiæ prædictæ et postea obiit iv^{to}. die Martii, tempore Parlamenti, Anno Domini 1512. Cujus animæ propicietur Deus. Amen."^a

RICHARD BAKER received the temporalities as abbat May 24th, 1512.^b

RICHARD MARSHALL was the next abbat.

THOMAS BUTLER occurs abbat in 1533. He surrendered his monastery to the king Jan. 24th, 1539—40.^c

Phillips, in his History and Antiquities of Shrewsbury, says, "34th Hen. VIII. Thomas Forster and Elizabeth his wife account in the Exchequer for the temporalities of the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul at Salop.

"22d July, 38th Henry VIII. the king granted to Edward Watson of Rockingham in com. North. Esq^r. and Henry Herdson of London tanner 'domum et scitum nuper Monasterii Petri et Pauli de Salop;' and all the churchyard and orchard called the Pole Yard, alias Camecole, with a certain close of land on the south side of the said Pole Yard, with all and singular their appurtenances, &c. for ever, to hold of the king as of his honour of Grafton in com. North. by fealty only in free socage, and not in capite, paying yearly 4s. in the court of Augmentation for all services."^d

The 23d July, he adds, being the next day, the said Watson and Herdson granted the same to William Langley of Salop, tailor; and on the 5th of August following seisin and livery were given to the said William Langley, in whose family it continued till about the year 1702, when it was purchased by Edward Baldwin, Esq., whose descendant, Thomas Jelf Powys, Esq. is the present possessor.

Willis, in a manuscript note on his Mitred Abbeys preserved in one of Cole's MSS. says, "The family of Langley who owned the scite of the abbey never prospered after they had dug up the bones, &c. interred in the Church, and sold the foundation stones. The man that dug up St. Winifred's coffin was struck lame, as they affirmed to me."

Shrewsbury was one of the places fixed upon by Henry VIII. himself as the site of an intended bishoprick, the see of which was to have comprehended Shropshire and a part of Staffordshire. Part of the revenues of the abbey were destined for the support of the bishoprick; and Dr. Bourchier, the last abbat of Leicester, is said to have been nominated to that dignity. Another portion was to have been allotted to the maintenance of a dean and chapter.

The abbat of Shrewsbury was mitred, and sat in the upper house of parliament.

One, at least, of the SEALS of Shrewsbury abbey bore a device, representing, within an oval area, two arms clothed; one of a man in armour, holding a sword upright; the other as of a monk holding a crozier: surrounded by the inscription, S. COMMUNE DE FFORYATE MONACHORVM. The term Fforiate, alluding to the street or spot on which the abbey stood, is noticed in the founder's charter, as well as in that of confirmation from King William Rufus: in the latter it is said, "qui vicus Anglice dicitur BIFORIETE, quod Latine significat ante portam." In a Quo Warranto pleading of the 20th Edw. I. the very words of the seal are used: the abbat being summoned to answer to the king respecting certain rights and privileges claimed by him "in manerio suo de Foriet Monachorum." Leland, in his Collectanea, in a passage already referred to, calls the abbey itself "Foriet in suburbio Salop." And Castle Foregate, and Abbey Foregate, are still names of streets in Shrewsbury. An engraving of this seal is given in "Some Account of the Ancient and Present State of Shrewsbury," 12^o. 1808; where another seal of the abbey is described as bearing St. Peter mitred, having a key in his left hand, the right being elevated in the act of benediction.

The ARMS of this monastery are given in the initial Letter to the present Account, from Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica. In the Procession Roll to Parliament of 1512, already quoted, they are given, simply, Az. a lion rampant and bordure Or. without the crozier.

The following was Brown Willis's account of the remains of Shrewsbury abbey in 1718:

"The whole that now remains of the abbey church is the nave and side aisles; viz. from the great broad tower at the west end, wherein are six large bells, to the cross or choir part. The vaulted arches of the aforesaid aisles are still in being, and to support them and the rest of the building, is a wall run up between the columns. This wall is now the east end, and has lately had windows struck through it. The choir, cloisters, chapter-house, &c. are entirely destroyed, as is the stone roof of that part of the nave which is yet standing, occasioned in all likelihood through want of its lead covering; of which it probably continued destitute for some time after the Dissolution. This remaining part of the fabrick seems to have been thus patched up and made parochial in Queen Elizabeth's time. There is in it a wooden statue, which as they say belonged to the founder's tomb, anciently erected in the choir part."^a

The eastern and northern sides of the wall which formerly enclosed the abbey precinct still remain almost entire. A mansion-house, within the enclosure, presents some relics of the monastic buildings, and the remains of some inferior appendages to the establishment are to be seen near the Meole brook. A small octagonal structure on the south side of the garden, generally called "The Stone Pulpit" (which has frequently been engraved), is supposed to have been a structure belonging to the Refectory. The nave, the western tower, and the north porch of the Church, still remain: the nave serving as the parish church of Holy Cross.

The following are given, in the aforesaid work entitled "Some Account of the Ancient and Present State of Shrewsbury," 8^o. Shrewsb. 1808, p. 132, as the dimensions of the existing remnants of the Church:

	Feet.
"Length of the present parish church from east to west, having been the nave of the conventual Church	123
"Breadth, including the side aisles	63
"Internal breadth of the tower	24
"Height thereof	104
"Height of the great arch under the tower	52
"Circumference of one of the round Norman pillars	16½
"Height of ditto	12
"Length of the transept calculated from its ruin	111."

The width of the cloister, each way is calculated to have been 104 feet; and the breadth of the refectory 38.

MORFIELD, or MOMERFIELD, in Shropshire, was a CELL to Shrewsbury. Leland, speaking of this place, says, "from Wenlok to Morfield village, a six miles by some corne, pasture, and wood ground, I sawe a little Priory or Cell called Morfeilde on the right hand as I entred into this village." Tanner says this was a Cell of Benedictine monks subordinate to the abbey of Shrewsbury, to which the church here dedicated to St. Gregory, with all the land belonging to it, was given by its founder, Earl Roger. Earl Roger's charter, in mentioning it, has a remarkable expression: "ecclesiam de Mumerfield, cum tota terra quam CLERICI tenebant;" as if a society of secular canons had been previously established in it.^b Tanner, from one of the Registers of the see of Hereford,^c states the value of this Cell, in the time of Henry VIII. at 15*l*. per annum.^d The site was granted, in the 37th Hen. VIII. to Arthur Viscount Lisle.^e Foundationis et Dotationis Historia.

[Ex Registro Abbatiae Salop. penes Ricard. Leveson de Trentham, equit. de balneo, an. 1638.]

Cum providenti dispensatione Dei, in cujus manu sunt potestates et jura regnorum, Normannorum dux Willielmus, ingenti Angliam navigio petens, eam debellasset, regnoque jure hæreditario potitus diversas imperii sui provincias diversis secum advectis baronibus suis contulisset, Rogero de Monte-Gomeri hanc provinciam, scilicet, Salopesiriam contradidit; qui illam suscipiens, ut justus et Deo plenus, quæ Dei erant omni sollicitudine prius curare, et quæ violata erant redintegrare, et ad Dei servitium reformare studuit. Et quoniam animæ suæ providus custos fuerat, et uxor illi, non minoris erga dominum devotionis erat, Adelaisia nomine, concedente rege Willielmo, et archiepiscopo Lanfranko, et patriæ præsule Petro, posuerunt monachos Deo servituros in quadam ecclesia in honore sanctorum Petri et Pauli constructa, in suburbiis Salopesiriae civitatis, qui domino exorarent assidue pro animarum suarum salute, et pro animabus omnium antecessorum suorum, et hæredum, qui ante eos ipsum honorem rectè possederunt, vel possessuri sunt.

Hanc autem ecclesiam memoratus comes, et comitissa, de suis propriis facultatibus à fundamentis instaurantes, habitationi monachorum congruam efficere incœperunt, sed morte interveniente non perfecerunt. Huic verò ecclesiæ ea quæ infra continentur, tam pro animarum suarum, quàm pro omnium Christianorum salute donaverunt, perpetuoque concesserunt.

Primò, scilicet, dederunt, congregatis illuc fratribus vicum quendam juxta eandem ecclesiam positum, cum tribus molendinis, cunctisque redditibus qui ad eam pertinere noscuntur. Hic autem vicus dividitur à civitate Salopesiriae, solummodo alveo fluminis intercurrentis, cui nomen est Sabrina. Vicus autem ipse Biforietta vocatur, quod nos lingua Gallica, ante portam dicimus; addiderunt quoque supradictis donis quasdam ecclesias cum omnibus pertinentibus ad eas, tam in terris, quàm hominibus, universisque aliis possessionibus, quas hic nominatim annotare commodum duximus, scilicet, ecclesiam sancti Gregorii, ecclesiam de Stotesdona, et illam de Dudelembia, illamque de Conedoura, et illam de Walintona, et illam de Recordina, et illam de Edmundona, et illam de Hodenet, et illam de Archalou, et illam de Tonga, et illam de Donintona, illam etiam de Bassecherche, et illam de Nesse.

Et super hæc omnia concessit comes, ut primates sui atque milites quicumque in elemosinam conferre vellent huic ecclesiæ aliquam partem terrarum suarum, non quæsita licentia à comite, vel ab alio aliquo, libera mente donarent, ex eo tempore liberum remaneat ab omni servitio ejusdem terræ in perpetuum. Monachi verò eadem libertate illas suscipientes nunquam de his, sicut nec de aliis suis terris geldum communem darent, nisi comes de dominio suo daret geldum, tamen milites nunquam ullo modo darent. Quod omnibus audientibus valde placuit, totaque sua curia laudando, et Deo gratias referendo confirmavit.

In the Originalia Returns, 37 Hen. Leland, among the monasteries in the diocese of Hereford, reckons "DUDELEBYRI, an howse of Grandimontenses in Cornedale, now united to the church of Hereford." Itin. vol. viii. p. 63. The abbat and convent of Sagium, or Seez, in Normandy, had the patronage of this church, and a pension out of the same. It seems also, says Bishop Tanner, as if this church was given in the foundation charter to the abbey of Shrewsbury, and was appropriate to the same. Madox, in his Formulæ Anglicanæ, p. 6, has printed the "Ordinatio Radulfi episcopi Hereford. de patronatu hujus ecclesiæ et pensione annua decem marcarum monachis de Sagio, A. D. M.CC.XXXVI."

Tanner mentions OSWESTRE, or OSWALDSTREET, as a destroyed monastery of Shropshire. Leland speaks of the church of St. Oswald here as "a very faire leddid chirch with a great tourrid steple, but it standith without the New-Gate; so that no chirch is there withyn the towne. This chirche was sumtime a Monasterie caullid the White Minster. After turnid to a parochie chirch, and the personage impropriate to the abbay of Shreusbyri. Addiderunt etiam comes, et comitissa supradictis donis, quasdam villas, quarum nomina hic habentur. Aitonam, scilicet, Alministram, et Burtonam. Et cum his omnibus concesserunt monachis tributum de lignis quæ in civitatem afferuntur per portam urbis orientalem. Addiditque comes ut totius provinciæ mercatus omni anno, ad honorem apostolorum Petri et Pauli, in festivitate sancti Petri, quæ dicitur ad vincula, conveniret, et tribus diebus solutus esset et quietus ab omni incursione ministrorum comitis, solummodo monachi omnia, quæ inde exirent, et omnes redditus haberent. Testibus Godebaldo, et Oilerio sacerdotibus, Herberto archidiacono, Warino vicecomite, Roberto filio Theobaldi, Rogero filio Corbeth, Roberto pincerna, multisque aliis nobilibus, atque popularibus, qui hæc audierunt, et confirmaverunt.

Hæc autem omnia acta sunt anno ab incarnatione Domini mxxxvij. Locus autem ille in quo supradicta ecclesia fundata est, fuit de hæreditate cujusdam militis, cui nomen Siwardus. Et quia comes Rogerius, in illius hæreditate, eo invito, ecclesiam fundare noluit, dedit ei quandam villam nomine Langafeldam, ut ipse cum bona voluntate in prædicto loco ecclesiam sibi fundare concederet, ejusdemque ecclesiæ idem Siwardus particeps existeret. Postea autem memoratus Siwardus eandem villam, quam comes ei dederat, ecclesiæ sanctorum Petri et Pauli post mortem suam concessit, fraternitatemque ejusdem loci recepit. Teste Godebaldo, et Richardo de Belmesio, et Richardo de Monte Warolt: hoc etiam filii Siwardi, Edwardus et Aldredus concesserunt, teste Richardo, Londonensi episcopo, et multis aliis. Quam villam postea monachi, consensu, et confirmatione regis Henrici, et consilio baronum provinciæ mutuo dederunt Henrico de Say propter aliam villam, nomine Brantonam, quæ eis vicinior et decentior erat.

Post ipsa autem supra memorata dona, quidam barones et milites ipsius provinciæ, pro animarum suarum salute eidem ecclesiæ de suis possessionibus contulerunt, scilicet Warinus vicecomes dedit duas hidas terræ in villa quæ dicitur Tugfort, et decimam Opetonæ, quam, et semper eadem ecclesia habuerat à tempore regis Edwardi; ecclesiam quoque de Beritona, cum decima ipsius villæ; uxor vero illius, post ejus obitum, dedit pro anima mariti sui, domum quam habebat in civitate, de propria dote, concedentibus filiis suis, eo pacto, ut manens in eadem domo inveniret ceram ad illuminandam ecclesiam per singulas noctes totius anni.

Herbertus de Furches, dedit domum unam et terram in agro quæ reddit per annum duos solidos; Reginaldus, frater Warini vicecomitis, dedit villam quæ vocatur Lega. Aherius concessit Edburtoniam, et quicquid ad eam pertinet. Girardus de Turnay dedit villam unam quæ vocatur Betona. Helgotus dedit hidam unam juxta Savernam fluvium, quæ ex adjacenti silvula, Mora vocatur, et piscariam in eodem flumine. Oilerius sacerdos dedit hidam unam in Cherletona. Tochi aliam hidam in villa quæ Cota dicitur. Odo quoque miles dedit villam Hordeleiam nomine. Decimam de Cambristona, et ecclesiam de Ithesala, dedit Rotbertus vicecomes, filius Tedbaldi, cum omnibus quæ ad eam pertinent, et cum decima ipsius manerii, scilicet, in nummis, et animalibus, et messe. Et quia eandem ecclesiam tunc clerici habebant, præcepit isdem Rotbertus, ut cum illi morerentur, ecclesia in dominio sancti Petri veniret. Teste Ricardo Londinensi episcopo, Goifridus dedit dimidiam hidam in villa quæ dicitur Herleia.

Sciendum quoque est, quod sanctus Petrus habet dimidiam hidam in Britona, de ecclesia de Conedoura. Hæc omnia concessit, atque firmavit venerabilis comes Rogerius. Testibus filiis ejus, et cum patre firmantibus Hugone, Rogero, Arnulpho, cum baronibus plurimis. Defuncto autem comite, cum corpus ejus in ecclesia sancti Petri sepulturæ traderetur, Rogerus filius Corbeth dedit monachis ecclesiam de Nutenora, cum decima ipsius villæ, decimamque de Jochehulla; post obitum autem venerabilis comitis Rogeri, Hugo filius ejus (digna proles tanti patris) ei in honorem successit, quo tempore Reinaldus, qui post mortem Warini vicecomitis uxorem illius, cum honore suscepit, et Hugo filius ejusdem Warini dederunt monachis ecclesiam sancti Oswaldi, et illam de Mutla, cum omnibus quæ ad eas pertinent, et decimas de Nessa et de Serraordina, concedente comite et testimonium perhibente, cum pluribus aliis.

Quodam verò die, cum idem venerabilis comes sepulturam patris invisere venisset, divina inspiratus gratia, motusque pietate paterna, juxta ipsam sepulturam convocavit dominum Fulcheredum, primum loci hujus abbatem, et coram cunctis baronibus qui aderant, resolutus in lachrimas, dixit: Pacem et quietem volo esse in hoc loco. Et ideo constituo hanc abbatiam, et omnia ad eam pertinentia ab omni consuetudine hujus terræ, quam ego possum condonare, esse libera imperpetuum, et pacata, et quieta; homines monachorum nulla comitis negotia exerceant, nulla castellorum, seu vivariorum, sive pontium vel viarum, nec aliqua omnino opera faciant, sed quieti, et immunes sint ab omnibus shiris, et hundredis, et placitis, et ab omni vicecomitum incursione, et exactione, et fiscali redditione. Et qui aliquam adversus hominem sancti Petri quærelam habuerit in curia abbatis conqueratur, et ibi rectum habeat.

Et hoc sciant omnes mei fideles, quia nihil retineo in honore sanctorum Petri et Pauli nisi orationes, et beneficium monachorum in hoc loco manentium, et tam liberum hodiè hunc honorem constituo, ut nullus sit qui post me libertatis, vel quietis aliquid possit addere. Hoc tantum retineo, quod si abbas hujus loci, superbia inflatus, noluerit rectum facere vicinis suis, ego, vel hæres meus, post me, constringemus eum ad rectum faciendum; et si falsus monetarius de alterius terra adventitius in terra sancti Petri captus fuerit, corpus cum pecunia reddatur comiti. Si verò falsarius de terra sancti Petri fuerit, corpus solummodo reddatur comiti, pecunia autem erit abbatis. De latronibus autem justiciam sibi concedo, et pecuniam, si abbas, vel per se, vel per suos, ipsam justiciam facere voluerit; sin autem corpus tantum reddatur comiti, et pecunia erit abbatis: hoc tantummodo retineo et nil aliud.

Decimam verò venationis meæ de toto comitatu Salopesiriæ concedo perpetuò esse in hoc loco, præter silvas sanctæ Milburgæ. Hæc autem omnia facio pro animabus patris, et matris meæ, et mea, et fratrum meorum, et omnium ad me pertinentium, et pro anima regis Willielmi, et Mathildis reginæ, et filiorum suorum. Si quis autem, vel meo tempore, vel post obitum usque in finem sæculi, aliquid ex iis voluerit infringere, vel auferre, vel minuere, altissimus, qui dominatur in regno hominum, auferat eum de terra, et deleat nomen ejus de libro vitæ, et perpetuò anathemate multatus, vermibus consumptus intereat.

Barones autem qui tunc præsentés aderant, videntes tantam compunctionem domini sui, tantamque audientes libertatem honoris hujus monasterii, pedibus ejus proluti, gratias egerunt Deo, et tam piissime venerabili comitis voluntati. Hi quippe fuerant Arnulphus frater ejusdem comitis. Richardus de Belmesio, qui postea Londoniæ episcopus factus est; Rothbertus vicecomes, Rainaldus vicecomes, Robertus Corbeth, et Rogerus frater ejus, Picotus de Say, Hamundus Peverell, Fulco vicecomes, et omnes ferè hujus comitis barones. Defuncto autem pio comite Hugone, cum Robertus de Belismo frater ipsius post eum comitatus suscepisset honorem, dedit ecclesiæ sancti Petri, et monachis ejusdem loci, villam quæ dicitur Bascherch, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus. Omnia quoque dona quæ, vel pater ejus, vel barones monachis contulerant, et totam libertatem, quam frater suus eis concesserat, ipse et concessit, et sigillo suo confirmavit.

Post eum verò gloriosus rex Henricus comitatum in proprio tenens dominio, et audiens de pace, et libertate, et quietudine quam prædictus comes Hugo ecclesiæ sancti Petri dederat, ut erat vir natura benignus, et ecclesiarum Dei cultor devotus, inprimis benignitatem et devotionem comitis admirans laudavit, et prompta voluntate, et alacri animo omni tempore deinceps tenenda mandavit. Præcipiens et constituens omnia illa pacis et libertatis privilegia, quæ comes Hugo sancto Petro concesserat inperpetuum inviolata permanere, addens omnibus anathema qui aliquid ex his infringere vel minuere præsumpserint; adjecit etiam ex una parte, ut monachi sancti Petri seu homines quocunque irent per totam Angliam, seu mercandi, seu alius negotii causa, immunes essent ab omni theoloneo et passagio, et omni consuetudine, et ut monachi sancti Petri accipiant in silvis ubicunque voluerunt per totum comitatum, ea quæ necessaria fuerint ad opus ecclesiæ sine vastatione et assarto.

Eo tempore Toraldus de Verleio dedit ecclesiæ sancti Petri unam hidam in Minore Draitoria, et Robertus filius ejus, qui et hæres ipsius est, villam nomine Wichewicam. Teste Ricardo Londoniæ episcopo, Hamone Peverel, Johanne filio Grip, Toreth, et multis aliis.

Odo quoque de Berneles dedit unum ferndendel in Bradeston; aliam partem ejusdem villæ dedit Guarinus vicecomes. Herbertus filius Helgoti dedit quandam villam nomine Nortonam, et ecclesiam de Stantonam, cum decimis suis omnibus, et omnium militum suorum, et cum omnibus quæ ad eandem ecclesiam pertinent. Postea uxor ejus, se concedente, dedit quandam terram in eadem villa quæ per annum reddidit quatuor solidos. Normannus venator dedit villulam unam, nomine Boleleiam. Hugo de Constantino dedit dimidiam hidam in Petona. Azo Bigot aliam dimidiam in Langanara, et unum ferndendall in Abetona. Robertus filius Wigerii dedit domum patris sui quæ est in castello. Picotus de Say dedit decimam de Brantona et de Fitesso. Hunaldus dedit decimam de Prestona et de Lufastford, et decimam equarum suarum agrestium. Hamo Peverell, rogatu suæ uxoris, dedit villam nomine Wlveruntuniam. Teste Richardo Londoniæ episcopo, cum aliis pluribus.

Theodericus de Say juxta eandem villam ex altera parte vicini fluminis dedit terram quandam in manerio suo de Stoka, de dominio suo, solutam, et quietam ab omni geldo, et aliis consuetudinibus. Robertus Corbeth dedit villam, nomine Lochetonam, et filius ejus Robertus concessit. Teste Richardo Londoniæ episcopo, cum baronibus totius comitatus. Rogerus Corbeth dedit aliam villam, nomine Wenelegam, concedentibus filiis suis, Willielmo et Eurardo. Fulcius vicecomes ad sepulturam uxoris suæ dedit Punelegam, Henrico filio ejus concedente. Uxor Azonis Bigot dedit terram quandam in civitate, pro anima filii sui Reinaldi, quæ reddit per annum decem denarios. In campis de civitate Alnothus dedit unam terram, et Reinierus præfectus aliam, pro filio suo, quem fecit monachum; et Eiliricus Rufus aliam similiter pro filio suo. Rothbertus presbiter filius Andreæ clerici cum moreretur dimisit monachis terram suam in campis, ita ut mater sua quamdiu viveret eam teneret, et post mortem ejus in dominio monachorum veniret, teste Rogero archidiacono et Reinerio præfecto. Gilbertus archidiaconus dedit unam terram in campis in civitate, et decimam de Opetona. Alanus filius Fladaldi, qui honorem vicecomitis Warini, post filium ejus suscepit,* libenti animo concessit omnia quæ antecessores vel barones sui dederant ecclesiæ sancti Petri, et in suo tempore, et ante, et ab omnibus quæ ad se pertinebant, excepto geldo regis, libera et quietam condonavit. Testibus Richardo Londoniæ episcopo, Hamone Peurell, Rogero Corbeth, cum toto ferè comitatu. Hoc etiam Willielmus filius ejus, et hæres, coram omni comitatu concessit, et proprio sigillo confirmavit.

Comes autem Rogerus, cognomine Pictaviensis, supradicti Rogeri comitis filius, dedit ecclesiæ sancti Petri piscariam de Tarewalla, et duas villas parvas, scilicet Pultonam, et Occitonam juxta ipsam piscariam, et aliam villam, nomine Biscoppeham, pro salute sua, et uxoris suæ, et patris et matris suæ. Godefridus verò vicecomes ejus, qui in eadem ecclesia filium habebat monachum, concedente sibi comite, dedit monachis ecclesiam de Walleton, et illam de Chercheham, cum quadam villa quæ dicitur Garstan, et hæc omnia idem comes in perpetuo firmavit quietam, et libera ab omni hominum invasione; addens, quod qui hæc disturbaret vel auferret, anathema esset. Teste Roberto Cestriæ episcopo, et Hugone ejusdem civitatis comite.

Omnia ista suprascripta gloriosus rex Henricus coram omni consilio suo apud Londoniam, suo proprio signo et sigillo confirmavit, et archiepiscopis suis, episcopis, comitibus, et aliis baronibus ad confirmandam tradidit, et sicut comes Hugo concessit ecclesiæ sancti Petri, totam libertatem quam potuit, ut nullus post eum plus addere possit; ita ipse rex concessit eidem ecclesiæ, et omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, quicquid potuit libertatis, et quietis, ut nullus, post se, plus concedere posset. Interminatus est etiam suum, et archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, et omnium baronum suorum æternum anathema, omnibus qui de suprascriptis donis vel de ipsa libertate aliquid subtraherent vel infringerent. Concessit quoque monachis molturam totius civitatis Salopesbiriæ, præcipiens, ut nullus in toto circuitu civitatis, nec in uno ponte, nec in alio, molendinum faceret, nisi monachi, vel cui ipsi concesserunt. Testibus Richardo Londoniæ episcopo, Hamone Peurell, Fulcio vicecomite, et multis aliis.

Defuncto autem rege Henrico, cum venerabilis nepos ejus Stephanus in regno successit, supradictus Hamo Peurell, concedente rege, dedit ecclesiæ sancti Petri duas villas, id est, Crugeltonam, et Selebam, et Sibilla uxor ejus aliam villam, quæ vocatur Chinardesia, concedente viro suo et dono super altare ponente. Testibus Willielmo filio Alani, Willielmo de Tornay, Alano filio Willielmi de Hedlega, Roberto filio Nigelli, Radulfo de Tirna, Richardo filio Baldwini de Lintlega, et pluribus aliis.

Rogatus autem rex Stephanus ut confirmaret omnia suprascripta, dixit, Cum avunculus meus, rex Henricus baronum suorum prece, ista confirmaret, præsens aderam, et testis advocatus fui, et eum omnia concedere, et confirmare audiui, et vidi, quæ comes Hugo concesserat, et eadem verba dicere quæ prædictus comes dixit, quando ecclesiæ sancti Petri libertatem constituit, videlicet quod tam liberum ipsius ecclesiæ honorem constituebat, ut nullus, post eum, aliquid libertatis vel quietis addere posset. Et ideo ego pro salute animæ meæ, et pro pace regni concedo et confirmo omnia suprascripta, et eandem libertatem et quietem quam ecclesiæ sancti Petri comes Hugo dedit, et rex Henricus confirmavit, ego quoque concedo et confirmo, et ita liberam et quietam ipsam ecclesiam constituo, ut nullus sit, qui, post me, aliquid libertatis, vel quietis addere possit. Qui verò aliquid ex his minuere præsumpserit æterno anathemate puniatur. ✠ Ego Stephanus rex confirmavi et subscripsi. Ego Henricus Wintoniensis episcopus subscripsi. Carta Foundationis Abbatie de Salop.

[Ex Registro Abbatie S. Petri Salop. penes Ricardum Leveson equit. ut supr. 1638. Pat. 1 Hen. VI. part. 5, m. 18 et 19.]

ROGERUS, comes Salopesbiriæ, filiis suis et hæredibus, et baronibus, et hominibus, et omnibus amicis suis, Francis et Anglis, salutem. Sciatis me construxisse monasterium in suburbio civitatis Salopesbiriæ, in ecclesia sanctorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli, quæ antiquitus ibi fundata erat, et concessisse eidem vicum illum totum qui dicitur Biforiete, cum tribus molendinis et omnibus redditibus, et tota terra quæ est inter duo flumina; scilicet inter Sabrinam fluvium, et Meolam, et ex alia parte fluminis Meole terrulam quandam quæ vocatur Aldefeld. Et quia monachi Sagiensis cænobii de mea possessione erant in Normannia, et boni testimonii viri, de illis quosdam accepi, et ad edificationem præfati monasterii constitui, nulla illis ejusdem loci donatione concessa, sed ut elemosinas meas, et aliorum fidelium susciperent et colligerent, et de beneficiis collatis constructionem præfati monasterii festinarent.

Postea vero per consilium regis Gulielmi, et Roberti episcopi, et uxoris meæ Adalasie, et filiorum meorum, unum illorum abbatem ibi posui, et locum illum liberum feci, nulli omnino alteri loco per subjectionem obnoxium. Dedi etiam eidem loco maneria Ettonam et Eiministrum, cum omnibus suis appenditiis, et Burtonam, et ecclesiam quoque de Mumerfeld, cum tota terra quam clerici tenebant, concessi in dominium monachorum, cum cæteris suis appenditiis, et ecclesiam de Stotesdona, et ecclesiam de Duddeleburia, cum omnibus quæ ad eas pertinent et ecclesiam de Donitona, et illam de Tonga, et illam de Egmondona, et illam de Woolkingtona, et illam de Worgordina, et illam de Chonedoura, et illam de Archelona, et illam de Hodenet, et illam de Nessa, et illam de Bassecherche, cum omnibus ad easdem ecclesias pertinentibus. Et constitui, ut monachi ecclesias et terras earundem quas vellent, post mortem clericorum suorum, in dominio retinerent, et cæteras ad utilitatem monasterii ordinarent, et de redditibus earum victum et vestitum haberent.

Dedi etiam eis domum unam in civitate ad sabulonem ad opus ecclesiæ et moltam totius civitatis, et curiæ meæ quando in civitate manerem, et theoloneum de lignis quæ per orientalem portam in civitatem deferuntur. Præcepi etiam ut in festivitate sancti Petri in kalendis Augusti, totius provinciæ populus in eodem loco ad nundinas tribus diebus per singulos annos conveniret, et monachi theoloneum, totumque proficuum inde haberent. Concessi etiam ut barones mei, vel burgenses, vel milites quodcunque vellent, de terris, et facultatibus suis eidem loco largirentur, absque ulla mei vel meorum hæredum licentia. Ita ut de data elemosyna mihi nullum alterum servitium facerent vel dantes, vel recipientes. Totam quoque terram monachorum à geldo militum imperpetuum liberam esse statui, et à geldo etiam communi, nisi ego ipse de dominio meo illud darem. Guarinus vero vicecomes dedit eis villam quæ dicitur Tugford, cum suis appenditiis, ecclesiam de Biritona, cum decima ejusdem villæ, et decimam de Oppetona, et ecclesiam de Mutla, cum decima ejusdem villæ, et ecclesiam sancti Oswaldi, cum decima ejusdem villæ, et unam domum in foro in civitate, ad lucernam altaris Innocentium. Reinaldus frater ipsius Guarini, dedit eis villam quæ dicitur Lega. Oilerius, sacerdos, unam hidam in Cherletona. Gerardus de Tornaco, Beitonam. Goiffridus dimidiam hidam in Herlega. Odo miles dedit eis Hordelegam, et Aberius, et Burtonam cum suis appenditiis. Robertus filius Theobaldi dedit eis ecclesiam de Iteshale, cum decima ejusdem villæ.

Quæ omnia ego eis concessi, et sigilli mei autoritate confirmavi. Præcepi etiam filiis meis, ut locum illum diligenter, et carum haberent. Et si forte contingeret ut ego in Anglia morirer, ibi me ponerent, et deinde fratribus loci illius necessaria providerent. Testibus hiis, Roberto episcopo Cestriæ, Hugone et Roberto de Belismo, Arnulpho et Philippo filiis meis, Richardo de Belmeseia, Reinaldo de Bailloc, Rogero Chorbet, Roberto Chorbet, et multis aliis.

[Ibid. Carta 372.]

WILLIELMUS Dei gratia Eboracensis archiepiscopus omnibus fidelibus salutem et benedictionem Dei et suam. Notum sit vobis quod monachi Salop, in tempore antecessorum meorum sæpius querimoniam facientes quod ecclesia illorum injustè careret ecclesia de Kirkeham, eo quod à comite Pictaviensi Rogerio, ei legitime data fuerat, et à Thoma archiepiscopo literarum et sigilli sui auctoritate confirmata. Tandem præsentiam nostram adierunt, querimoniam suam deponentes; nos verò clamoribus eorum molestati, et præcepto domini Henrici sedis apostolicæ legati constricti, causam illorum in synodo apud Eboracum nobis præsentibus, ventilandam commisimus; lectis verò literis de donatione comitis, et auditis privilegiis de confirmatione archiepiscopi, unanimi consensu totius synodi judicatum est, ut præfata ecclesia de Kirkeham ecclesiæ sancti Petri de Salop restitueretur, de qua injustè et sine iudicio viduata erat. Hujus rei testes sunt Radulphus episcopus de Orchadibus, et Benedictus episcopus de Witebi; et Helias abbas de Salebi, et totius sinodi nostræ conventus, cum capellano ecclesiæ sancti Petri Eboracensis. Carta Regis Willielmi.

[Pat. 1 Hen. VI. p. 5, m. 19, per Inspex.]

SANCTORUM patrum monemur exemplo possessiones quas nostris temporibus sanctæ ecclesiæ à fidelibus collatas noverimus, literarum memoriæ diligentur assignare, tum propter conferentium utilitatem quoniam eorum exemplo posterius ad bene agendum provocentur: tum propter malignorum perversitatem qui ad diripiendas possessiones ecclesiasticas toto conamine inhiare noscuntur. Nos itaque majorum imitantes industriam, posteriorum notitiæ scribendo transmittere curavimus quoddam pietatis opus quod venerabilis comes Rogerius et devota ejus conjux Adelaisia nomine, nostra ætate Deo obtulerunt. Erat in suburbio civitatis Seropesbery parva satis ecclesia in honore beatorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli constructa, cujus situs ad collocanda servorum Dei habitacula congruus videbatur. Comes ergo fretus licentia et auctoritate regis Willielmi et Cantuariensis archiepiscopi Lanfranci, necnon et Cestrensis episcopi Petri, ad cujus diocesim isdem pertinebat locus, monachos illuc pro sua suorumque salute Domino exoratos aggregavit anno ab Incarnatione Domini millesimo octogesimo septimo. Quibus ad victus subsidia ipse et veneranda ejus uxor possessiones subscriptas imperpetuum donaverunt. Imprimis scilicet vicum unum eidem ecclesiæ contiguum, cum tribus molendinis cunctisque redditibus ad eum pertinentibus, qui vicus Anglicè dicitur Biforieta, quod Latine significat ante portam. Deinde contulerunt eis quasdam ecclesias cum universis possessionibus ad eas pertinentibus, quas hic nominatim expressimus. Ecclesiam scilicet sancti Gregorii de Mamerfeld, cujus hæc sunt possessiones: Estleia, Nordleia, alias Estleia Crofta, Halchtonia, Chinsetleia, Harpeford Billingsleia, Nieutona, Tugafort, Fertecota, Westona. Ecclesiam quoque de Stotesdona, cujus possessiones istæ sunt: Dodelmutha, Hinetona, et Prestecota. Ecclesiam etiam de Dodeleberia cujus possessio est Spertford et dimidia hida terræ in Corstona. Ecclesiam quoque de Edmundon, et illam de Toengia, et illam de Donintona, et illam de Welintona, et illam de Werekordina, et illam de Ercalow, et illam de Hodeneth, et illam de Conedouera, et illam de Nessa, et illam de Bassecherch. Cujus possessiones sunt Prestcota, Noveleia, et Bageleia. Cum hiis omnibus dederunt comes et comitissa eidem cœnobio tres villas cum omnibus appenditiis earum, Eitonam videlicet, Eiminstriam, et Burtonam. Theoloneumque de lignis quæ per orientalem portam in civitatem deferuntur concesserunt monachis. Præceperunt etiam ut in festivitate sancti Petri in kalendis Augusti totius provinciæ populus in eodem loco ad nundinas tribus diebus per singulos annos conveniret, et monachi theoloneum totumque proficuum inde haberent. Postea concessit comes ut barones vel milites sui, quicumque vellent, de terris et facultatibus suis eidem loco largirentur absque ulla sui vel suorum licentia, ita ut de peracta elemosina nullum sibi ulterius servitium facerent vel dantes vel recipientes; totam quippe terram monachorum à geldo militum imperpetuum liberam esse statuit, et à geldo etiam communi nisi ipse de dominio suo illud daret. Hæc autem comitis pia munificentia omnibus audientibus valde placuit, eosque ad amorem loci illius quamplurimum incitavit. Tunc Warinus vicecomes dedit ipsis monachis duas hidas terræ in villa quæ dicitur Tugafort, et decimam de Opetona, et ecclesiam de Biritona cum decima ejusdem villæ. Rainaldus frater ipsius Warini dedit eis villam quæ dicitur Lega. Girardus de Tornaco Bettonam. Goffridus dimidiam hidam in Herleia. Odo miles Hordleiam. Hæc omnia venerabilis comes Rogerius cum filiis suis Hugone scilicet, Roberto, Rogero, et Arnulpho, concessit atque firmavit. Testesque fuerunt Herbertus archidiaconus, Godebaldus et Oilerius sacerdotes, Warinus vicecomes, Robertus filius Teobaldi, Rogerius Corbeth, Robertus Pincerna, et multi alii. Locus verò in quo cœnobium ipsum constructum erat, de hæreditate cujusdam militis, Siwardi nomine, fuit. Et quia nolebat piissimus comes quod aliqua imposterum calumpnia monachis inde emergeret, mutuo dedit eidem Siwardo villam nomine Longafeld. Postmodum verò cum fraternitatem monachorum reciperet, concessit quod eadem villa quam à comite acceperat, post suum obitum in eorum dominio deveniret. Testibus Godebaldo, Ricardo de Belmesio, et Richardo de Monte-waroldi. Hæc omnia ego Willielmus rex Anglorum concessi et sigillo meo corroboravi.

WALCHELINUS Maminot omnibus parentibus et amicis suis, et universis fidelibus sanctæ ecclesiæ salutem. Sciatis quod homines de Ellesmera confessi sunt coram me et militibus meis, quod avunculus meus Willielmus Peverel injustè abstulit terram de Lega à monachis de Salopesberia. Quod ego audiens, per consilium hominum meorum, studui liberare animam avunculi mei, et animas eorum qui hoc ei consilium dederunt, de pœna istius peccati; reddidique sancto Petro et monachis eandem terram ita solutam et quietam, ut nullus successorum meorum ampliùs de ea calumpniam habeat. Et ideo precor omnes qui post me venturi sunt, ut hanc terram nulla unquam calumpnia impediatur, quia pro certo didici ab hominibus meis quod avunculus meus malum inde consilium habuit.

Abbey of St. Mary York.

INGULPHUS carries the antiquity of St. Mary's Abbey, as a religious foundation, higher than the Account transcribed by Dugdale from abbat Simon de Warwick's manuscript at Oxford. Speaking of Siward earl of Northumberland, he says, "Anno Domini 1056, strenuus comes Northimbrium Siwardus obiit, et sepultus est in clastro monasterii sanctæ Mariæ extra muros ejusdem urbis, quod ipse construxerat. Comitatus autem ejus Eboracæ Tostio fratri comitis Haroldi datus est." ^a Hoveden noticing the same occurrence, a year earlier, calls the monastery Galmanho. "Anno millesimo quinquagesimo quinto, Siwardus dux Northimbrorum Eboraci decessit, et in monasterio Galmanho quod ipse construxerat sepultus est; cujus ducatus Tostio Haroldi ducis germano datus est." ^b Ingulphus, in another page of his History, speaking of the "comprofessi" who came from other monasteries for the hospitalities of Croyland, in 1076, names six monks "S. Mariæ Eboracum." ^c This last passage seems to have puzzled Bishop Tanner, who observes that it no where else appears that there were then any religious of that denomination in the city. ^d Stephen, the first abbat of St. Mary's gives a detail, of which the following is the outline. He states that, in 1078, he became a monk of Whitby under Remfrid; that William de Percy, a Norman baron, by whom the fraternity there had been at first patronized, finally drove them away by force; that they fled to Lestingham, from which place, also, they were driven by the same Percy's interest with the king; that in this afflict-ing state their condition was commiserated by Alan earl of Bretagne, who gave them a church near the city of York dedicated to St. Olave, with four acres of land adjoining to build offices upon. And, having obtained a licence from the king, he persuaded the monks to leave Lestingham and make this the seat of their abbey.

Thomas archbishop of York, in a suit against Earl Alan, claimed the four acres of land above-mentioned; whereupon King William I. to compose the difference, promised the archbishop other lands in lieu of them, and so the business ceased for a time. In 1088, King William II. coming to York, and visiting the new monastery, found it too straitened and narrow for the reception of the convent; he accordingly projected a larger, and with his own hand, opened the ground to lay the foundation of another church. ^e An ancient parchment, formerly preserved in what was called St. Mary's Tower, dates the foundation in 1089, when the dedication of the church was changed from St. Olave to St. Mary. ^f In King William the Second's charter various lands are enumerated which had been bestowed upon the abbey by the Conqueror; the particular specification of which will be hereafter given. A place called Galmon, probably the Galmanho already noticed from Hoveden, is twice mentioned in the charter. ^g Earl Alan gave the monks a borough without the walls of York, called Earlsborough; and also, that its privileges might be increased, surrendered the advowson of the Abbey to the king. ^h

Thomas archbishop of York, subsequent to the increased endowment of the monastery, renewed his suit for the four acres of land. Stephen, the abbat, thereupon consulted the king; who, in a council held at Gloucester, granted to the archbishop, on condition that he waved his suit, the church of St. Stephen in York, by way of exchange: ⁱ beside which, abbat Stephen himself, that he might be perfectly reconciled to the archbishop, added of his own free will, to the revenues of the see, one carucate of land in Clifton and another in Heslington. ^k The immunities and privileges granted to this monastery by William Rufus, and his successors, kings of England, were very great. By King William Rufus's charter their lands were exempt from all legal exactions: they were to be "quietæ de placitis, et querelis, et murthero, et latrocinio, et scutagio, et geldis, et danegeldis, et hidagiis, et de operationibus castellorum, et pontium, et parcorum, et de ferdwyta." "Concedo, insuper," the charter adds, "eidem abbatiae pacis fracturam et pugnam in domo factam, et domus invasionem, et omnes assultus hominum suorum, et soc, et sac, et tol, et tem, et infangthef, et utfangthef." Upon the death of an abbat the Convent were to have the power of electing a successor. In case the sheriff or his officers had any complaint against the men of St. Mary's, they were first to acquaint the abbat therewith; and, at an appointed time, to come to the gates of the abbey, and there receive justice and right. The "homines sanctae Mariae," moreover, were exempt from attendance at the county-courts, as well as the meetings of the ridings, wapontakes, and hundreds.^a

King Henry the Second, by his charter granted in the time of abbat Savaricus, confirmed the privileges specified in the charter of King William Rufus; adding to them certain liberties and customs which had before been peculiar to the churches of St. Peter at York and St. John of Beverley: ordaining also, that when the men of the county were summoned to serve in the king's army, the abbat of this monastery should find a man to carry the standard or banner of St. Mary, in the same manner as the churches already specified sent their banners.^b

Other Confirmations by "Inspeximus" were granted by King Henry III. King Edw. I. King Edw. II. King Edw. III. King Rich. II. King Henry IV. King Henry V. King Henry VI. King Henry VII. and even by King Henry VIII. who, by a large charter, confirmed all those liberties to the convent at first which he afterwards took from them.^c

The archbishop of York, for the time being, had power once a year to visit the Abbey of St. Mary, and to correct and reform the same by the counsel of the religious within it, and by the advice of five or six of his canons of the best note. Whence it was, that in 1344, William archbishop of York, in his visitation, questioning by what right and title the abbat and convent claimed and received certain tithes, portions, and pensions, from churches within his diocese, amounting to an incredible number, they produced the bulls of several popes, and the grants of his predecessors, archbishops of York, relating to the same: whereupon they were by the said prelate allowed, and their title declared good and sufficient.^d

Drake gives a Summary of the possessions of St. Mary's abbey, with the names of the different benefactors, which, in substance, has been adopted for the present Account. His references to the former edition of the Monasticon, and to such Instruments as Stevens printed, have been exchanged for others to the Deeds themselves as printed in the Appendix to the present Account: in other instances, the Registrum Mariae has been referred to, as quoted by him. His references to Bundles of original Grants are, for the most part, marked in the lower margin, Drake bund. 1, &c.

King Henry the First gave the tithes of all his venison, both in flesh and skins, in Yorkshire.^b

Besides these revenues, Drake adds, several churches paid tithes, portions, and annual pensions to this abbey, all specified in a visitation by William archbishop of York, made in 1344.^c

Leland and Drake, both, mention the great animosities and divisions which were carried on between the mayor and citizens of York on one side, and the abbat and convent of St. Mary on the other, about their separate jurisdictions and privileges. The annals of the convent mention a violent affray between them in 1262, when the citizens slew several of the tenants of the abbey and burnt many of their houses without Bootham-bar. Abbat Simon bought his peace at the price of a hundred pounds; but terrified by the extraordinary insults of the town-men, he left the convent for above a year, not returning to it till Christmas, 1264.^d

In 1266, at the instance of divers persons, the convent and the citizens were reconciled, and, voluntarily, gave several releases each to the other, with a saving of the liberties of each party, and of those which belonged to the crown. But this peace did not continue long; for, in 1301, pleas were held of the liberties of St. Mary, within the gate of the abbey, and there, in the quindene of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, Benedict de Malton being then abbat, sat the king's justices, Sir Ralph de Mettingham, William de Bereforth, William de Hauward, Peter Maleverer, E. de Bermingham, and Lambert de Trickingham, 30 Edw. I. in the presence of Edward prince of Wales.^e

In 1308 a charter was obtained for the liberties of St. Mary, with a fair and market in Bootham; 1 Edw. II. Drake says this was proclaimed throughout the whole county of York, and enrolled in Chancery: but upon the earnest solicitation of the citizens, setting forth the damage it would do to them and the king's revenue, it was some time after revoked.^f

In 1315, on Martinmas day, the citizens of York filled up the ditches adjoining the walls of the abbey, which had been made as a defence against the incursions of the Scots by abbat Alan; Nicholas Flemming, then mayor, and one Sezevaus, being the principal instigators.^g

From 1316 to 1353 these animosities appear to have been continued, when articles of agreement between the abbat and convent of St. Mary and the mayor and commonalty were brought about by Archbishop Thoresby.^h

WILLIAM DE RONDELA, or ROUNDELE, became abbat in 1239. He died 3 kal. Dec. 1244.^t

ALAN DE NESSE succeeded. He was elected on the 4th of the nones of July and received the royal assent to his election July 20th, 1313: but the temporalities were not restored to him till Sept. 2d.^g Upon his death,

THOMAS DE MULTON was elected abbat in the month of May, 1331; on the 24th of June in which year the temporalities of the monastery were delivered to him.^h He resigned on account of old age in 1359.ⁱ

THOMAS PIGOT was elected abbat. He was confirmed May 24th, following.^e

THOMAS DE SPOFFORTH, or SPOFFORD, received the royal assent to his election June 8th, 1405, upon Pygot's death.^f Willis says he was confirmed June 10th. He adds, "Anno 1422 he was translated to the see of Hereford, where having sat bishop twenty-six years, he voluntarily resigned that dignity; after which, returning hither, he ended his days, and was buried in this abbey. During his residence at Hereford he spent much money in building and repairing his episcopal palace at Sugwas near the city of Hereford, where he made a neat chapel, and adorned it with painted glass, and the initial letters of his name in all the windows. This abbat was also one of King Henry the Fifth's ambassadors to the council of Constance."^g

WILLIAM THORNTON was confirmed March 2d, and received the temporalities April 10th, 1530.^x He had been previously prior of Wetherhale. Willis says, "I take him to be the same person as WILLIAM DENT; Thornton being probably the name of the place of his birth, and Dent his proper surname." This Dent continuing abbat till the time of the Dissolution, anno 1539, surrendered up his abbey into the hands of the king's visitors November 26th,^y and obtained a pension of four hundred marks per annum,^z which was vacated by his death before 1553.^a

The state of its revenues in 1291, as selected from the various parts of Pope Nicholas's Taxation will be seen in Num. XLVII. of the Appendix to the present Account.

At the time of the Dissolution here, were fifty monks; when, according to Speed, the value of the revenues amounted to 2085*l*. 1*s*. 5*½d*. Dugdale says 1550*l*. 7*s*. 0*¼d*. In the Valor of the 26th of Henry the Eighth, however, the total yearly income of the monastery was rated at 2091*l*. 4*s*. 7*½d*., and the clear value at 1650*l*. 7*½d*.^b

The abbat of St. Mary York was mitred, and, as has been already incidentally noticed in the account of abbat Sever, had a seat in Parliament, whence he was always called Lord Abbat. He and the abbat of Selby were the only abbats in the North of England who had that privilege. Whenever he went abroad, either by water or land, his retinue were extremely numerous, little inferior even to that of the archbishop of York. He had several country-houses to retire to upon occasion; of which, those at Deighton and Overton were the chief. These houses were situated about three miles distant from the city of York, north and south of it. Overton was the chief, and stood upon the most agreeable site of any in that part of the county. The old house was standing till within a few years of the time when Drake published his History. Dr. Hutton read the following inscription on the wood-work of the parlour here in 1661:

"Post tenebras lucem

Anno Dom. M.cccc.vj. et regni regis Henrici septimi vicesimo primo Robertus Wanop abbas Eborum edificari fecit hoc opus novum, cui mercedem det Deus almus, post tenebras sperans lucem."

Other inscriptions, but broken, and coats of arms, were in the windows.^c

The abbat of York's London residence was in the parish of St. Peter, near Paul's Wharf.^d It was granted in the 35th of Henry VIII. to Thomas Lord Wriothesley.^e

At the Dissolution, the site of the abbey of St. Mary York fell to the crown; when a palace was ordered by King Henry the Eighth to be built out of its ruins, as a residence for the lord president of the North for the time being, to be called the King's Manor. King James the First, at his first coming to York, gave orders for it to be repaired and converted into a royal palace, intending to use it as such at his going to and returning from Scotland. It continued, however, to be the seats of the lords presidents till the last.^f

Exclusive of Stephen de Whitby's History of the foundation of the abbey, with Simon de Warwick's Continuation, in the Bodleian library, NE. A. 3, xx. 7,^g the following are the chief REGISTERS and other manuscripts relating to it:

1. A Register, formerly in the possession of Sir Symonds D'Ewes, now preserved in the Harleian collection in the British Museum, number 236. It is a thin volume in quarto, written on vellum, in different hands; and appears, from the old numeration of the pages, to want the first twelve leaves.^h

Leland states himself to have found the following works in the LIBRARY of St. Mary York:

"In Bibliotheca Mariana.

Albertus Musacus Patavinus super Tragœdias Senecæ.
Trivet super Tragœdias Senecæ.

Hilasii Carmen de Hercule, quod vulgo ascribunt Verg. 'Oppressit Nemeæ.'

Hermannus de Compositione Astrolabii.

Vita S. Johannis archiepiscopi Eboracensis, per Folchardum monachum S. Trinitatis Cantuariæ ad Aldredum archi. Ebor."a

The ARMS of St. Mary's abbey are given in the initial letter to the present Account from the third of Bishop Tanner's plates: viz. Az. on a cross Gu. a bezant charged with the demi-figure of a king, crowned and holding a sceptre.

A key in the first quarter. These Arms also are given by Fuller. In the Procession Roll to Parliament, however, of 1512,^b as well as in another manuscript quoted by Cole,^c the Key is wanting.

Drake has given an engraving of a very ancient and rude SEAL of this abbey appendant to a Deed of the time of Edward the Fourth;^d the matrix of which seems to have been used as the common seal from a very early period to the Dissolution. The figure of the Virgin Mary, crowned and seated, with the infant Jesus in her lap, forms the device. He speaks of a faint counter seal on the reverse, like a gem, stamped in four different places.

In the Office of the Duchy of Lancaster is a SEAL of abbat Robert, to a deed without date, but apparently of the 13th century. It represents an abbat at full length, in his right hand a crozier, in his left a book: legend, SIGILLVM . ROBERTI . ABBATIS . BEATE . MARIE . EBOR. Colour of the wax, dark green.

In the Augmentation Office is a deed made by William abbat of St. Mary York, and the convent of the same place, whereby they release to the prioress and nuns of St. Michael near Staunford the sum of 11*l*. 5*s*. due to them for certain arrears arising from tithes in Ayncourt, within the limits of the parishes of Corby and Swafeld in Kesteven.

The deed is dated 5 Edw. IV. and has appendant to it the official seal of the abbat, the impression of which is on red wax; the subject, two female figures in two compartments, and under two Gothic canopies. All that remains of the legend is, SIGILLVM . PRIVATVM

In the Chapter-house Westminster, appendant to an instrument of the 21st year of the reign of Henry the Eighth, is a large oval seal of the then abbat, mitred, but without a crozier, standing between two shields of arms, under a rich Gothic canopy; at his feet, between two tassels, is another shield of arms, and underneath is a fish placed horizontally. The impression is on red wax: legend, S . DNI . EDMUDI . WHALLEY . ABBATIS . ECCLESIE . BEATE . MARIE . JUXTA . EBOR.

Leland says, that before the Conquest malefactors were executed on the spot on which St. Mary's abbey was afterwards erected, and that the citizens laid the sweepings of their streets there.

The original fabric of the church, built in 1089, was destroyed in 1137, in a fire which ruined the greater part of the city of York.^a No particulars of any reparation immediately subsequent are any where noticed. In the Annals copied by Dugdale, it appears that, in 1270, abbat Simon de Warwick undertook a new church. Sitting in his chair, with mortar in his hand, the whole convent standing about him, he laid the first stone: and lived to see the work completed in twenty-two years. The small ruins which now remain (little more than a few arches, under the walls without the north side of the city) are the fragments of this edifice.

According to Drake's ichnography of it, the Abbey-Church was built in the form of a Cross; consisting of a nave and chancel, of equal length, with a cross-aisle, and central tower. The whole length of the building was three hundred and seventy-one feet, by sixty feet in breadth. The nave and chancel being each separated from their respective aisles by fourteen pillars.

In 1701, the ruins became a quarry for rebuilding the gaol of York. Stones were again carried from them in 1705, to repair the church of St. Olave: and a third time, in 1711, for the repair of the church of St. John of Beverley.

Of the Offices of the abbey we have no memorials.^b

In the abbey wall were two principal gates: one on the east side opening into Bootham, near the gate of the City: the other into Mary-gate.

At the north-east corner of the wall which once surrounded the abbey precinct, was St. Mary's Tower, in which all the records taken out of the religious houses at their dissolution, on the north side of Trent, are said to have been deposited, under the charge of the Lord President of the North. The date of the building of St. Mary's tower is uncertain: though it might probably have been the work of abbat Simon de Warwick. Dodsworth, in his preparations for the original edition of the present Work, before he was joined by Dugdale, had made numerous transcripts from the records preserved in it: and had just finished his labours, when, in 1644, at the siege of York, it was blown up with its contents.

The CELLS to St. Mary York were ST. BEES and WETHERALL in Cumberland, ST. MARY MAGDALEN at LINCOLN, SANDTOFT and HAINES in Lincolnshire, WARMINGTON in Northumberland, MARSHE in Nottinghamshire, ROMBURC (now Rumburgh) in Suffolk, and ST. MARTIN's at RICHMOND in Yorkshire. Of these, St. Bees, Wetherall, St. Mary Magdalen at Lincoln, Sandtoft and Haines, Romburc, and St. Martin's Richmond, will form distinct articles hereafter.

WARMINGTON in Northumberland appears to be mentioned only in Reyner, Apostol. Benedict. Tr. ii. p. 211.

Of MARSHE, Bishop Tanner merely informs us, that in the Valuations of the Religious Houses in Nottinghamshire, there is mention made of a cell to York in the Marshe at the chapel of St. Thomas, valued at 6*l*. 7*s*. 2*d*. per annum, according to Dugdale and a manuscript Valor: Speed, however, gives it at 63*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*. which is hardly probable.

*De Fundatione Abbatiae Sanctae Mariae Virginis Eboraci
Anno ab incarnatione Domini mxxxviii.*

[Ex vetusto MS. in Bibl. Bodleiana, authore Simone Warwicensi 8 W. 46, fol. 92 a.]

QUAMVIS sancta et una et universalis mater ecclesia per universum orbem longè latèque diffusa, à filiis suis quos

sibi virgo mater per aquam baptismatis generat, honoretur et prædicetur, multæ tamen ecclesiae in unitate fidei catholice ex eo tempore quo ex latere Jesu Christi in cruce dormientis fabricata est, secundum devotionem fidelium ædificantur, atque à fundamentis jaciuntur, ut quos unius ecclesiae sinus propter ampla spacia terræ et maris nequit comprehendere, in multis ecclesiis fidem rectam tenentes operari studeant, quæ post hanc vitam venientes cum exaltatione à Domino centuplicata recipiant.

^b The brass mortar used by the monks in the infirmary was in being when Mr. Drake wrote his History of York. "I saw it," he says, "at Mr. Smith's bell-founder in Micklegate, by whom it was afterwards sold to Mr. Addington a perfumer in the Minster-yard. Round the verge was this inscription, in old capitals: MORTARIUM · SCI · JOHIS · EWANGEL · DE · INFIRMARIA · BE · MARIE · EBOR · FR · WILLS · DE · TOVTHORP · ME · FECIT · A · D · M · CCC · VIII.

Unde ego frater Stephanus, hujus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filius, nullis meis præcedentibus meritis, sed sola Dei gratia fratrumque meorum unanimi mihi faventium electione abbas constitutus, qualiter ad hunc gradum pervenerim, vel qualiter ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci cui, Deo auctore, primus abbas datus sum, fundata sit, ad posterorum memoriam literis mandare curavi, ut sciant præsentis et futuri posteris nostri, qui vel quales hujus nostræ ecclesiæ fundatores, et quantas invidorum turbinibus impulsa sustinuerit perturbationes. Anno Domini mlxxviii. regnante Anglorum rege, prudentia et armis strenuissimo viro, Willielmo, qui Angliam ditioni subjecit suæ, anno duodecimo regni ejus pontificante apud Eborum domino Thoma archiepiscopo, ego Stephanus, abdicatis pro Christo voluptatibus carnis, atque abjectis secularibus curis, de naufragio hujus seculi vix evasi, atque habitum monachicæ religionis apud Wyttebeiam, sicut postea declarabitur suscepi. Eo namque in loco quidam fratres, tunc temporis heremiticam vitam ducentes, ipsum locum in melius renovare cupiebant, qui priscis temporibus religiosorum virorum ac feminarum conversatione, ac prædiorum ampla possessione, fuit honorabilis, modò verò pene ad nichilum redactus erat, barbarorum ac prædonum incursionibus diversis, vel aliis fortè, quas nescio, malis causis.

Hiis verò fratribus quibus sociatus sum, præerat quidam Renfridus, bonis pollens moribus, virtutum coelestium dote insignitus, qui cujus meriti apud Deum fuerit testantur ejus opera, multis ejus vestigia sequi volentibus in ævum profutura.

Is quippe apud locum qui Gerva dicitur, in Northumbrorum partibus, prius aliquanto tempore commoratus, ibique divinæ contemplationi vacans solitarius extitit, necnon postea multis sibi sociatis fratribus, qui ejus desiderio ad eum confluerant, Deo nostro sub districtione regulæ viriliter aliquandiu deservivit. Locus autem ille, quamvis ad ejus introitum fuisset ferarum et avium habitatio, olim tamen in eo extitit servorum Dei inibi degentium fertilis constipatio, inter quos etiam venerabilis presbiter Beda floruit, qui multa scripturarum sacramenta per Spiritum Sanctum disserens ad edificationem fidelium imperpetuum dereliquit.

Electus igitur ego abbas, cum vellem locum illum noviter inceptum nullisque rerum mundanarum redditibus refertum, auxiliante Domino, in pristinum honorem renovare, cœperunt multa adversa hujus mundi contra me excrescere, et desiderium meum à cœpto opere retardare. Nam quidam ex baronibus regiis, nomine Willielmus de Percy, qui locum ipsum nobis donaverat, videns locum nostrum nuper desertum in multis meliorari, multa adversa, tam per se quàm per suos nobis ingerebat, ac boni pœnitens si quo modo nos ab eo effugare posset, arte qua poterat laborabat. Ex altera verò parte, piratæ maris, ac latrones regionis, quorum multa tunc habebatur copia, longè latèque discurrentes, nobis vim inferebant, quæ habere poteramus rapiebant, atque ad ultimum una nocte conglobati, facto impetu, omnes nos in fugam convertentes, omnia nostra diripuerunt, ac sublati omnibus, quosdam ex nobis captos, ad ignotas terras perduxerunt. Ob quam rem usque ad mortem contristati, imminens periculum aliquo modo vitare cupientes, quæcunque nobis molesta erant regi intimare decrevimus, qui benigno satis ut erat miserationis affectu, necessitatibus

Erat verò non longè à Wyttebeia in ipsius regis dominio locus quidam, qui vocatur Lestingham, tum nimirum vacans, sed olim monachorum in eo habitantium frequentia et religione egregius. Hunc ergo locum, à rege nobis datum, paulatim restaurare, et quæ habitationi monachicæ erant necessaria, cœpimus ædificare, quatinus scilicet prædictus Willielmus de Percy in cujus prædio morabamur, vel alii eo minus nobis adversa aliqua inferre præsumerent, quo nos refugium aliquod professioni nostræ congruum sub ipsius regis manu et ditione habere agnoscerent.

Cumque post hæc opportunitatis tempus adesset, quo manus pontificalis impositionem et abbatis benedictionem suscipere deberem, subiit animo ut ad Lestingham irem, quia sub sola regis potestate erat monachus professus, ejusdem quoque loci abbas consecraret. Quæ res pariter etiam congregationi nostræ et ipsi regi, dominoque Thomæ archiepiscopo nostro, necnon et omnibus quorum inde consilium querebam, bona et utilis visa est, ac tandem auctore Deo, illis volentibus usque ad actum perducta. At verò sæpe dictus Willielmus, sicut antea consueverat, et postea quoque, molestus nobis et adversus vehementer existerat, atque ut dictum est, de prædio suo in quo adhuc conventiculum nostrum degebat, modis omnibus expellere laborabat. Unde ego nimio dolore percussus, justiciarios regni hujus frequenter adire, miseriam nostram et oppressionem multorum auribus insinuare et auxilium adversum opprimentes nos flagitare compulsus sum; sed neque ita quicquam proficiens, tandem usque in Normanniam, in qua rex simul et Willielmus de Percy tunc fortè morabantur, transfretare, et qualiter nostra in pace ulterius haberemus, precibus apud regem, et modis quibus poteram, satagere curavi, et ita demum, accepto pacis chirographo, ad propria reversus, non longo tempore, cum nostris, et de nostris pacem optinui. Exarsit quippe, ex eo tempore multo vehementiùs adversum nos, animus et ira Willielmi, et quoadusque penitus nos de Wittebeya effugasset, pacem diuturnam vel quietem habere non permisit. Quid multa? hiis namque exigentibus causis, postremò tam ingruentium pressurarum longa molestia attriti, quam inevitabili totiens memorati Willielmi violentia coacti, jam quidem publicè et injustè ablata nobis Wyttebeya, ad prædictum locum qui dicitur Lestingham, ibi saltem manere cupientes, per jussionem regis transmigravimus. Sed quia non est via hominis in manu ejus, aliter de nobis omnipotens Deus disponebat, et quæ corporibus animabusque nostris profutura imperpetuum erant, salubriter preparabat. Nam ibi quoque, nescio quo Dei judicio, latrones circumquaque debacchantes nos persecuti sunt, et res nostras sæpè rapientes, mœrore irradicibili corda nostra perfuderunt.

Erat eo tempore quidam comes, nomine Alanus, nobiliorum Britannicæ prosapia exortus, Eudonis videlicet nobilis comitis Britannicæ filius, cum essem in seculo familiariter mihi in amicitia conjunctus; qui morum probitate ac divitiis hujus seculi valdè pollebat, atque quandam ecclesiam in honore S. Olavi constructam juxta civitatem Eboraci habebat; cui cum omnes nostræ persecutionis actus anxius enarrarem, nostræ pusillanimitati compassus, præfatam ecclesiam cum quatuor acris terræ, ad construendas officinas, nobis se daturum promisit; atque ut in ipsa ecclesia, inprimis licentia à rege accepta, sedem abbatie nostræ propter loci munitionem transferemus, dulciter persuasit, promittens se nobis, in multis, auxilium daturum, asserens etiam cives urbis ad quæque nobis agenda prope in auxilium fore. De qua re lætus effectus, cum bonam voluntatem ac promissionem comitis regi referrem, libenter rex assensum præbuit, ut, quia in eadem civitate iniquitas super habundaverat, multusque sanguis plus quam in cæteris Anglorum civitatibus effusus erat, divinæ lumen religionis in ea in eternum splenderet, atque ut homines barbari religiosorum virorum, qui in ea nostris, et multis post nos temporibus futuris erant, humillima conversatione et exemplis assueti, fidem veram cœlesti Domino ac terrestri regi servare discerent, et ut bonis operibus insistentes animas suas crebra visione eorum et allocutione servare valerent. Hiis itaque secundum quod rex disposuerat, et prædictus comes promiserat, peractis, adversarius noster diabolus etiam nos ex hoc loco expellere animum archiepiscopi nostri Thomæ adversum nos in iram accendit, atque super quatuor acras terræ, quas nobis comes ad construendas officinas dederat, calumpniam movit, disens eandem terram esse de beneficio suæ ecclesiæ, nosque eam per secularem potestatem injuste possidere. Quam calumpniam cum comiti Alano retulissem apud London, postea, coram rege et multitudine episcoporum, abbatum, atque baronum regis, præfatus comes Alanus eandem terram sui juris esse dirationavit, atque adhuc contradicenti archiepiscopo rex aliam terram in excambium, ut deinceps nobiscum pacem firmissimam haberet, se daturum esse promisit.

Paucis admodum diebus transactis, mortuus est amicus noster comes Alanus. Atque rex, pro ejus anima, villas quæ dicuntur Cliftona et Overtona nobis dedit, quæ erant de beneficio ejus.

Interfuerunt foundationi etiam nostræ multi ex primoribus palatii, quorum ista sunt nomina. Thomas archiepiscopus. Odo Bajocensis episcopus ipsius regis patruus. Godefridus Constantiensis episcopus, qui eo quoque tempore Northanhumborum consulatum regebat, Willielmus Dunelmensis episcopus, comes Alanus, Odo comes de Campania, Willielmus comes de Warrenna, Henricus comes de Bello Monte, et multi alii nobiles quos hic inserere longum est.

Posthæc Thomas archiepiscopus videns nos magis ac magis de die in diem proficere invidorum, ut plerique testantur, consilio impulsus, pro quatuor acris terræ supradictæ semper calumpniam movebat, nec ab intentione animi revocans nos quiescere in ullo permittebat.

Cumque super hæc Willielmum regem, senioris regis Willielmi filium consulerem, postulans etiam ut quod pater ejus de hoc archiepiscopo olim promiserat, ipse diutius reddere non differet; tandem in Nativitate Domini, in concilio apud Gloucestriam, ecclesiam sancti Stephani sitam in Eboraco, et quicquid ad eam pertinebat, rex Thomæ archiepiscopo, pro illis quatuor acris terræ, in excambium imperpetuum possidendam tradidit, atque calumpniam supradictæ terræ coram omnibus werpirie^a fecit. Et ne hoc aliquo modo oblivioni traderetur, rex scriptum regali sigillo signatum, tam archiepiscopo Thomæ, quàm nobis fecit, quatinus non solùm archiepiscopus Thomas, verùm etiam successores ejus ecclesiam sancti Stephani sitam in Eboraco, cum rebus suis, pro illis quatuor acris terræ perpetuo jure possideant.

Actum est hoc in consilio apud Glocestriam, audientibus istis et videntibus quorum nomina hic inserta sunt. Anselmus Cantuar. archiepiscopus, Thomas Eboraci archiepiscopus, Willielmus Dunelmi episcopus, Robertus Cestriæ episcopus, Robertus Herefordiæ episcopus, Osmundus Salesbiriæ episcopus, Walchelinus Wintoniæ episcopus, Mauritijs London. episcopus, Herbertus Tedfordiæ episcopus, Johannes Sumbresetæ episcopus, Gundulfus Rofecestriæ episcopus, Robertus Lincoln. episcopus, Herveus Sancti David episcopus, Radulphus Cicestriæ episcopus, Thorstanus Glastoniæ abbas, Gilbertus Westmonasterii abbas, Willielmus Cernæ abbas, Ingolfus Croilandæ abbas, Rainaldus Abbendonæ abbas, Godefridus Malmesbiriæ abbas, Serlo Gloucestriæ abbas, Walterus Evesham. abbas, Hugo comes de Montegomerii, Ernulphus filius ejus, Bernardus de Novo-mercato, Normannus de Arecy, Durandus archidiaconus, Hugo decanus Eboracensis, Gilbertus archiepiscopi Thomæ capellanus, Osmundus archiepiscopi Thomæ dapifer.

Ego autem Stephanus abbas, perpendens quàm magnum malum sit Christianos et maximè divinæ religionis lumine insignitos, abinvicem discrepare, volens archiepiscopi animum nostri Thomæ, modis omnimodis placabilem facere, dedi ei sponte adhuc duas carucas terræ, unam in Clifton, aliam in Heslington, quatinus archiepiscopus Thomas ejusque canonici deinceps pacem firmissimam nobiscum habeant, et ut nullam amplius nobis, summo regi Deo in quiete militare volentibus, de hac re calumpniam moveant. Volens verò posteris nostris notum facere, de quantis tribulationibus nos liberavit omnipotens Dominus, scripturam hanc ad omnium memoriam componere studui, quatinus præsentis et futuri hujus loci nostri habitatores pro me precibus indefessis Deum nostrum exorent, et ut sciant qualiter ecclesia nostra fundata sit, vel quantis turbinibus impulsæ, divina nos protegente gratia, magis ac magis aucta et multiplicata sit per Christum Dominum nostrum.

Anno mcclxx. eodem anno scilicet ix. kal. Apr. in vigilia Annuntiationis Mariæ, dominus abbas beatæ Mariæ Eboraci assedit cum calce, dataque benedictione, conventu circumstante, primum lapidem in fundo novi chori ejusdem monasterii cujus fundum erat novem pedum in altitudine et in aliqua parte xxiiij. pedum, et xxvj. pedum.

Et eodem anno, scilicet anno lxxvj.^b idem assedit cum calce primum lapidem de columnis ejusdem chori corporis.

Anno m.cclxiiij. scilicet ad Pentecosten empta est villa de Buton, de domino Hugone de Neville per prædictum Simonem abbatem. Cujus manerium combustum fuit iiij. nonas Aprilis, anno mlxxv.^c unde remotum est manerium in alium locum à dicta villa remotiorem.

NUM. II.

De Constructione Ecclesiæ. et Fundis eò collatis.

[Ex vetusta memb. in Turri S. Mariæ Eboraci, an. 1628.]

ANNO Domini millesimo octogesimo nono Willielmus Rufus rex Angliæ et filius Willielmi regis et conquestoris Angliæ, anno regni sui secundo, tenuit parliamentum suum apud Eboracum, ubi tunc, ad rogatum præclarissimi viri, Stephani comitis Richmundiæ, in propria persona, cum magnatibus, et proceribus suis ad monasterium sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci accessit (quod quidem monasterium, præfatus comes prius inchoaverat) vidensque ipsum nimis esse angustum, ecclesiam mutavit, et nomen ecclesiæ; ipseque primum lapidem posuit, et pro nomine sancti Olavi sanctæ Mariæ nomen contulit, et multa beneficia ac prædia dedit, et donationes Willielmi Conquestoris patris sui, et aliorum dominorum suorum, cum libertatibus, et liberis consuetudinibus cartâ regali confirmavit. In qua (inter cætera) talis habetur mentio, scil. 'Comes verò Alanus post me, et patrem meum hujus abbatiæ inceptor, &c. dedit, &c. ecclesiam Caterici^d et decimas castellariæ suæ per totam castellariam, et per totum Eborashire, præter partem ecclesiarum Francigenarum suarum, de illis terris, quas ab illo tenent in præscripta castellaria, &c.'

[Ibid.]

RIBALDUS, frater comitis Richmundiæ, et dominus de Midelham, qui simul cum ipso comite venit ad conquestum, inter cætera, dedit monasterio sanctæ Mariæ de Eboraco, et Stephano primo abbati in puram, et perpetuam elemosi-nam, &c. aliquas terras et mansuras juxta Richmond, videlicet tres bovatas terræ in Esby, cum pertinentiis. Et in inquisitione facta per dominum Johannem de Kyrkby, et socios suos justiciarios, de quo waranto, abbas sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci clamat habere terras et libertates, &c. Juratores, &c.

Item canonici de sancta Agatha tenent immediate de Roaldo constabulario, fundatore suo, et ipse Roaldus de comite Richmundiæ, et comes de rege, ut in libro vocato Domesday, et in Kirkbyes Inquest. Item secundum Cronicos autenticos, anno Domini mclxij. ordo Premonstratensis habuit initium. Et anno Domini mclxlvj. idem ordo primo venit in Angliam, videlicet, ad Anwick in Northumberland, anno regni Stephani quarto: et sic possumus prescribere per quinque annos. Item Eugenius tertius papa, inter cætera, confirmat cellam sancti Martini, cum suis appenditiis, et ecclesiam Caterici, cum suis capellis, cujus datum est tertio idus Augusti, indictione decima incarnationis Domini mclxlvj. pontificatus papæ octavo.

Item Eugenius tertius papa mclxlvj. confirmat ecclesiam de Richmond, et capellam de Castello, cum omnibus quæ ad eas pertinent per totam castellariam.

Item inquiratur qualiter dicti canonici capellam sive heremitorium de Bordelbi primitus obtinuerunt, et utrum ante Conquestum dictum Bordelbi, pro lupanari habebatur. Post Conquestum dicta capella, sive heremitorium, per abbatem sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci dictis canonicis propter fratres suos leprosos, intuitu caritatis fuerat collatum, ut creditur.

[Ibid.]

MEMORANDUM, quod dominus Galfridus de Hudwell dedit monasterio S. Mariæ Eboraci, et priori sancti Martini juxta Richmundiam, quandam culturam, de dominio suo, vocatum vulgariter Rambelridding, prout includitur, &c.

Et Johannes filius dicti domini Galfridi dat, et concedit, per cartam suam, Roberto de Scotia, totum vastum ad capitalia dominia terrarum quondam patris sui, domini Galfridi prædicti, tam in bosco quàm in plano, tam in bovatis quam in dominicis, exceptis culturis sancti Martini.

Item prior sancti Martini habet prædictam culturam de Rambelridding ut supra, de dono patris sui. Unde patet quod omne vastum, ad capitalia ejusdem culturæ versus boream et alibi, ac ad omnia capita culturarum suarum, pertinet ac pertinere debet dicto priori ut patet per cartam dicti domini Galfridi cum clausa warranti.

Item in carta regis Henrici, filii Willielmi regis, habetur talis clausula: Ut ne alicujus hæres vel successor quærat relevamen, vel dominium aliquod, præter elemosinam, de elemosinis quas aliquis dedit prædictæ abbatihæ. Et nos habemus omnes terras, et tenementa nostra, datas in puram et perpetuam elemosinam. Unde patet quod omnia vasta in terris nostris, et in fines earundem, nostra sunt et non alterius cujuscunque domini.

Eustachius Conesacius in puram elemosinam quietum clamavit eisdem monachis totam calumpniam quam pater suus et ipse movere solebant super terram quæ jacet inter Miton et regiam viam quæ ducit ad Eboracum versus Richemund per Flathwaith et per Gyrtre et per Lundam Michaelis et per Gradfarton.

Stephanus filius Radulphi de Miton dedit eisdem monachis tres acras terræ in campo de Miton, et per aliam cartam duas acras terræ in eadem villa.

Johannes le Joven de Miton dedit eisdem monachis quinque acras terræ et unam acram prati in campo de Miton.

inter Thomam abbatem et conventum sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. ex una parte, et Johannem le Joven de Miton ex altera, de servitiis et consuetudinibus quas dictus Thomas abbas et conventus exigebant de dicto Johanne de una carucata terræ cum pertinentiis in Miton; scilicet, tres solidos de firma et octo gallinas et duas percarias cum caruca sua per annum et unam herciam per unam diem, et auxilium ad voluntatem abbatis; videlicet, quod prædictus abbas et conventus concesserunt dicto Johanni et hæredibus suis et assignatis suis dictam carucatam terræ cum pertinentiis in Miton, tenendam et habendam dicto Johanni et hæredibus suis, et assignatis suis de dictis abbate et conventu et successoribus eorum per istas consuetudines et servicia superscripta; videlicet, per octo gallinas per annum infra Natale et sexaginta ova ad Pascha, et duas percarias carucarum, unam in yvernagio et aliam in termesio, et unam herciam per annum in yvernagio, et tres solidos firmæ per annum, medietatem ad festum sancti Martini in hieme, et medietatem ad Pentecostem, et tres solidos per annum solvendo nomine tallagii ad festum sancti Michaelis pro omni servicio seculari, consuetudine, exactione, et demanda, salvo tamen dicto abbati et conventui et successoribus suis quod possint approbiare vastum suum de villa de Miton; salvis dicto Johanni et hæredibus suis et assignatis suis libero introitu et exitu et pastura sufficiente quantum pertinet ad dictum tenementum. Sed non licebit dicto Johanni et hæredibus suis, vel assignatis suis dictam terram vendere, dare, vel invadiare viris religiosis, nec Judeis. Et pro hac concordia et remissione dictus Johannes pro se et hæredibus suis remisit et quietum clamavit prædictis abbati et conventui totum jus et clamium quod habuit vel habere potuit in quinque toftis cum pertinentiis in prædicta villa; scilicet, de illo tofto quod Henricus Lesay tenuit, et illo tofto quod Alanus de Munesford tenuit, et illo tofto quod Agnes Thurkill tenuit, et illo tofto quod Walterus Chaunceller tenuit, et illo tofto quod Ricardus Molendinarius tenuit; habendum et tenendum dicto abbati et conventui in puram et perpetuam elemosinam imperpetuum; et ad faciendum inde commodum suum secundum quod melius sibi viderint expedire. Hoc autem eidem Johanni et hæredibus suis et assignatis suis concessimus quam diu se legaliter erga nos habuerint, et prædictam firmam bene reddiderint. Si vero contingat quod dictam terram vi vel ratione amiserit, non dabimus eis excambium. In cujus rei testimonium præsentis cartæ sigillum meum apposui. NUM. XLIII.

De Capella de Miton.

Quod semel recte finitum est literarum solet commendari memoriæ, ut sublata litium materia, omnis quoque litigandi amputetur occasio. Inde est quod veterem et diu agitatam controversiam inter ecclesiam beati Petri Ebor. et monasterium beatæ Mariæ amabili compositione interveniente hoc modo decidere et terminare utriusque loci capitulo placuit. Petebat siquidem Ebor. ecclesia per J. thesaurarium suum, ad cujus videlicet honorem rem quæ in controversiam deducebatur, specialiter pertinere dicebat, in subjectionem ecclesiæ beatæ Mariæ de Alna, capellam de Miton quæ in territorio prædictæ abbatiæ sita est asseverans quod omnes capellæ illius ordinatio tam in sacerdote ibi constituendo, quam in decimis percipiendis, vel mortuis sepeliendis, ad ecclesiam de Alna modis omnibus pertinere deberet, et per multorum annorum curricula pertinuerit. E contra dominus S. qui tunc abbas erat, et monachi, non capellam illam, sed matrem ecclesiam esse et ab omni omnis ecclesiæ subjectione liberam, necnon et assensu bonæ memoriæ H. archiepiscopi . . . consecratione honoratam fuisse dicebant; dumque cimeterio careret se parochianorum corpora libere sepelienda transportasse quocunque volebant. Sed hac contentione nondum terminata contigit memoratum thesaurarium, de suscepti honoris melioratione sollicitum, molendinum quoddam quod super aquam quæ fossa dicitur . . . ad ejus honorem pertinebat, a loco quo prædecessorum suorum tempore immobile fuerat ad commodum suum movere, illudque molendino monachorum in eadem . . . plus solito vicinum facere; quod quidem monachi ei non licere asserebant dampna ex hoc facto monasterio suo imminere proponentes. Qui etiam . . . fœdera de eisdem molendinis inter utramque ecclesiam antiquitus . . . venire, et insuper piscariam in qua molendinum suum firmaverat . . . locum quo prius sedem suam habuit ex integro juris sui esse dicebant. Dum itaque thesaurarius de prænominata capella ecclesiæ suæ injuriam fieri quæreretur; et eidem ab abbate et monachis de molendini sui transpositione . . . tandem in hanc pacis formam decursum est, ut abbati et monachis liberum sit in præfata capella clericum quem voluerint constituere, qui decimas omnium parochianorum recipiat, et eosdem cum viam universæ carnis ingressi fuerint in eodem loco sepeliat, et thesaurarius qui pro tempore erit molendinum suum in loco ad quem translatus supermemoratur inconcusse possidere liceat. Quod sicut iidem monachi de prænominata capella trium solidorum pensionem thesaurarius annuatim persolvent, dimidium videlicet ad Pentecostem et dimidium ad festum sancti Martini, sic decimam partem totius emolumenti molendini thesaurarii obtinebunt, in optione sua habentes vel eandem partem in manu sua retinere, vel de monasterio suo pro annua pensione tenendam cui voluerint concedere. Sciendum quoque est neutrum molendinorum a loco quo hac lite sopita firmata fuerunt alteri approximando debere moveri, nec cujuslibet molendini stagnum cum alterius detrimento magis eminens quam tempore compositionis contractæ fuerit posse fieri. Et ut omnis occasio litigandi amputetur, piscaria a molendino monachorum usque ad pontem solis eorum usibus debetur, illa vero quæ a ponte versus aquilonem est thesaurario tum Ebor. ex tunc mancipata fuisse dinoscatur. Sicut igitur monachis prædictam pensionem non licet minuere vel subtrahere, nec in præfato molendino ultra quam superius diffinitum est aliquid exigere; sic nec canonicis nec thesaurariis qui pro tempore erunt licebit aliquid ulterius in prænominata capella sibi petere, nec quod in eodem molendino monachis concessum est quicquam mutare, nisi forte thesaurario Ebor. visum fuerit molendinum suum ad pristinum locum transferre. Quod si contigerit, ex tunc monachi de sæpedita capella xiii. solidorum pensionem ad prædictos terminos thesaurario supramemoratæ ecclesiæ annuatim persolvent, manus suas ad hoc quod in molendino suo habebant ex toto continentes, cæteris quidem omnibus ratis, quæ de capella superius diffinita sunt et utroque molendino et piscaria quantum ab uno ad alterum extunc extendatur in suo antiquo statu permanentibus. Hæc itaque omni ad perpetuam utriusque ecclesiæ pacem provisa, utriusque capituli sigillo roborata omnibus diebus firma et inconcussa permaneant. Testibus hiis, Roberto decano, Johanne thesaurario, magistro Simundo, Nicholao de Tailli, Thoma de Ramavilla, Beroldo canonico, Willielmo Bayocensi, Willielmo filio Holdeby.^b

Willielmus de Grampton dedit eidem abbatiæ duo messuagia et sexaginta acras terræ cum pertinentiis in Miton.

Johannes de Hellebek dedit eisdem quatuor tofta et quatuor bovatas terræ in villa de Miton.

Item quieta clamantia Willielmi filii Stephani le Yong de uno messuagio et tribus acris terræ et dimidia.

Item carta indentata Sigani de Miton de duabus bovatis terræ in eadem villa eidem ab abbate et conventu beatæ Mariæ Eboraci in hæreditatem ad firmam dimissis, cum aliis ejusdem generis.

Conventio facta inter Abbatem et Conventum Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci et Dominam Mariam de Nevill Dominam de Midelham super Metis et Divisis in Marisco.

HÆC indentura testatur quod cum contentio orta esset inter abbatem et conventum beatæ Mariæ Ebor. ex una parte, et dominam Mariam de Nevill dominam de Midelham ex altera, super quibusdam metis, bundis, et divisis inter mariscum ipsorum abbatis et conventus in Grymston, et mariscum dictæ dominæ Mariæ dominæ de Midelham in Snape. Ita concordatum est quod metæ, bundæ, et divisæ prædictæ linialiter se teneant del Suthgrenhill usque le Northgrenhill inter mariscos de Snape et Grymston prædictos; ita quod nec prædicti abbas et conventus nec successores sui de cætero aliquid juris vel clamii in prædicto marisco de Snape ultra dictas divisas versus Snape, nec aliquam communiam, herbagium, seu aliquod aliud proficuum exigere, habere, vel vendicare poterunt imperpetuum. Et dicta domina Maria de Midelham concedit pro se et hæredibus suis, quod ultra divisas prædictas versus Grymston nullum jus vel clamium in marisco de Grymston prædicto clamabunt, nisi tantum communia pasturæ ad omnimoda animalia sua, et hominum suorum herbagium, et arundinem pro se, hæredibus, et hominibus suis de Snape, Welle, et Faverwald. Et hoc ad comitandum et capiendum in prædictis divisis inter mariscos prædictos usque quandam divisam quæ vocatur Quenhilgote quæ est ad finem calceti de Grymston in marisco de Grymston prædicto. Et quod prædicti abbas et conventus habeant et teneant totum residuum prædicti marisci versus Grymston in suo separali imperpetuum, absque reclamacione et contradictione juris vel clamii dictæ dominæ et hæredum suorum imperpetuum. In cujus rei testimonium præsentibus scriptis ad modum chirographi confectis dictæ partes, videlicet, præfati abbas et conventus parti hujus indenturæ penes prædictam dominam residenti sigillum capituli sui apposuerunt; et dicta domina parti penes prædictos abbatem et conventum residenti sigillum suum apposuit. UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus pateat per præsentem, quod cum placitum fuisset notum coram domino rege per breve de transgressionem inter religiosos viros abbatem et conventum monasterii beatæ Mariæ Eborum quærentes, et dominum Johannem Marmyon dominum de Carthorp juxta

Grymston defendentem; videlicet, de diversis transgressionibus sive injuriis per tenentes ipsius domini Johannis de Carthorp vi et armis factis infra divisas marisci ipsorum abbatis et conventus apud Grymston, tandem mediantibus communibus amicis placitum illud amicabili concordia in modum infrascriptum conquievit. Videlicet, quod prædictus dominus Johannes Marmyon pro se et hæredibus suis recognovit mariscum et calcetum marisci de Grymston esse jus ipsorum abbatis et conventus, et successorum, et ecclesiæ prædictæ beatæ Mariæ Eborum, sicut calcetum de villa de Grymston prædicta se extendit a solo prædictorum religiosorum ab oriente versus occidentem usque medium marisci ad quendam locum qui dicitur Suthgrenhill, et ab illo calceto de Grymston usque divisas de Thexton, in latitudine versus boream ad quendam locum qui dicitur Northgrenhill, renunciando insuper et penitus remittendo pro se et hæredibus suis imperpetuum omni juri et actioni quod ultra calcetum prædictum versus boream, vel in illo calceto aliquo tempore vendicaverat quoquomodo, vel quod ipse, vel hæredes sui, vel assignati vendicare poterunt in futurum. Ita quod nec ipse, nec hæredes sui, vel assignati aliquod jus vel clamium in prædicto marisco vel calceto per divisas prædictas de cætero exigere poterunt vel vendicare in futurum. Et pro hac recognitione et quieta clamacione prædicti abbas et conventus remiserunt prædicto domino Johanni et tenentibus suis de Carthorp omnes expensas in placito prædicto factas, et omnem actionem quam erga prædictos habuerunt nomine transgressionis et injuriæ eis et suis illatæ usque ad diem confectionis præsentium. In cujus rei testimonium præsentibus scriptis cirographatis tam prædicti abbas et conventus pro se et successoribus suis sigillum capituli sui, quam dictus dominus Johannes Marmyon pro se et hæredibus suis sigillum suum alternatim apposuerunt. Et alia bovata jacet in le Northfeld a loco qui dicitur Menegate usque ad campum de Skelton, sicut jacet inter terram Cecilie de Denton ex una parte et terram dictorum abbatis et conventus ex altera, tenenda et habenda prædicto abbati et conventui et eorum successoribus universis ad terminum quadraginta annorum plenarie completorum, termino incipiente ad festum Paschæ anni Domini millesimi trecentissimi decimi, salva prædicto domino Galfrido de dictis bovatis vestura istius anni. Priory of St. Bee,

IN

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

BEGA, a holy woman from Ireland, is said to have founded, about the year of our Lord 650, a small monastery in Copeland, where, afterwards, a Church was built in memory of her. This religious House being destroyed by the Danes, was restored by William, son to Ranulph de Meschin earl of Cumberland, in the time of Henry the First,^a and made a Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

William de Meschin, the founder, appears to have granted three Charters to St. Bees. The first, called "Carta prima Willielmi Meschyn" in the Chartulary preserved among the Harleian manuscripts, gives to God, St. Mary, and St. Bega six carucates of land in Cherchebi, with the manor which had belonged to William Balistarius.^b The second grants the church of St. Bee to St. Mary's York, with seven carucates of land in Copeland; the chapel of Egremont; the tithe of the demesne of Copeland; and the tithe of the founder's hogs, venison, pannage, and vaccaries in Copeland. It also confirms various other gifts by his homagers: as Stainburn by Wallef, Preston by Chatell, two bovates of land and a nativus in Rotington by Rayner, the churches of Witingham and Bothla with their parishes and tithes by Godard, and Swartahef by William the son of Gilbert of Lancaster. Stipulating that a prior and six monks, at the least, should be maintained at St. Bees by the abbat and convent of York.^c The third charter grants to the monks of St. Bees all the woods within their boundaries, with every thing within them except hart and hind, boar and hawk, together with all such liberties as the founder himself had a claim to in Copeland.^d

Ralph Meschin, the son of the founder, confirmed his father's donations, together with those of the different homagers; adding the manor called Auenderdale. The woods within the boundaries of the monks are stated in this charter to extend from Cuningshow to the brook between Preston and Hensingham, and so to Whitehaven.^e

The Harleian Chartulary preserves a separate grant of Auenderdale from Ralph Meschin,^f exclusive of the mention of it in the general confirmation.

Among possessions of the larger kind, Cecily countess of Albemarle gave four carucates of land between Esk and Duden; with two bovates of land, and the chapel of Lodeswater. David, king of Scotland, gave Everset. Guthred, king of the Isles, gave Eschedala; and Ragdnald, another king of the Isles, a portion of land in Ormeshan.^g The monks of St. Bees had also the church of Hafryngton, lands in Kyrkby le Kogh, &c. Other possessions of a smaller kind will be enumerated, as far as the names of the places are concerned, in the abstract which will presently be given of the Harleian Register.

William Forz, or de Fortibus, earl of Albemarle, granted the monks of St. Bees a confirmation of all that had been given to them by his ancestors in Alledale and Copeland. He names fourteen salmon which they had of the gift of Alan son of Waldef, with half a carucate of land in Aspatric, and six acres in another part of the same vill; six salmon of the gift of the Lady Alice de Romely; half a mark of silver, of the same donation, out of the fulling-mill of Cokermouth, and a manse in the same vill. He further gives a rent of a mark of silver out of the fulling-mill of Cokermouth, payable, half-yearly, at the feasts of Pentecost and St. Martin.^h

PRIORS of ST. BEES.

ROBERT is said by Leland to have been the name of the first prior.ⁱ

WALERAN occurs about 1197.

NICHOLAS, who is also called NICHOLAS LANGTON, and NICHOLAS DE LANGTONA, occurs A. D. 1257,⁴² Hen. III., again in 1279, and lastly in 1282.^k

BENEDICT also occurs prior in 1282.^l

WILLIAM occurs prior in 1288.^m

JOHN occurs "anno illo quo Odo rex Allemannie venit in Angliam."ⁿ

^a Tanner says, "This, being within a mile of Egremont, is the same monastery, probably, which Gervase of Cant. or Sulgrave and Stevens, vol. i. p. 38, describe by 'Prioratus de Egremunde S. Brigidæ monachi Nigri' in Richmondshire; but that it is not, though within the archdeaconry of Richmond. Cressy will have St. Bees to have been the same monastery with Heortu, but Leland, Coll. tom. iii. p. 39, makes them different; and both Leland and Camden think Heortu to have been Hartlepole."

THE HISTORY OF ST. BEE

The history of St. Bee is a subject of great interest to the people of the county. It is a town of great antiquity, and has been the seat of a noble family for many centuries. Priory of St. Bees, Cumberland R. M. View.

Drawn & Engraved by John G. G.

ROGER KIRKBY was promoted from the priorate of St. Bees in 1437 to be abbat of St. Mary's York.^a

ROGER ARMYN was prior in 1485.^b

EDMUND SMYTH occurs in 1496.^c

THOMAS BARWYKE is called "Custos Cellæ S. Begæ, 1498."^d

ROBERT ALANBY was prior in 1523: see a letter from him, in that year, to the Lord Dacre, in Hearne's Appendix to Otterbourne, p. 583, expressing his fear of a descent on the coast by the duke of Albany.

The priors of St. Bees were probably appointed or removed at the pleasure of the abbats of St. Mary's York.

Tanner, from King's Account of the Isle of Man at the end of his Vale Royal, p. 9, says, the prior of St. Bees, having lands in the Isle of Man, was a baron of that island, and obliged to attend as such upon the kings or lords thereof whenever they required it, or at least upon every new succession in the government, upon penalty of forfeiting his interest in the lands.

At the Dissolution of Religious Houses the revenues of St. Bee's cell, according to Dugdale, amounted to 143*l.* 17*s.* 2½*d.*; according to Speed, to 149*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*^e

In the 7th Edw. VI. the king granted the manor, rectory, and Cell of St. Bee to Sir Thomas Chaloner, knt. accompanied by all rights, members, and appurtenances thereto belonging, with all possessions of the cell in Enerdale, and elsewhere in the county of Cumberland; to him, his heirs, and assigns, in fee-farm for ever; to be held of the king, his heirs, and successors, as of his manor of Sheriff-Hutton in Yorkshire, in free and common socage, by fealty only, and not in capite; paying to the crown, yearly, the fee-farm rent of 143*l.* 16*s.* 2½*d.*^f

^e A Survey of this Cell, taken in the time of K. Henry VIII., will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, Num. X. The only entry relating to it in the Roll of Annuities still payable in the 2d and 3d of Phil. and Mar. is,

"SC'Æ BEGÆ nuper Mon. Feod. Domini Wharton senescall. general. omnium possessionum nuper monasterii præd. ex concessione nuper abbatis ibidem per annum xxvj. vij*l.*"

^f See Nicolson and Burn's Hist. of Westm. and Cumb. vol. ii. p. 41. In the Abstracts of the Originalia in the British Museum, vol. vi. fol. 85, we read,

"Cumb. Ebor.—7 Edw. VI. rex xvj. die Junii concessit Thomæ Chaloner mil. maner. rectoriam, et Cellam de sancta Bega, vulgariter voc. Seynt Bees in Cowpland, ac manerium de Snytall cum al. terr. ibidem spect. habend. sibi et hæredibus suis ad feodi firmam."

^g Nicolson and Burn, ut supr.

After Sir Thomas Chaloner, the manor and rectory of St. Bees became the property of the Wybergh family, who, being great sufferers in the civil wars during the reign of Charles the First, mortgaged their estate here to Sir John Lowther. It is now the property of the Earl of Lonsdale.

The only REGISTER of ST. BEES Priory now extant is the one which has been already referred to. It was formerly in the possession of Sir John Lowther of Whitehaven, afterwards in that of the Rev. John Strype, and is now preserved among the Harleian manuscripts in the British Museum, num. 434. It forms a volume of some thickness in folio, written upon vellum, apparently toward the latter end of the fourteenth century. A few instruments are inserted in it in a later hand.^h

Tanner refers to numerous original charters belonging to this and other monasteries of Cumberland, formerly in the possession of Francis Salkeld, Esq. of Whitehall in that county.ⁱ

There is an imperfect, or rather a mutilated Roll of Charters, relating to St. Bees, preserved among the Cottonian Instruments in the British Museum, marked XIII. 21. It contains,

- 1. Carta Johannis de Curci ecclesiæ S. Mariæ Ebor. et S. Begæ de Couplanda de duabus partibus insulæ quæ vocatur Neddram, et duabus partibus villæ ejusdem insulæ, et duabus partibus omnium beneficiorum ecclesiæ quæ in eadem insula fundata est, et de terris in Duffren, cum privilegiis.

The ARMS of St. Bees Priory are given in the initial Letter of the present Account. They occur in Tong's Visitation of the Northern Counties, A. D. 1530, in the Harleian MS. 1499, fol. 80, with this remark; "Be yt notid that Wylyyam Myschen son of Ranolf lord of Egremont founded the monastery of Saint Beysse of blake monks; and heyres to the sayd Mischin ys the Lord Fytzwat', the Lord Haryngton, and the Lord Lucy; and so restyth founders of the said monastery therle of Sussex, the Lord Marques Dorset, and therle of Northumberland as heyres to the lords aforesaid."

There is in the office of the duchy of Lancaster an ancient Deed to which a prior of St. Bees was a party, and to which the abbey SEAL is attached. It is small and mean; consisting only of a plain cross without any charges in the shield, and a few words round it no longer legible.

The monastery of St. Bees, itself, four miles from Whitehaven, was situated in a narrow dell, with low and marshy lands to the east; the west exposed to storms from the Irish channel. The CHURCH was built in the form of a cross, of red free-stone, but without side aisles; consisting of a nave, transept, and chancel only. The nave is at present used as the parish church; the transept, as a place of sepulture; the east end is unroofed, and in ruins. The great west door seems a part of the founder's building: it is ornamented with grotesque heads and cheveron mouldings. The east end of the chancel, with three long narrow windows, enriched with double mouldings and pilasters, is apparently of the thirteenth century.^a Considerable remains of the monastic buildings are to be seen on the south side.

The PRIORY of NEDDRAM in Ulster is said to have been made a CELL to ST. BEES by John de Curcy, temp. Hen. II.^b

BEGA nata in Hibernia.

Bega primum humile monasterium construxit in Cauplandia (versus Carlelm in extremis Angl. finibus) ubi nunc sunt aliquot monachi Mariani urbis Ebor. et vulgo vocatur saint Beges.

Deinde ad septentrionalem partem Wiræ fluminis monasterium construxit.^c

Tertio Herutey,^d qui locus Latinè sonat Cervi Insula, commigravit, cœnobiumque virginum ibi condidit, pauloque post Hildæ sacræ virginis cessit, quæ post victoriam Oswi regis accepit Eanfledam virginem ejus filiam, voto promissam cum annuo agrorum censu, unde postea animos sumpsit ædificandi monasterium in Streneshale, et posito ibidem cœnobio, monachos induxit, et sacras virgines, quibus ipsa abbas præfuit.

Bega autem, relicta insula de Herutey, contulit se

Bega tandem à Calcaria peregrè proficiscens, obiit apud Hakanos monasterium velatarum virginum [Leyland] Hakanos est tertio à Scardoburgo miliario.

^b According to Leland, the church and possessions of St. Bees received considerable injury during an incursion from Scotland in 1315. "Anno D. 1315. Robertus Brus obsidebat Carleolum. Quo tempore Jacobus Duglas multa mala fecit apud Egremont, et spoliavit eccl. S. Begæ, ac maneria de Cletter et Staineburne prioris S. Begæ combusserunt." Lel. Wetherall Priory,

IN

CUMBERLAND : a

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

ISHOP TANNER justly says, "There seems to be great confusion in the memorandums and charters printed in the Monasticon out of the Register of this priory, concerning the time of its foundation : 1. There is a charter of King William the Conqueror confirming this cell to St. Mary's and its abbat Richard, whereas St. Mary's was not founded under William the Conqueror, nor was Richard abbat till 12 Hen. I. and among the witnesses Lucia his wife and Henry his brother being named, shew plainly that this could not be a grant of the Conqueror. 2. This priory is said to have been founded temp. Will. Rufi, and we are referred to the charter of Ranulf for proof; which charter, with the same witnesses, and inscribed 'Carta prima de Wetherall,' being printed in the other (that is the next) column, mentions expressly the giving of this manor of Wederhall to St. Mary's 'pro anima domini mei regis Henrici.'"^b In fact, the first charter alluded to, though called the Conqueror's, must be ascribed to King William Rufus;^c in whose reign, or early in that of King Henry the first, Ranulph de Meschin, earl of Cumberland, must have founded the cell of Wetherall, which he appears to have annexed to the abbey of St. Mary York while Stephen de Whitby, the first abbat, was at the head of that monastery.^d

The priory of Wetherall was dedicated to the Holy Trinity, St. Mary, and St. Constantine. Its inhabitants consisted of a prior and eight monks.

Stevens has been so very copious in his supplemental extracts to Dugdale from the Register of this priory, that we shall refer to the Appendix for a minute account of its possessions. The greater benefactors, after Ranulph de Meschin, appear to have been William Fitz Udard,^e Earl David,^f William de Crogelin,^g David king of Scotland,^h Earl Henry son of the king of Scotland,ⁱ Alexander de Crevaquer,^k and Simon de Morvill.^l

In the compromise of a dispute between the bishop of Carlisle and the abbat of St. Mary York, in 1261, it was determined that the abbat should have the guardianship of the priory of Wetherall upon every vacancy.^m it is probable, have been preserved.

The names of few of the

RICHARD DE REME, according to Leland, was the first prior.ⁿ

WILLIAM DE TANFIELD occurs in 1292.^o

JOHN DE GILLINGES, prior of Wetherall, was elected abbat of St. Mary York in 1303.^p

ADAM DE DALTON occurs in 1340.^q

THOMAS BOTHE in 1455.^r

RICHARD WODERHALL in the 26th of Hen. VIII.^s

RALPH HARTLEY was the last prior. He surrendered his monastery to the king in 1539, and received a pension of 12*l.* per annum. He was still alive in 1553.^t

In the 26th of Henry VIII. according to Dugdale, the priory of Wetherall was valued at 117*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* per annum : according to Speed, at 128*l.* 5*s.* 3*d.*

The site, with the possessions in and about the same, were granted in 1541, 33d Hen. VIII. to the dean and chapter of Carlisle.^u The advowsons of the churches of Wetherall and Warwick, and the chapels of St. Anthony

^a Reynier and Speed place this monastery, erroneously, in Yorkshire.

^t The Roll of Payments to the Religious, of the 2d and 3d of Phil. and Mary, so often quoted, says,

"WETHERALL nuper Mon. Annuit. Edwardi Waller per annum xl*l.* Penc. Radulphi Hartley per annum xij*l.*"

^u Nicolson and Burn, vol. ii. p. 329, and Hutchinson, vol. i. p. 159, describe this grant as consisting of all the site of the priory or cell of Wetherall, with the church-steeple, church-yard, and all other lands and possessions in and about the same; and also the manor of Wetherall and sundry parcels of land there; St. Anthony's chapel, with two enclosures; the water-mill and the fishery at the bay of Wetherall; and also all those manors, mesuages, lands, and tenements in the several parishes or hamlets of Corby, Camwhinton, Botcherby, Morehouse, and St. Severin, were subsequently granted to the Dean and Chapter by another charter from the same king.

The only REGISTER of Wetherall priory now extant is that in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, formerly belonging to William Lord Howard of Naworth. Stevens quotes a Transcript, or rather Extracts from this Chartulary,^a formerly in the possession of Dr. Hugh Todd. A volume in the Harleian Collection of Manuscripts, num. 1881, entitled "Cartæ fundatoriæ et dotatoriæ Prioratus de Wedderall et abbatiæ de Holm-Cultrum, in comitatu Cumbriæ," agrees very much, as far as Wetherall is concerned, with the extracts copied in Stevens; except that in some instances the latter are abridged, and Stevens's references, as to pages, do not agree with the Harleian transcript. This volume, which was given to the Harleian library by Dr. Todd, appears to have been one of four. Bishop Tanner notices some Collections of Dr. Todd relating to this priory in the cathedral library at Carlisle. Other extracts from the Wetherall Register, by other hands, are preserved among the Harleian manuscripts, num. 294, foll. 209, 214; num. 2044, fol. 105. See also Dodsworth's Collections in the Bodleian library at Oxford, vol. x. fol. 171; vol. clix. fol. 138.

Tanner gives the following references to public Records relating to this priory:

"Pat. 11 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 25. Claus. 17 Edw. III. m. 38.

"Cart. 5 Edw. III. n. 66, pro omnibus libertatibus quas ecclesiæ S. Petri Ebor. vel S. Joannis Beverlac. habent pro mortuo bosco in foresta de Carliol, pastura inter Edene et regiam viam a Carliol ad Apelby, &c. Pat. 29 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 18. Pat. 31 Edw. III. p. 3, m. 8. Pat. 40 Edw. III. p. 2, m. 34 d. Claus. 43 Edw. III. m. 33.

"Pat. 16 Ric. II. p. 2, m. 30."

The Surrender of this abbey, dated 20 Oct. 30 Hen. VIII. remains in the Augmentation Office, and professes to be sealed with the Common SEAL, but has upon it nothing more than the initials R. H. of the last prior Ralph Hartley.

A turretted gate-house of considerable strength is now the only remain of the CONVENTUAL BUILDINGS. The rest of the priory was pulled down in the last century by order of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, who, according to Hutchinson, directed a prebendal house in Carlisle to be constructed from the materials.

Not far from the site of this monastery are three Cells, communicating with each other by means of a gallery in front; cut out of a rock at the height of above forty feet from the summer level of the river Eden. They are called Wetherall Safeguard by the country people, but more commonly by the name of St. Constantine's Cell. See an account of them in the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. i. p. 84. What might have been their connection with the monastery does not appear.

Bulla Alexandri III. Papæ concedens quod Ecclesiæ Abbatie Sanctæ Mariæ Eboracensis non taxatæ deserviantur per Capellanos suos.

[Ibid. p. 40.]

ALEXANDER episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis abbati et conventui monasterii sanctæ Mariæ Eboracensis, ordinis sancti Benedicti, salutem et amplificam benedictionem. Ordinis nostri meretur honestas, ut votis vestris, quantum cum Deo possimus, favorabiliter annuamus. Sane petitionis vestræ series continebat, quod vos in ecclesiis et capellis eis annexis, quas in usus proprios canonice obtinetis, in quibus non fuerunt taxatæ hactenus vicariæ, nec perpetui vicarii instituti, a tempore cuius memoria non existit, continue fecistis et facitis per capellanos proprios deserviri.

[Ibid. p. 42.]

IN nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Amen. Orta demum inter venerabilem patrem dominum R. Dei gratia Karliolensem episcopum ex parte una, et religiosos viros abbatem et conventum sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. ex altera, super custodia Prioratus de Wederhale, dicto prioratu carente priore, et super institutione et destitutione ejusdem prioris ac quibusdam aliis articulis, materia quæstionis, tandem mediis communibus amicis, A. D. M.CC.LXI. pridie nonas Februarii conquievit hujusmodi controversia super dicta custodia in hunc modum, viz. quod idem episcopus sollicite considerans quanta dampna et pericula per hujus custodiam dictis religiosis possent accidere, et præcipue Cellæ seu Prioratui de Wederhale antedicto, et quod longi temporis quæstum per hujus custodiam brevis hora consumeret; attendens insuper hujus occasione parum emolumenti posse sibi seu episcopatu Karleolensi accrescere, memoratus episcopus nomine suo et ecclesiæ Karliolensis, de consensu capituli sui expresso, omne jus, si quod sibi compeciit, super custodia dicti prioratus et bonorum ejusdem dictis abbati et conventui favore religionis, tam in possessorio quam in petitorio, undecunque proveniens, pro se et successoribus suis imperpetuum remisit et quietum clamavit. Dicti etiam abbas et conventus, nolentes erga tam pium patrem filii degeneres reputari, eidem episcopo et successoribus suis amicabiliter dederunt et concesserunt, ac etiam remiserunt imperpetuum, duas marcas et dimidiam, sibi prius annuatim debitas de ecclesia de Denton (quæ de patronatu domini Karliolensis episcopi existit) dictis religiosis et prioratui de Wederhale prius debitas, nomine pensionis, in utilitatem dicti episcopatus convertendas. Convenit etiam inter easdem partes, quod dicto prioratu de Wederhale carente priore, abbas beatae Mariæ Ebor. qui pro tempore fuerit, monachum quem suo periculo dictæ domui crediderit esse utilem sive dignum dabit priorem, et loci diocesano vel ejus officiali (eo absente) præsentabit eundem; quem dictus episcopus sine difficultate admittet, et curam animarum parochialium ecclesiarum duntaxat eidem committet, recepta ab eodem canonica obedientia, salva dicto abbati obedientia regulari. Quod si dictus episcopus in diocesi Karliolensi præsens non fuerit, dictus officialis eundem præsentatum absque difficultate admittet. Ita quod per adventum dicti episcopi in diocesim dictus præsentatus eidem episcopo infra tres dies, utroque existente in diocesi, personaliter præsentabit, canonicam obedientiam eidem facturum, curamque animarum parochialium ecclesiarum recepturum. Quod si dictus episcopus Karliolensis, vel ejus officialis dictum præsentatum sine difficultate non admittat, liceat eidem dictum prioratum libere ingredi et ibidem ut prior commorari; ita quod ad mandatum diocesani veniat dictam curam (ut dictum est) recepturus et obedientiam facturum sine mora. Si vero processu temporis dictus abbas priorem de Wederhale, ex causa aliqua, quam idem abbas crediderit sufficientem, providerit amovendum, dictus abbas literas suas patentes, super amotione ejusdem, prædicto episcopo destinabit, causam, quam crediderit sufficientem inserendo, quam dictus episcopus sine difficultate aut contradictione approbabit; et quod per dictæ cartæ receptionem et obedientiam eidem episcopo factam abbati Ebor. nullum in amotione hujus fiat prejudicium. Lectis siquidem præmissis, dictæ partes huic compositioni assensum præbentes, renunciaverunt omnibus processibus et literis impetratis et impetrandis, omni exceptioni, cavillationi et specialiter in integrum restitutioni, ac omni juris remedio, per quod poterit præsens compositio imposterum infirmari, seu aliquatenus impugnari. In cujus rei testimonium huic compositioni dictæ partes alternatim sigilla sua apposuerunt. Nos vero prior et conventus Carlioli supradictam compositionem ratam et gratam habentes, ipsam quatenus in nobis est confirmamus et sigilli nostri munimine roboramus. Ad majorem securitatem nos abbas et conventus Ebor. dictas duas marcatas et dimidiam de ecclesia de Denton nobis debitas eidem episcopo et successoribus suis imperpetuum damus, conferimus, et assignamus in forma supradicta. Dat. apud Bellum Locum anno et die supradictis. Ponatur hoc interlineare (volentes) ante consignationem. Teste eadem manu.

Willelmus filius Odardi, confirmavit eisdem monachis omnia bona quæ antecessores sui eis dederunt, scilicet piscationem, ripam, et duas bovatas ut supra; et ex suo proprio dono tres bovatas terræ in Warthwic, unam quam mater ipsius dederat, et duas alias in compactione pacis quam contraxit cum monachis, liberas et ab omni exactione terrena quietas. Præterea homagium Thomæ propter quod controversia inter eos erat, qui Thomas de terra quam de eo tenebat xij^d. eidem ecclesiæ reddere debebat.

Willelmus filius Udardi quietum clamavit eisdem monachis totam terram quæ jacet inter Wederhale et Warthwic quæ vocatur Camera Constantini, a fossato quod est juxta domum quæ fuit Edwini versus Wederhale sicut fossatum vadit in aqua Edene, et in occidentali parte tendit versus mariscum quod est inter terram de Wederhale et de Warthwic, et prædicti monachi quietas clamaverunt ei duas bovatas terræ quas habebant in Warthwic et xij^d. quos annuatim habere debebant de terra ipsius de Chorkeby. Octavum vero piscem quem ipse et antecessores sui de coffino monachorum habere solebant, in manu sua retinuit; sed nec ei nec hæredibus suis licitum foret piscari nec hamo neque reti, nec aliquo modo piscandi inter Munchewat et stagnum molendini monachorum, nec impedire monachos firmare stagnum suum in ripa de Chorkby. Duas vero bovatas terræ, quas antea habebant in Chorkby similiter eis imperpetuum concessit.

[Ibid. p. 50.]

Willelmus filius Odardi quietum clamavit Deo et sanctis de Wederhale et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus quicquid juris clamavit in præsentatione capellani de Warthwic; qui capellanus a monachis præsentatus debebat in eadem villa assidue manere ad divina officia Deo et sancto

Leonardo celebranda. Monachi vero concesserunt ei et patri et filio et uxori ejus anniversarium perpetuum in ecclesiis suis, sicut pro monachis suis.

[Ibid. p. 51.]

Idem Robertus filius Will. de Chorkeby eisdem monachis concessit totam partem piscationis in Edene a Munchewat supra memorato ad fossatum quod fuit juxta domum quæ fuit Edwini, et monachi ei concesserunt eadem aisiamenta in aqua sua; et notat quod dicti monachi nihil juris subtus fossatum Edwini in piscatione de Edene poterunt exigere nisi concessu suo vel hæredum suorum. Convenit etiam inter eos quod ipse Robertus et sui in prædicta piscatione non possunt amplius habere nisi quinque naviculas tantum, et prædicti monachi nisi quinque naviculas.

[Ibid. p. 57.]

Clemens abbas sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. concessit licentiam Willielmo filio Odardi ædificandi capellam in curto suo de Corkeby, et quod missa celebraretur in eadem bis in ebdomada, scilicet Dominica die et feria sexta, excepta Dominica in ramis palmarum, solummodo eidem Willielmo et uxori suæ et domesticis familiæ de domo sua et hospitibus suis; parochianis autem de Chorkeby non permisit ire ad dictam capellam, sed omnes debebant ire ad matricem ecclesiam de Wederhale; et nullus presbyter nisi proprius capellanus vel monachus prioris de Wederhale debebat ibi missam celebrare, nec ullus ingredi dictam capellam sine licentia prioris de Wederhale. Ipse Willielmus etiam, et uxore ejus cum omni familia tenebantur ire cum oblatione ad ecclesiam de Wederhale in præcipuis festivitatibus, sed si legitime impediti non poterant ire tenebantur mittere xij. denarios pro oblatione sua.

[Ibid. p. 61.]

Conventum est inter priorem et monachos de Wederhale et Robertum filium Willielmi domini de Chorkby, quod si aliquis hominum utriusque partis convictus fuerit quod aliquo modo piscatus fuerit in aqua alterius partis, dabit parti conquerenti unam marcam argenti nomine pænæ; si autem non suffecerit ad solutionem, tunc per unum annum fugabitur a terra domini sui, ita quod in ea nec hospitium, nec receptaculum, nec aliquod auxilium habebit, donec annus integer terminetur. Quod si utra pars hominem sic fugatum receperit obligabitur ad solutionem unius marcæ argenti, ad opus sanctæ Mariæ Karliolensis.

[Ibid. p. 65.]

Willielmus filius Odardi de Korkby concessit eisdem monachis quod possent firmare stagnum suum de Wederhale in ripa de Chorkby, et capere petram et alia necessaria ad idem stagnum faciendum. Concessit insuper quod ubicumque faceret molendinum suum de Warthwic super aquam de Edene, non posset facere stagnum molendini de solis, vel plankys, vel grossis lignis, nec de aliis nisi tantum de polis et ingis, nec posset claudere aquam de Edene nisi ad medium filum prædictæ aquæ vel minus si minus aquæ possit sufficere, ita ut piscis nullum habeat impedimentum veniendi ad piscariam monachorum.

[Ibid. p. 68.]

Robertus filius Willielmi de Corkby dedit eisdem monachis totam terram cum tofto uno in Constantinedene quam Robertus filius Gerardi de eo aliquando tenuit, cum servitio ipsius Roberti et hæredum suorum, cum omnibus pertinentiis, quietam ab omni seculari servitio.

[Ibid. p. 71.]

HÆC est compositio facta inter abbatem et conventum
VOL. III.

sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. et monachos de Wederhale ex una parte, et Robertum filium Willielmi, et Willielmum filium Johannis dominos de Warthwic ex altera, de marisco qui jacet subtus condorsum de Wederhale, viz. quod dicti abbas et conventus de consensu dictorum Roberti et Willielmi et hæredum suorum retinuerunt ad usum proprium monachorum suorum de Wederhale, totam illam partem prædicti marisci, qui se extendit versus Wederhale a fossato quod Werricus fecit, linealiter ex transverso marisci usque ad quandam quercum stantem in condorso, et sic ex transverso condorsi usque ad terram de Wederhale cultam, ad includendum pro voluntate sua, ad omnimodum commodum suum inde faciendum imperpetuum. Prædicti vero abbas et conventus concesserunt prædictis R. et W. et hæredibus eorum et hominibus de Warthwic habere communia pasturæ tantum in altera parte marisci versus Warthwic, sicut dictus mariscus se extendit versus aquilonem a fossato prædicto usque ad rivum pluvialem, qui est divisus inter Wederhale et Warthwic, qui rivus dividendo terras prædictarum villarum descendit in dicto marisco subtus pratum de Westrorouf, et inde per transfusum marisci exit inter terram monachorum quæ dicitur Camera Constantini et terram de Warthwic. Ita scilicet, quod nihil omnino capere vel habere poterint in dicto marisco ultra prædictum rivum, nisi communia pasturæ tantum. Nec aliquis poterit ibi fodere glebas, nisi illi qui tenebunt terram monachorum, quæ dicitur Camera Constantini. Sciendum est autem quod quando monachi de Wederhale totam vesturam marisci quem includerint plene in usus suos, quolibet anno converterint, ex tunc licebit hominibus de Warthwic habere ingressum in dicto marisco ad pasturam habendam usque ad tempus illud quo prædicti monachi voluerint ponere illam in defenso. Sciendum est autem quod hanc compositionem firmiter tenendam et warrantizandam utrinque imperpetuum prædicti abbas et conventus pro se et suis tenentibus de Wederhale, prædicti vero R. et W. pro se et omnibus de Warthwic quolibet modo tenentibus manuceperunt, et insuper iidem R. et W. juramento corporaliter præstito se et hæredes suos sub pœna decem librarum, abbas vero et conventus per priorem suum de Wederhale sub eadem pœna ad præscripta omnia observandum se obligaverunt. Ut autem hæc compositio perpetuæ firmitatis et inconcussum robur optineat, prædicti abbas et conventus et prædicti R. et W. sigilla sua una cum sigillis B. prioris et magistri G. de Lauther archidiaconi Carliolensis, hinc inde apposuerunt. Hiis testibus, domino W. officiali, magistris Ricardo et Helrico rectoribus scholarum theologiæ et decretorum, domino Thoma de Morlund, Thoma de Graistock, Michael de Sancto Albano, Symone decano et capitulo Karleoli, Thoma filio Johannis vicecomite, Ricardo de Levintum, Roberto de Castlecairoc, Petro de Tyleol, Roberto de Hamton, Waltero de Boutun, et comitat. Priory of St. Martin Richmond,

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

YMAR, dapifer or steward to the earl of Richmond, about the year 1100, gave the chapel of St. Martin Richmond, with certain lands in its neighbourhood, to the abbey of St. Mary York; whereupon a Cell of nine or ten monks from that monastery were fixed at Richmond, and there continued till the Dissolution. Wymar's charter, exclusive of the chapel, with a carucate of land, grants four carucates in Edlingthorp, the church of Thorenton with half a carucate, a carucate in Forset, four carucates in Scotton, and the tithe of his demesne in Wicra.^a

Roald, the son of Roald and grandson of Alan, granted to this priory various services and homages in Hudleswell.^b

Two bulls of confirmation of the grant of this cell were obtained from Pope Eugenius III. in 1146 and 1147.^c

Peter Capell, rector of Richmond, gave to the monks here twenty pounds of wax.^d

Conan earl of Bretagne and Richmond gave the tithe of all his mills within his castle of Richmond.^e

A Register of tithes and portions granted to this cell, taken in 1503, preserved by Dugdale, beside the founder, mentions as benefactors Stephen earl of Richmond, Ribald, Odo the chamberlain, Acharias, Scotland, Emsand Musard, Robert fitz Ralph, and Asketell de Furneys.^f

Stevens records two charters of Thomas de Lascels to this priory granting three bovates of land, with a toft and croft in Langthon.^g

another Rental of its possessions, taken in the 31st of Henry the Eighth, is given in the Appendix from the original record in the Augmentation Office.ⁱ

The hermitage or chapel of St. Thomas of Bordelbi was given by the abbey of St. Mary York to this cell for the reception of leprous brethren.^k

PRIORS of ST. MARTIN RICHMOND.

JOHN POPILTON, according to Leland, was the first Prior.^l

JOHN MATHER occurs prior in the 26th of Henry the Eighth. Willis calls him JOHN MATTHEW, and says he occurs in 1528.^m

No impression of any SEAL used by this priory has as yet fallen within the knowledge of the present Editors of this Work.

The remains of the priory have probably long been inconsiderable; the Editor of England's Gazetteer, 1751, noticing as to it merely thus, when speaking of the town of Richmond: "it had formerly a monastery, the steeple of which yet remains."

At the Dissolution, according to Tanner, this priory was found to have possessions to the yearly value of 47*l*. 16*s*. in the whole, and 43*l*. 16*s*. 8*d*. clearly.ⁿ

There is a conventual lease, dated 12 Aug. 27 Hen. VIII. demising to John lord Scrope all the lordships, manors, lands, and tenements in Richmond which belonged to the abbey of St. Mary near York. This lease is in the Augmentation Office. The priory was granted in the 4th Edw. VI. to Edward lord Clinton.^o

Among the Records in the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office, Exchequer, is a Document thus entitled: "De Gawino Collin et aliis exonerandis de 30*l*. 9*s*. 6*d*., oneratis pro redditu pro Cella S. Martini juxta Richemond in comitatu Eboraci. Trin. 16 Eliz. rot. 22."

Benedictine Cell of Romburc, now Rumburgh,

IN

SUFFOLK :

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

and A. D. 1070, appointed a few monks from St. Benet's,

^a "Filiis omnibus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ notum sit fratrem Blakere professum et ordinatum esse in ecclesia et congregatione sancti Benedicti de Holm ab Almaro episcopo et abbate Thurstano et eorum licentia in Cella quadam quæ Romburch dicitur Deo cum quibusdam fratribus servire monastice: an prædicto sancti Benedicti loco et ejus-

with one Blakere at their head, to begin a small religious house here, which was to be subject to that abbey.^a No other particulars of this first foundation appear to be known, if we except the mention of the monks, who were then twelve in number, in the Domesday Survey, among the lands of Alan earl of Bretagne: Romburc being then a member of Wisset. "In eadem Wisseta i. ecclesia. ii. car. liberæ terræ. semper xii. villani et xvi. bor. et vi. car. silvæ. cxxx. por. et iii. acr. prati. Adjacent huic ecclesiæ v. villani lii. acræ. et. iiii. car. et dim. et i. acr. prati. In hac ecclesia xii. monachi. et sub hac i. capella. Totum in superiori pretio xx. lib."^b dem loci abbati et fratribus subjectos esse, regulæque doctrinam et exemplum vitæ pro posse ab eis accipere et eorum subjectioni inservire ut ordini subjacentes cœlestis regni vere sint participes." Reg. S. Bened. de Hulmo, MS. Cotton. Galba E. ii. fol. 59.

Sometime in the reign of King Henry the First, either Stephen or his son Alan the third, earls of Richmond and Bretagne, gave this priory as a cell to the Abbey of St.

^b Domesd. tom. ii. fol. 293.

Mary York. In Bishop Everard's charter of confirmation the foundation is ascribed to Earl Alan.^a In a charter of Geoffrey bishop of Ely, in 1284, to Earl Stephen.^b Earl Alan, the father of Duke Conan, was probably the real founder.^c

The cell or priory of Romburc was dedicated to St. Michael and St. Felix. The abbat of St. Mary York, after appointing the prior, always presented him to the bishop of Norwich. The abbat and convent also presented clerks to the churches of Speckshall and South Cove, in right of this priory.^d A charter of Brian de Ringhall, in a Roll relating to the cell of Romburc, which will presently be described, directs an inquisition to be taken to enquire whether the abbats of St. Mary York, in times past, did not, when they appointed or removed the priors of Romburc, present them to the earls or lords of Richmond as patrons. This instrument is without date, but is probably of the time of King Edward the First.

The revenues of this priory, as they are recorded in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth, A. D. 1291, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^e

In the 38th of Edw. III. A. D. 1364, John Nerford is stated to have held of the king in capite the advowson of the priory church of Romburc, and the manor of Wysete, with the appurtenances, by the service of one knight's fee.

PRIORS of ROMBURC.

BLAKERE has been already named as prior of Romburc at its earliest establishment. Leland, however, names

HUMPHREY DE WOUCHAM as the first prior; probably meaning after Romburc had become a cell to St. Mary York.^f

JOHN DE AKASTER, a monk of St. Mary York, was appointed in the first year of King John, A. D. 1199.^g

THOMAS GASGILL was admitted prior Feb. 5th, 1425.^h

Romburc was one of those small monasteries which were suppressed in 1528, in which year it was granted to Cardinal Wolsey toward the endowment of his college at Ipswich. See Rymer, vol. xiv. p. 240. Pat. 3 Dec. 20 Hen. VIII. Pope Clement's bull for suppressing this house, with Felixstow, Bromehill, Bliborough, and Mountjoy, is also printed in Stevens's Appendix, p. 185.ⁱ Edmund abbat of York, two or three months previous to the Suppression, wrote to Cardinal Wolsey, stating the revenues to have been, at that time, little more than thirty pounds sterling; and offering the sum of three hundred marks, to be paid immediately, to save his priory.^k The Cardinal, it should seem, was not to be moved: and subsequently we find the abbat of St. Mary York released to Thomas Capon, dean of the cardinal's college at Ipswich, all his right in this priory, and all its possessions, lying in

Banham, Wilby, Cossey, and Swaffham in Norfolk, and in other places in other counties.^l

There is in the Chapter-house at Westminster a Survey in English of this monastery, with the manor of Rumburgh,^m without date, but evidently made about the period of its dissolution: annexed to it is a Rental in Latin of its possessions in Rumburgh, Wyset, and Elmeham.

Rumburgh, in 1530, was in the possession of Robert Downes, gentleman, by whom it was alienated in that year to Thomas duke of Norfolk.ⁿ On his attainder it reverted to the crown, and was then granted to John earl of Warwick. The Particular for the grant to this earl is in the Augmentation Office, dated 11 Dec. 1 Edw. VI. where it is called the manor of Rumborowgh in the county of Suffolk, late parcel of the Duke of Norfolk's possessions, by year 23*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.*

Among the Chancery Proceedings in the Tower of London, of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, there are two relating to the manor, &c. of Romborough, without date of the year, but to be found by these references, Rr. 1, 20. Ww. 21, 59.

A small Roll of Charters relating to the cell of Romburc, formerly belonging to Thomas Astle, Esq. is preserved in the British Museum, marked L. F. C. ix. 9.^o

At the Chapter-house, Westminster, in the bag entitled "Divers Dioceses," are the following writings having relation to the priory of Rumborough:

1. Carta (sine data) per Petrum rectorem ecclesie sancti Martini, super controversia inter abbatem et conventum sancte Mariæ Ebor. et illum, tangens decimas dominici Ricardi filii Hamonis de Sibeton in Sibeton, monachis de Romberg contingentibus, quas per cartam istam prædictus Petrus dimiserat domui de Romburg.

3. 29 Sept. 1413. Dimissio ad firmam per priorem cellæ de Rumbergh Willielmo Pite rectori ecclesie de Ketilbergh de duabus partibus omnium decimarum totius domini de Ketilbergh, dictis priori et monachis ac dictæ cellæ pertin. pro termino sex annorum sub redditu xv. sol. annuatim solvend.

No SEAL of this priory has as yet been met with.

The REMAINS of the priory are converted into a farmhouse, which is now, with the manor, the property of Miss Jessop.

NUM. IV.

Inquisitio capta apud Wysete, de Vacatione Prioratus de Rombourg in adventu fratris Johannis de Acastre, temporibus Comitum Richmundiæ.

[Ex Reg. Mon. S. Mar. Ebor. MS. Harl. 236, fol. 55.]

H. SENESCHALLUS reverendi domini domini com. Richm. ballivo de Wysete salutem. Vobis mandamus ex parte domini mei quatinus convocatis loco ad hoc capto ubi melius esse videritis de liberis hominibus de balliva vestra, de veteribus, legalibus, et discretioribus per quos rei veritas melius, certius, et fidelius inquiri poterit, diligentem et certam sine dilatione faciatis inquisitionem si abbates sanctæ Mariae Ebor. temporibus retroactis cum Priores deberent et vellent substituere in Cella de Rombourg solebant eos aliquotiens præsentare Comitibus sive Dominis Richm. antecessoribus domini nostri ut patronis dicti loci; et si ipsi domini solebant et debebant seesynam et custodiam habere de dicta Cella quousque priores idonei eis præsentarentur ut patronis; nec administrationem dictæ cellæ haberent absque assensu prædictorum Comitum et Dominorum; vel si dicti abbates ad placitum suum cum tempus esset Priores substituerent et admovent, prædictis Comitibus et Dominis inconsultis; et si per prædictam inquisitionem certitudinem habuerint quod patronatus et custodia dictæ cellæ vacantis ad dictos comites et dominos Richm. sicut prædictum est pertineant; Custodiam illius in manu nostra teneatis quousque aliud a nobis habueritis in mandatis. Et si per prædictam inquisitionem certitudinem habueritis quod dicti abbates solebant et poterant Priores in dicta Cella substituere et amovere pro tempore absque præsentatione facienda dictis Com. sive Dominis, et bene certificati fueritis, tunc domino Johanni de Acastria monacho latori præsentium cui abbas sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. prioratum dictæ cellæ contulit, plenam inde administrationem ut priori habere permittatis, capta de eo fidelitate debita Domino de servitiis tenementorum quæ tenere de domino de jure debet. Præterea vobis mandamus quod ex quo dictus dominus Johannes administrationem dictæ cellæ habuerit ipsum protegatis et defendatis, et consulentes scitis quod ponat in dicta cella monachos idoneos prout decet ut servitium Dei in omnibus adimpletur. Vale. Dat. apud Richm. anno regni regis Johannis primo.

FACTA inquisitione diligenti super libertate concessa domino abbati Ebor. necnon super creatione Priorum de Rombourg coram ballivo libertatis de Wysete, in adventum domini Johannis de Akastere prioris de Rombourg, per Johannem Bleng, Henricum de Elepolle, Oliverum de Bere, Walterum Absolon, Walterum Brughard, Walterum fil. Eudonis, Reginaldum fil. Willielmi, Thomam fil. Eudonis, Thomam fil. Hugonis, Henricum fil. Persone, Galfridum Baynnard, Ricardum fil. Gregorii, et Johannem de Hwmfrey, qui dicunt per sacramentum suum quod Abbates sanctæ Mariæ Ebor. temporibus retroactis semper ad placitum suum, cum tempus esset, priores apud Rombourg substituerunt et amoverunt sine præsentatione aliqua Dominis Richm. et hoc multotiens fecerunt quando Comites Richmundiæ in Angliam fuerunt et hoc fecisse non habuissent nisi debebant de facto et de jure, quia tunc temporis non erat contradictio de prædictis Comitibus Richm. Et propter hoc bene sciunt quod abbates Ebor. hoc fecerunt, et bene credunt et firmiter asserunt quod prædicta facere debebant quia temporibus retroactis de hoc nulla erat contradictio. Dicunt etiam quod Domini Richm. nunquam habuerunt custodiam nec seisinam dictæ Cellæ prioribus ibidem vacantibus nec habere debebant ratione prædicta quia nulla erat contradictio quando Domini Richm. fuerunt in Anglia. Dicunt villani de soca de Wysete omnia prædicta, et in omnibus concordant cum primis juratis liberis tenentibus.

Carta Gaufridi Episcopi Eliensis exemplata.

UNIVERSIS sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis ad quorum notitiam literæ præsentis pervenerint, Officialis curiæ Eboraci salutem in omnium Salvatore. Vobis pro certo innotescimus per præsentem, quod nos quoddam instrumentum originale, cujus tenor de verbo ad verbum inferius scribi fecimus, vero sigillo sigillatum, non cancellatum, non abolitum, nec in aliqua sui parte vitiatum, veraciter vidimus, et inspeximus in hæc verba: Gaufridus Dei gratia Heliensis episcopus, omnibus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis salutem. Ex suscepti regiminis officio quietem religiosorum virorum devota tenemur pietate confovere; et non solum numerum Deo famulantium augmentare, verum etiam ad roborandam ordinis dignitatem, exteriora eorum beneficia tenemur amplificare, ut eo devotius divino cultui famulentur, quo minus ad emendicanda victualia foris eos vagare contigerit.

Eapropter, cum ex relatione nobilis viri Conani, ducis Britanniae et comitis Richmundiæ, necnon et Clementis tunc abbatis beatæ Mariæ Eboraci, et aliorum virorum probatæ estimationis, et integri fructus, nobis innotesceret, Stephanum ducem Britanniae et comitem Richemundiæ concessisse et dedisse cellam de Romburg cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, Deo, et abbatiæ sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci, et monachis ejusdem loci: cum inspectis instrumentis quæ prædicti monachi habent, manifestè nobis constaret, de jure

And that done, toke away aswell the goods moveable of the said priory beinge a membre of o^r. monastery and gyven unto us by Alen Niger summe tyme erele of Richemound and our seconnde ra-founder, by whose gyfte, next unto the king's grace, we have had moost benefytts, launds, and profetts gyven us, by reason where of we be most notabily charged with masses, suffragies, and other almouse deds for hys benefytts to us most charytably exhibite; bot also certen muniments, evidences, and specialities toching and apperteynyng vnto o^r. monastery which we had lately sent unto o^r. said prior and brethren there for the tryall of certen launds and righties which lately did depende betwixt us and certen men of worshipp in Cambridge shyre in contraversie, and yet doith depende undecided, and for none other purpose. Benedictine Priory of St. Mary Magdalen Lincoln,

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Mary York.

Santoft and Henes in Lincolnshire.

THE places called SANTOFT and HENES, in the county of Lincoln, are both of them denominated, by Sir William Dugdale, cells of the abbey of St. Mary York; but they do not appear to be entitled to this appellation. The passage as to Santoft is to this effect: "Roger Moubray gave to the monks of St. Mary's York the whole isle of Santoft in com. Linc. which thenceforth was made Santoft, however, was the habitation merely of one monk, and was so intended to be by the founders's dotation deed, who grants to the abbey, for the use of this monk, six skips of barley every year, on All Saints day; and he grants also to him the moiety of all his victuals wheresoever he shall be in Axholme, and they (the monks of St. Mary) shall have throughout the year fifteen hogs, without pannage, in his wood called Ros, and pasture for ten cows in the same wood, and whatever they may choose to take of dead wood for burning, and green wood for building, without waste and vendition. The deed further grants to the monk of Santoft that he shall have one mastiff dog to guard his house and croft from strange animals; and he is to have whatever he can gain from the common fen, and of things he may sell for his own use, but without inconvenience to the donor's men.^a There is no date to this deed of Roger de Mowbray, but it was probably made a few years before the middle of the twelfth century.

Dugdale has printed another deed of Roger de Mowbray,^b whereby he relinquishes to the church of St. Mary York his foreign service, and whatever he was accustomed to have from a place called Wroth; but neither this, nor two succeeding gifts^c from Thomas Darcey to St. Mary's abbey, seem to have any relation to Santoft.

Hamelin Earl Warren, by deed, granted to St. Mary's church at York and the monks there serving God thirty breisnas (rendered by Cowel^d wether sheep), to be had at three terms of the year, and directs the "Custos" of Santoft to send them thither at the appointed terms.^e

The endowment of the monk of Santoft seems always to have been very slender. According to the Ecclesiastical Taxation of Pope Nich. IV. he appears only to have had, in 1291, temporalities in the deanery of Corynham to the yearly value of 15s. 10d.

Afterwards this small property became attached to the Cell of St. Mary Magdalen Lincoln, but at what time is not exactly known; nor, indeed, has the date of the erection of the Cell itself been ascertained with much certainty. The following is the account of it given by Bishop Tanner:^f

"Lincoln. Benedictine Cell. In the large confirmation by K. Henry II. of the lands and houses which had been given to the church of St. Mary's at York are several donations in the city and fields of Lincoln; one of which was probably the place whereon was built the priory of St. Mary Magdalene, a Cell of two or three Benedictine monks to the aforementioned abbey."

Leland^g calls it St. Beges, and saith "it was in one of the east suburbs, scant half a mile from the Minster."

Leland was probably right as to the situation of this cell, but wrong as to its name, which he seems to have confounded with St. Bees in Cumberland.

The only reference given in Tanner to any record concerning the Cell of St. Mary Magdalen Lincoln is the following: "Inquis. Linc. 7 Hen. IV. n. 10, de quadam placea in suburb. Lincoln. concess. abbati S. Mariæ Ebor. ad inveniendum duos monachos ibidem continue celebraturos."

The yearly value of this Cell, in the General Ecclesiastical Survey of it, 26 Hen. VIII. was 26l. 1s. 3d.^h subject to deductions amounting to 2l. 15s. and leaving the clear value of 23l. 6s. 3d.

On the dissolution of St. Mary's abbey by force of the statute 31 Hen. VIII. this Cell came to the crown as part of it, wherein it remained but a few years, being granted by letters patent, 37 Hen. VIII. to John Broxholme and John Bellowe, esquires.ⁱ

With respect to Henes, called by Dugdale, as before observed, a Cell, the grant of William Earl Warren, whereby he bestows it upon the abbat and monks of St. Mary's, enjoins no condition for the formation of any such subordinate establishment, but merely gives to the abbey Henes, with the moor and marshes around it, to make advantage thereof, as well in the moor as in land gained, and in the marshes; and, also, Munkeflete, with all its fisheries; and moreover, at the assumption of Saint Mary, three pikes in Brademars, and twelve breisnas.^k

Benedictine Priory of St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Guthlac at Hereford :

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Peter Gloucester.

ELAND, having noticed the castle of Hereford in his Itinerary, says, "There is a fayre chappell of St. Cuthbert, the east part whereof is made opere circulari. There were sometimes prebendes; but one of the Lacyes translated them thence into St. Peter's in Hereford towne, and that colledge was then translated into the east suburbe of Hereford, and a priory of monkes erected there, and made a cell to Gloucester." ^a For St. Cuthbert we are probably to read St. Guthlac; a house of secular canons dedicated to whom certainly existed in Hereford in the time of Edward the Confessor. ^b Entries of the property of this college in Worcestershire and Herefordshire will be found in the Domesday Survey. ^c

The existence of the church of St. Peter Hereford as a distinct contemporary foundation is also recognized in the Domesday Survey. Under the title of "Terra Ecclesie de Hereford," tom. i. fol. 182 b, we read, "Sanctus Petrus de Hereford tenet FROME. Walterus de Laci dedit ecclesie concessu Willielmi regis. Ibi i. hida et una virgata, et geld. Eduuj cilt tenuit, et poterat ire quo volebat. In dominio est i. car. et iii. villani et iii. bord. cum ii. car. Ibi vii. servi. Valuit xv. solid. Modo xxx. solid." Under the head of "Terra Rogerii de Laci," ibid. fol. 184, "Isdem Rogerus tenet ACLE. Ibi vii. hidæ geld.—De hac terra dedit Walterus de Laci Sancto Petro de Hereford ii. car. terræ concessu regis Willielmi, et unum vill. et unum bord. cum terra eorum. Ibid. fol. 184 b. Isdem Rogerus tenet LEDE, et Sanctus Petrus de eo, dono patris ejus et concessu W. regis. Isdem Rogerus tenet WIBELAI. In dominio sunt iii. car. et x. vill. Unum ex istis villanis habet S. Petrus dono Walteri de Laci. Ibid. fol. 185. Isdem Rogerus tenet HANLEI. et Sanctus Petrus in elemosina dono Walteri de Laci."

That the church of St. Peter Hereford was built and endowed by Walter de Laci seems unquestionable: ^d but he could not, as Mr. Duncumb asserts, have been the founder of the fraternity of St. Guthlac; ^e for that appears to have existed in the time of Godwin and Harold, before Walter de Laci had acquired property in England.

The precise time when the two foundations merged into one does not appear to be recorded. Walter de Laci died in the 19th of William the Conqueror. Dugdale says that when the work of the church of St. Peter Hereford was almost finished, climbing up a ladder there, he fell down, and being killed with the fall, 6 kal. April, A. D. 1084, was buried in the chapter-house at Gloucester. ^f In ^a Leland, Itin. vol. iv. pt. ii. fol. 174 a.

^b In the Domesday Survey, tom. i. fol. 185 b, under the title of "Terra Aluredi de Marleberge," in Herefordshire, we read, "Isdem Aluredus tenet PENEBRUGE. Heraldus comes tenuit.—Hoc manerium Penebruge calumniantur canonici S. Guthlaci; et dicunt quod comes Goduinus et Heraldus filius ejus abstulerunt injuste a sancto Guthlaco." Another claim of the "Clerici S. Guthlaci" upon the manor of Magga is noticed in the same page, under the head of "Terra Willielmi de Scohies."

^e Collections towards the Hist. and Antiq. of the County of Hereford, vol. i. 4to. 1804, p. 418.
^f Dugd. Baron. tom. i. p. 95. He refers to Jorval, 979, and for the date of Laci's death to the MS. Cotton. Domit. A. viii. fol. 155 a.

1101, we read that Hugh de Laci, the son of Walter, gave the collegiate church of St. Peter, with all the revenues belonging to it, to the abbey of St. Peter Gloucester;^a whereupon the provost and secular canons were changed into a prior and Benedictine monks,^b who were removed into the east suburb of Hereford without Bishopsgate, where Robert Betun, bishop of Hereford, gave them the ground whereon was built a new monastery, dedicated to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Guthlac, but more usually called by the name of the last saint only.

Amongst the early benefactors to this house Mr. Duncumb notices Roger le Porter, whose grant to the monks is recited in a charter of Bernard bishop of St. Davids, probably about the year 1140.^c

John earl of Moreton, brother of King Richard I. confirmed to the church of St. Peter Gloucester, and to that of the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, and St. Guthlac Hereford, and to the monks there serving God, that they and their attendants, in what they bought or sold, should be "liberi et quieti in perpetuum de theolonio, passagio, summagio, carriagio, conductu, pasnagio, et pontagio" throughout his lands at Bristol, Keyrdiff, Novumburgum, &c.^d This was probably about the year 1190.

The Return of the possessions of St. Guthlac Hereford in 1291, as recorded in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^e

In Rymer's Fœdera, under the year 1311, we have a notice of a pension of two marks paid annually to the prior and convent by the Templars out of the manor of Gutying, to whom it appears to have been perpetually leased.^f

In 1322 a dispute arose relating to the priorship of this house; during which the duties of the place were neglected, and the revenues much impoverished. The king therefore ordered the sheriff of the county to take the priory, with all its possessions and appurtenances, as well moveable as immovable, into the hands of the crown, safely to keep the same until further directions were given.^g

In 1353 another controversy arose between the members of St. Guthlac's priory and those of Lanthony, respecting a sum of money stated to be annually due from the latter to the former. This was submitted to the decision of Thomas Bellamy, a commissary of the bishop of Hereford; and, by his award, the prior and convent of Lanthony were directed to pay 10*l.* quarterly to the prior and convent of St. Guthlac.^h

In 1366 Lewis bishop of Hereford granted a commission to reconcile, after the accustomed manner, the conventual church of the priory of Hereford, which had been polluted by the violent effusion of human blood; and the ceremony of reconciliation was accordingly performed by Roger Cradock, then bishop of Llandaff.ⁱ

From the time of Pope Nicholas's Taxation to that of the dissolution of the house in 1539 no considerable donations appear to have been made to the monastery. Its revenues, at the latter period, amounted to no more than 12*l.* 3*s.* 3½*d.*^k per annum.

PRIORS of ST. GUTHLAC HEREFORD.

JOHN occurs about A. D. 1090.^l

WILLIAM, about A. D. 1200.ⁿ

HENRY occurs A. D. 1226.^o

JOHN MANGWIN, or MAUGEWIN, A. D. 1391;^x supposed to be the same with JOHN MANGREAUNTS mentioned by Browne Willis as prior in 1341.^y

WILLIAM WINSELADE, A. D. 1441.^z

JOHN NEWTON, S. T. P., occurs in 1509. He was elected prior of Gloucester July 30th, 1510.^a

WILLIAM THORNBURY was made prior Sept. 18th 1514. He occurs in 1534.^b

THOMAS BISSEY, or BISLEY, was the last prior.

The site and precinct of St. Guthlac's priory were conveyed, after the Dissolution, to John ap Rice, Esq. together with a certain pasture called the Three Moors, to the said site adjoining, and containing four acres of meadow land and one acre of arable, lying in the common field there called the Port Field; one pasture called Cobbenhall, lying near the river Lugge, within the parish of Lugwardine, containing ten acres; a meadow called White-hill, in the parish of Withington, near the river Lugge, containing, by estimation, ten acres; and a meadow called Walney, lying in the parish of Hampton near the said river, containing five acres. The grant of these premises was made by letters patent, dated 13th Nov. 34th Hen. VIII. They were to be held in capite, paying yearly four shillings and sixpence to the crown.^c

By other letters patent, bearing date 28th April, 36 Hen. VIII. the lordships or manors of Thynghill, Felton, Hynton, Priors-hope, Monkton, Lyde-prior, Priors Frome, Ledon, Rushock, and Ballingham, with lands and other appurtenances, parcel of the late cell of St. Guthlac, were also granted to John ap Rice, Esq. his heirs and successors, to be held in capite, paying yearly 4*l.* 6*s.* to the crown.^d

The descendants of Ap Rice held the site of this priory till the beginning of the last century, when it was successively possessed by the families of Fownes, Pauncefort, and Williams. The Prices are stated, however, to have had again possession in 1751, and retained it till 1776,

Nor was the priory of St. Guthlac for Franciscan Friars, and the priory of St. Peter and St. Paul for Canons Augustines, as Mr. Speed; for this was but one priory, though called sometimes by the name of one saint, and sometimes by that of another, and often by the name of all three; as Rymer, vol. iii. *Regist. when it was purchased by William Symonds, Esq. of Hereford, who sold it in 1793 for the sites of a new gaol and house of correction for the county, both of which have been since completed.^a

Mr. Duncumb describes the SEAL of this cell as appendant to a deed of the year 1353. He says it was oblong, but of small size: the impression representing an old man sitting upon a low seat, having a staff in his right (towards which his face is directed) and a book in his left hand: round the verge,

SIGILLUM CŌE ECCLEIÆ SĀI GOTHLACI HEREFORD.

There is in the Augmentation Office an impression on red wax of a Seal to a deed, whereby the prior of St. Guthlac Hereford and the convent of the same place acknowledge to have received from the prioress of Acornbury two shillings in Michaelmas term, 18 Ric. II. for a yearly pension. The impression on the Seal is a young man's head, apparently not that of a religious person, but rather of a warrior, but without a helmet. Legend, BERNARDUS Dei gratia de sancto David episcopus, universis sancte ecclesie filiis, &c. salutem et benedictionem. Sciant et qui modo sunt et qui futuri erunt, me compluribus aliis, clericis et laicis, presentem affuisse quando Rogerus de Porter eam donationem quam prius per manum domini Roberti Herefordensis episcopi de ecclesia sancti Guthlaci, de castello Herefordia, et de omnibus prebendis, et decan. et paroch. ad eam pertinentibus, ecclesie sancti Petri de Gloucestria fecerat, et in capitulo coram toto conventu concessit, et manu propria per quandam cultellum super altare sancti Petri presentavit. Huic rei, quia vidi et audivi, testimonium perhibeo, et testimonium meum presenti scripto affirmo. Vale.

Priory of Ewyas,

IN

HEREFORDSHIRE :

A Cell to the Abbey of St. Peter Gloucester.

IN a MS. in the Cottonian library in the British Museum, the foundation of this small priory is described to the following effect :

“ Of EWYAS.

“ In the year of our Lord 1100, Harald lord of Ewyas gave to the church of St. Peter Gloucester the church of St. Michael with the chapel of St. Nicholas de Castro, the chapel of St. James of Ewyas, the chapel of St. Kaene with the chapel of Caneros, in pure and perpetual frankalmoigne, in order that there should be at Ewyas, for ever, a convent serving God. Likewise he gave the tithe of his corn, venison, and honey, and of all things of which a Christian ought to pay tithes : moreover, the church of Foy, with one carucate of land, and the tithes of his pool of Foy. He gave also a mill, the church of Hidred with all its appurtenances, the church of Alyngetone, and the church of Burnham : the tithes, moreover, of his domain he granted throughout his lands to their proper uses, and the tithes of his mills and of eels : Archbishop Theobald confirming it, in the time of abbat Hamelin.”

“ Of the same.

“ Robert confirmed the gift of Harald his father, and also gave the church of Burnham to the priory of Ewyas, that a convent should there be constituted, which was agreed to, but not prosecuted. Moreover, he gave to the same the tithes of all his manors from which Christians ought to pay tithe : Theobald archbishop of Canterbury confirming. John bishop of Salisbury confirmed it in the time of abbat Hamelin.”

To what is above stated with respect to the foundation of this priory, but little seems capable of being added, except that Dugdale, in his Baronage,^b informs us, that Harold the founder was son to Ralph earl of Hereford, who, at the time of the Conqueror's Survey, was possessed of divers lordships in Berkshire, Worcestershire, and other counties, and whose chief seat was at Sudley in Gloucestershire. He afterwards obtaining Ewyas in Herefordshire, founded there a little priory for monks of St. Benedict's order.

This Harald had, it seems, two sons, John lord of Sudley, and Robert, who, residing at Ewyas, assumed his surname from that place, and, as before observed, not only confirmed the grants of what his father had given to those monks, but added the church of Burnham thereto.

The temporal possessions of this priory do not appear to be recorded in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas the Fourth A. D. 1291, except that it is there said^c to have had to the amount of twenty shillings in goods and animals in the archdeaconry of Brecon ; but its portions in spiritualties are enumerated : the church of one of these, Telfunt in Wilts, obtained the denomination of Telfunt Ewyas, from its connection with this priory.

Bishop Tanner observes,^d that this cell, according to Leland, was first founded by a son of Harald, at Dulesse, a village a mile higher on the Brook, and was translated by Roger Tregoz to Mapheralt, or Ewias. Tanner adds, the revenues falling so much in value as not to be able to support this cell, it was, A. D. 1358, by decree of Thomas bishop of St. Davids, then ordinary, with the consent of the chapter, united and incorporated to the great abbey of Gloucester (St. Peter's).^e

From the time of this annexation, little occurs as to this small priory : there is not in the Ecclesiastical Valor 26 Hen. VIII. any return of it, not even under the head of St. Peter Gloucester, to which it then belonged, except that some of the portions of tithes which it enjoyed in 1291 are noticed ; particularly a portion in Alcanning 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and in Lydyard 1*l.* both in Wilts. These sums vary in amount from the return in Pope Nicholas's Valor.

PRIORS of EWYAS HAROLD.

RICHARD DE NORMAN occurs prior A. D. 1283.^f

WILLIAM DE POTERNE occurs A. D. 1311.^h

WALTER DE MONMOUTH, A. D. 1358.ⁱ

The church of Ewias Harold was after the suppression of the abbey of Gloucester, granted to the bishop by letters patent, 33*d* Hen. VIII.^k

No SEAL of this priory has been met with ; but that a seal of one of its priors was once extant is evident ; for in November, A. D. 1237, the then prior of Ewias was personally present at the execution of an instrument, now remaining in the Augmentation Office, marked CART. ANTIQ. D. 86 a, whereby Walter bishop of Worcester released the nuns of Acornbury from the observance of the rules of the order of the Hospital of Jerusalem, and placed them by apostolical license under the order of St. Austin. To this instrument not only the seal of the bishop was put, and those of the abbats of Dore and Caerleon, fragments of which yet remain, but also that of the prior of Ewias, as well as of several others, of which no vestiges exist, but the labels to which they were affixed.

PRIORATUS de Ewyas dotatur et fundatur per Haraldum dominum de Ewyas anno Domini mc. et confirmatur per Robertum filium suum, ut patet in cronicis abbathiae de Gloucestria.^a Robertus confirmavit donum patris sui Haraldi; insuper dedit ecclesiam de Burneham prioratui de Ewyas, ut conventus ibidem inveniatur, quod concessum est, sed non prosecutum. Insuper dedit eisdem decimas omnium maneriorum suorum de quibus Cristiani decimare debent. Theobaldus archiepiscopus Cantuariensis confirmat, Johannes episcopus Sarisburiensis confirmat, ut constat in cronicis praedictis.

Carta Thomae Fastolf Episc. Menev. qua annectit Prioratum de Ewias, cum Ecclesia S. Michaelis, Abbatiae S. Petri Ebor.

[MS. Harl. 1249, p. 179.]

UNIVERSIS sanctae matris ecclesiae filiis praesentes literas inspecturis Thomas permissione divina Meneven. episcopus salutem in eo qui est omnium vera salus. Pastoralis officii cura cui, licet immerito praesidemus; pia sollicitudinis studio nos astringit ut ea quae propter religionis cultum olim in ecclesia primitiva late superhabundant, et fervide ex devotione fidelium fundata et constituta sunt succrescente temporum et hominum malitia refrigerata, multorum caritate devotionisque fervore reducto pro dolor! ad teporem in statum illum redigamus quod fundatorum et constituentium hujusmodi servetur intentio, et tepiditos nostra salubri commutatione disposita primitivum reddat ad fervorem.

Sane dilectorum nobis in Christo filiorum fratris Thomae abbatis et conventus monasterii sancti Petri Gloucestr. ordinis sancti Benedicti Wygorn. dioceseos, a quo prioratus de Ewyas Haraldi nostrae dioceseos immediate dependet, Petitio nobis exhibita continebat quod olim dum fecunda Religio circum vicini populi tunc devoti favorem sibi attrahens dotis mediocritatem multo ledente fecerat habundare.

Prioratus antedictus fundatus et dotatus extitit ad sustentationem unius prioris et unius vel duorum monachorum per abbatem monasterii praedicti Gloucestr. illuc mittendorum, in quibus tunc viguit tam matura religio ut fortiores existerent si turbine saeculari pro tempore quassarentur.

Sed succedentium temporum qualitas religionis fervorem et amplitudinem ad eundem rerum habundantiam ac zelum populi viris religiosus prius favorabilem praesertim in loco quo dictus prioratus scituatur non solum diminuit, sed quod dolendum est quia penitus abstulit hiis diebus adeo quod propter loci inquietudinem et populi circumvicini infestam inquietationem et inquietam infestationem jam Domini non solum periit ibidem religio, verum etiam monachis instructis in vita et conversatione regulare de monasterio praedicto illuc ad morandum successive missis propter inquietationem et infestationem hujusmodi, et ob debitae religionis carentiam in saeculares, et quasi silvestros mores irreparabiliter ut plurimum commutatis ad monasterium antedictum frequenter revocatis infectionis suae contagio in suos claustrales confratres dampnabiliter effuso in monasterio praedicto religio vulneratur. Quodque facultates Prioratus ejusdem ad tantam diminutionem rediguntur quod uni Priori non sufficiunt ad moram faciendam ibidem, et ad supportandum necessaria onera dicti loci; et quod Abbas et Conventus praedicti Priori et suo commonacho dicti loci, ne ad mendicitatis opprobrium urgerentur, jam per multa tempora vestitus et victus sui magnam partem de communi monasterii sui praedicti gratis exhibuerunt quae de caetero propter causas praemissas facere recusant.

Quare pro parte abbatis et conventus praedictorum, ac etiam nobilium virorum dominorum Rogeri de la Warre fundatoris et patroni sancti prioratus, et Petri de Grandissono nunc defuncti militis, cujus etiam progenitores dictum prioratum fundaverunt et dotarunt, et frater Walterus de Monemouth nuper prior ejusdem nobis extitit cum instantia humiliter supplicatum quatenus praedicto abbati potestatem et licentiam priorem et monachum seu monachos in dicto prioratu morari consuetos ad claustrum et religionem dicti monasterii pro perpetuo revocand. concedere, et prioratum ipsum cum ecclesia sancti Michaelis de Ewyas praedictae nostrae dioceseos, ac aliis suis juribus et pertinentiis universis Abbati et Conventui sancti Petri Gloucestr. praedict. ubi fervida viget et per Dei gratiam perpetuo vigeat religio, ut cantaria quae in dicto prioratu fieri consuevit fiat de caetero per monachos in dicto monasterio incorporare, annectere, et unire imperpetuum dignaremur.

Nos igitur cupientes religiosorum virorum quieti ut liberius Deo serviant, et ut eisdem vacationis et dissolutionis tollatur occasio, quantum cum Deo possumus providere, et petitionem et supplicationem hujusmodi justas et earum causas rationabiles reputantes super veritate praemissorum vocatis in hac parte vocandis inquisitionem in forma juris fieri fecimus diligentem: et subsequentes omnes quorum interest vel interesse poterat per discretum virum magistrum Gruffinum ap Res archidiaconum Brechon. commissarium nostrum in ea parte cujus relationi in hac parte nobis factae plenam fidem adhibemus et infra cujus Archidiaconatum Prioratus et ecclesia sancti Michaelis praedicta situati existunt, dictam inquisitionem visur. pro ipsorum contra

Nos Thomas episcopus antedictus dicta inquisitione et contenta in eadem per nos diligenter inspectis ponderatis undique ponderandis et meritis hujus negotii examinatis plenius et discussis, præhabito super hoc cum capitulo nostræ ecclesiæ cathedralis Meneven. solempni, communi, frequenti, ac diligenti tractatu qui in hujusmodi perpetuis concessionibus et ecclesiarum unionibus seu alienationibus de jure requiritur. Ac secutis deliberatione et causæ cognitione plenariis debitis et moturis omnibusque ritè peractis in hac parte requisitis quia invenimus omnia præmissa et singula per partem ipsorum religiosorum virorum abbatis et conventus monasterii sancti Petri Gloucestr. antedicti nobis exposita et suggesta veritatem in omnibus continere. Ita quod abbat et conventui supradictis et eorum successoribus extunc liceat quodocunque dicti prioratus et ecclesiæ sancti Michaelis prædictæ nostræ dioces. sic unitorum ac bonorum omnium spiritualium et temporalium, et jurium et pertinentium ad prioratum et ecclesiam prædictos spectantium in vigore unionis, incorporationis, et annexionis hujusmodi auctoritate propria per se alium vel alios possessionem et quasi libere apprehendere, nancisci, et retinere, fructusque, redditus, et proventus Prioratus et ecclesiæ prædictorum in usus suos proprios convertere et applicare nostr. vel successorum nostrorum,

Middlesburgh, in the Deanry of Cleveland,

A Cell to the Abbey of Whitby.

MIDDLESBURGH church, dedicated to St. Hylda the abbess, was given by Robert de Brus, son of the first of that family, about the year 1120, with all things thereunto appertaining, and two carucates and two oxgangs of land in Neuham, in perpetual alms, to the church and brethren of St. Peter and St. Hylda of Whitby, to the intent that in the said church of Middlesburgh there should be certain monks serving God and St. Hylda of Whitby, who might plentifully and sufficiently live on the revenues of the said church: the mother church of Whitby receiving the overplus or remainder. The deed was witnessed by William the chaplain, Arnald de Percy, Umfrid de Elthot, William de Fugeris, and many others.^a

This deed received confirmation by King Henry the First, who by his charter grants and confirms to God and the church of St. Peter and St. Hylda at Whitby, and to the monks performing divine service there, the church of Middlesburgh with its appurtenances, that they may possess and enjoy it as their proper cell.^b

At this time the dedication of the church of Whitby was to St. Peter and St. Hylda, but that of Middlesburgh was to St. John Baptist and St. Hylda. The latter name, however, was in such estimation, that it was generally called the church of St. Hylda at Middlesburgh, without any other epithet.

The gift of this church to be a cell for the monks of Whitby received also confirmation in the year 1130, from Thurstan archbishop of York.^c

Early in the thirteenth century, William Malebyse granted and by his deed confirmed to God and the church of St. Hylda at Middlesburgh, and to the monks performing divine service there, in pure and perpetual alms, all the lands and pastures in his freehold at Brachanhoe which Hugh Malebyse his father, and Hugh his brother, had granted to the aforesaid church and monks, included within the following boundaries, viz. along the headland of Long Ralph (Ralph Long) to the place where that headland goes into Caldecotes Slack (in fletum de Caldecotes), and thence along the middle of the Slack to the mill-dam or mill-race (in fletum molendini) near to Felebrige, and thence to the nearest boundary of Thomas de Martun's land, and thence upward to the headland of the aforesaid Long Ralph. All which lands and pastures he undertakes to warrant and defend to the before-named monks against all men whatsoever. The witnesses to this deed are Richard Burton gives an account^e of the several donations made to this cell, as also the names of the donors. The whole amount seems to have been but small.

Burton also notices a dispute between the canons of Gisburn, impropiators of the mother church of Stainton, and the monks of Whitby, owners of the chapel of Middlesburgh, touching the tithes, parochial dues, mortuaries, &c. of twelve carucates of land, which the canons of Gisburn claimed as belonging to their mother church, and the monks as to their chapel of Middlesburgh. The matter was compromised between them, in the presence and by the interposition of Robert de Brus, their common patron, who had granted the church to one and the chapel to the other house, in this manner, viz. that the canons of Gisburn should have the tithes, &c. of six of these carucates, as belonging to their church of Stainton, and the monks of Whitby to have the tithes, &c. of the other six carucates, as belonging to their chapel of Middlesburgh, which for the future was to be emancipated from Stainton, and deemed a mother church: and for preventing future disputes, and to make each of them amends for what the one lost and the other wanted of what they claimed, the monks of Whitby were to have the tithes, &c. of four carucates of the fee of John Ingeham in Aresum, of a fifth of the fee of Mallet, a vassal of Roger de Mowbray, in Leventhorpe, and of a sixth, being their own land, in Middlesburgh; and the canons of Gisburn were to have those of three carucates of land of the fee of Robert de Brus in Acclum, of a fourth of the fee of Robert Esturmith in the same township, of the fifth of Mallet, held of Robert de Brus, and of a sixth, being their own land, in Aresum. "So tenacious," adds Burton, "were these religious of their rights, and with so much difficulty it was to be accorded about them."^f

According to the Valuation made of this cell, 26 Hen. VIII., its revenues amounted to 21*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* yearly. The revenues in the 32d Hen. VIII. appear to have amounted to 25*l.* 17*s.* 5*d.*^g

In the sixth year of Queen Elizabeth, the site, &c. were granted to Thomas Reve.^h

Burton says, at the time of the Dissolution two or three monks only were resident in this cell.

Graves, in his History of Cleveland, in describing the parish of Acklam, says there was an ancient chapel here dedicated to St. Hilda. This chapel has been long in ruins, and nothing of the sacred edifice now remains. The site, together with the chapel-yard, which is still used occasionally as a burying place by the inhabitants, lies open and uninclosed from the adjoining grounds. It is, with the greatest part of the parish, the property of Thomas Hustler, Esq. of Acklam Hall.

Hackness in Whitby Strand,

IN

YORKSHIRE:

A Cell to the Abbey of Whitby.

ACCORDING to Charlton,^a the Lady Hilda, abbess of the nunnery of Streanshalh, founded this Cell, and called it Hactenus,^b on account of its being near the utmost limits of the church lands; but the common people, not at all acquainted with Latin, soon corrupted that word into Hackness, the name by which it has been known for now almost eleven hundred years.

Another derivation has been suggested,^c which seems more likely to be the true one; namely, from hawk (the bird) and ness (a headland): thus Hackness signifies a headland frequented by hawks; and this is the more probable, as William Rufus, its royal proprietor, was passionately devoted to the diversion of hawking. Of the removal of the monks from Whitby to Hackness Charlton gives the following statement from the Whitby Register:^d

"In the time of William II. king of England, son of William the Bastard, king of England, a great tribulation and persecution arose in the monastery of Whiteby against Serlo the prior and the fraternity in that place, such as they formerly had experienced in the days of Rainfrid, heretofore prior of Whiteby. For thieves and robbers, by day and night, coming out of the forests and dens where they lurked, carried away all their substance, and laid that holy place desolate. In like manner, pirates, void of all compassion, landing there, came and plundered the monastery. Induced by these reasons, Serlo the prior and the monks of Whiteby shewed their calamity and misery to William de Percy, begging of him to give them a place of residence at Hackenas, where they might construct a monastery, as also the abbess of St. Hilda had formerly constructed a monastery there. Now William willingly granted their petition, on such terms, that, peace being again established, they should return to their aforesaid monastery at Whiteby. Here therefore they began to erect a monastery, near the church of St. Mary in that town, where they remained some time, and led a very religious life. Afterwards a very great dissension arising between the two brothers, William de Percy and Serlo de Percy the prior of Whiteby, on account of William de Percy's giving the towns of Staxby and Everley to Ralph de Everley, his armour-bearer, who had been his servant many years, William de Percy wanted to take away from his brother Serlo all those lands and towns which he had formerly given to the aforesaid monastery of Whiteby; which, as soon as Serlo the prior was made acquainted with, he went in much haste to William king of England, whose familiar acquaintance and loving associate he had been, while they were yet youngsters, in the house and court of King William the father. Him he made acquainted with all proceedings; on which King William commanded and charged William de Percy and Serlo his brother, the prior of Whiteby and Hackenas, as also the monks serving God there, to keep his firm peace, and to make no further disturbance. But Serlo the prior, being desirous to be at a distance from his brother William de Percy, and to live on the freehold of our lord the king, lest his brother should offer him some injury, or use him reproachfully, besought King William to give him and his monks, for a perpetual alms, six carucates of land, with their appurtenances, which were in his lordship, two of them lying in Hackenas, and the other four in Northfeld."^e Dr. Burton, who more briefly relates this transaction, adds, that prior Serlo, being thus secured against his brother's resentment, and his possessions here enlarged, he and his monks continued here some time, but returned afterwards back to their former situation at Whitby, leaving, nevertheless, some of their monks to reside here, in or near the church of St. Peter, which from hence became a cell to, or a subordinate house to, their priory of Whitby.

King Henry the First granted or rather confirmed to them the church of Hackness, with the appurtenances, and the franchises of sac, soc, toll, team, and infangtheof.

Henry the Second confirmed the same.

Richard the First confirmed the same, with the additions of exemption from the payment of the tax called danegeld.

William archbishop of York likewise confirmed their possessions here.

It is uncertain what number of monks usually resided here; probably that was arbitrary, and depended wholly on the pleasure of the abbat of Whitby: and, as there is no account of their estates and revenues separate from those of the abbey of Whitby, it is most likely that the estates granted to it whilst the whole community resided here, before their return to Whitby, were then cast into the common stock, and that the support of the few monks residing here was by some allowance from the mother-house or abbey of Whitby.

Tanner gives no references to any records especially relating to this cell; but he notices an Agreement between the monks of Durham and the monks of Hackness in the Cottonian library.^a

In the History of Scarborough^b it is said that the site of the monastic cell built by Lady Hilda is supposed to have been where the old manor-house at present stands, as several human bones have been found in the ground contiguous to it; and the old manor-house itself has been pronounced a perfect model of a monastery. The church which ornaments this retired village is a small ancient fabric; and the spire is a fine object when viewed through the openings of the woods, which form a variety of charming vistas. On the chancel-wall is this inscription:

"Anno Domini 679, the Lady Hilda, of royal descent, foundress of Streanshalh, otherwise Whitby abbey, did, for the sake of security and retirement, establish a nunnery or cell for eight nuns at Hackness.

This is probably erroneous. The History of Scarborough adds, at the dissolution of religious houses in the reign of Henry VIII. four monks, of the order of Benedictines, were the whole of the fraternity belonging to the cell of Hackness.

No separate valuation exists of this cell, either in the Survey, 26th, or the Ministers' Accounts, 32d Hen. VIII.

The present owner of Hackness is Sir Richard Vanden Bempdè Johnstone, Bart.

—SEPTIMO ergo suæ [sc. S. Hildæ] infirmitatis anno, converso ad interanea dolore, ad diem pervenit ultimum, et circa galli cantum, percepto viatico sacrosanctæ communionis, cum accersitis accillis Christi quæ erant in eodem monasterio, de servanda eas invicem, immo cum omnibus pace evangelica admoneret; inter verba exhortationis læta mortem vidit, immo, ut verbis Domini loquar, de morte transivit ad vitam.

Qua videlicet nocte Dominus omnipotens obitum ipsius in alio longius posito monasterio quod ipsa eodem anno construxerat et appellatur HACANOS, manifesta visione revelare dignatus est. Erat in ipso monasterio quædam sanctimonialis femina, nomine Begu, quæ triginta et amplius annos dedicata Domino virginitate, in monachica conversatione serviebat. Hæc tunc in dormitorio Sororum pausans, audivit subito in aere notum campanæ sonum, quod ad orationes excitari vel convocari solebant, cum quis eorum de sæculo fuisset evocatus: apertisque, ut sibi videbatur, oculis aspexit, detecto domus culmine, fusam desuper lucem omnia replevisse: cui videlicet luci dum sollicita intenderet, vidit animam præfatæ Dei famulæ in ipsa luce comitantibus ac ducentibus angelis ad cælum ferri. Cumque somno excussa videret cæteras pausantes circa se Sorores, intellexit vel in somnio vel in visione mentis ostensum sibi esse quod viderat. Statimque exurgens nimio timore perterrita cucurrit ad Virginem quæ tunc monasterio abbatissæ vice præfuit, cui nomen Frigyd, fletuque ac lacrymis multum perfusa, ac suspiria longa trahens nunciavit, matrem illarum omnium Hild abbatissam jam migrasse de sæculo, et se aspectante cum luce immensa ducibus angelis ad æternæ limina lucis et supernorum consortia civium ascendisse. Quod cum illa audisset, suscitavit cunctas sorores et in ecclesiam convocat, orationibus ac psalmis pro anima matris operam dare monuit. Quod cum residuo noctis tempore diligenter agerent, venerunt primo diluculo fratres qui ejus obitum nunciarent, a loco ubi defuncta est. At illæ respondentes dixerunt, se prius eadem cognovisse: et cum exponerent per ordinem quomodo hæc vel quando didicissent, inventum est, eadem hora transitum ejus illis ostensum esse per visionem, qua illam referebant exisse de mundo. Pulchraque rerum concordia procuratum est divinitus, ut cum illi exitum ejus de hac vita viderent, tunc isti introitum ejus in perpetuam animarum vitam cognoscerent. Distant autem inter se monasteria hæc tredecim ferme millibus passuum.

De Translatione Monachorum de Whitby ad Hackenas.

[Ex Registro Whitbiensi, penes D. Hug. Cholmley equit. aurat.]

TEMPORE Willielmi regis Anglorum secundi, filii Willielmi Nothi regis Anglorum, exorta est monasterio de Whiteby et Serloni priori, et fratribus ejusdem loci magna tribulatio, et angustia, et persecutio, quales habuerunt annis transactis, in diebus Rainfridi prioris nostri de Whitby. Veniebant namque latrones et raptores, die, nocteque de nemoribus, et de latibulis, in quibus latitabant, et deripiebant omnem substantiam eorum, et depopulabant eum sanctum locum. Ita similiter et piratæ veniebant et devastabant illum locum, ita ut nullius miserebantur. Qua de causa Serlo prior, et monachi de Whitby ostenderunt Willielmo de Percy calamitatem suam, et miseriam, et petierunt illum, ut daret eis locum manendi apud Hackenas, qui dedit eis ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ de Hackenas, ut ibi construerent monasterium, (quia in eadem villa sancta Hilda abbatissa monasterium construxerat:) concessit verò eis libenter petitionem eorum, ut pace facta, iterum ad Whitbeam redirent ad prædictum monasterium. Cœperunt itaque monasterium construere ad prædictam ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ, et ibi aliquandiu remanserunt, et religiosam valde vitam duxerunt. Deinde exortâ discordiâ maximâ inter prædictos duos fratres Willielmum de Percy, et Serlonem de Percy fratrem suum, priorem de Whitby, quia Willielmus de Percy dederat villas de Scarby, et de Everley Radulpho de Everley armigero suo, qui ei annis multis serviebat. Voluit verò Willielmus de Percy auferre Serloni fratri suo omnes terras, et villas, quas dederat præfato monasterio de Whiteby. Cum Serlo prior hæc comperisset, festinanter venit ad regem Willielmum Angliæ, quia familiaris ejus, et socius amantissimus, cum ipsi juvenes milites essent in domo, et in curia Willielmi regis patris ejus, et hæc illi omnia demonstravit. Mandavit autem et præcepit Willielmus rex Willielmo de Percy, et Serloni fratri suo, priori de Whitby, et de Hackenas, et monachis ibidem Deo servantibus, suam omnimodo firmam pacem teneret, nec eis ullam molestiam inferret. Et cupiens itaque Serlo prior elongare se à fratre suo Willielmo de Percy, et manere in feudo domini regis, ne aliquam injuriam, et contumeliam ei frater suus posset inferre, petiit Willielmum regem, ut ei et monachis suis daret in elemosinam perpetuam sex carucatas terræ, quæ erant in dominio ejus, duas in Hackenas, et quatuor in Northfeld cum pertinentiis suis.

Gliscens ultorem regi fert Serlo merorem

IN NORFOLK.

THE priory of St. Faith, in one instance called St. Mary and St. Faith, was founded by Robert Fitz-Walter^a and Sibill de Caineto his wife, A. D. 1105. The continuator of Blomefield calls him Robert de Cadomo or Caen, son of Walter de Cadomo lord of Horsford. His wife was the daughter and heiress of Ralph de Caineto or Cheyney. An old English manuscript copied by Dugdale^b states that Robert Fitzwalter and his wife, returning through France and Rome, where they had been in pilgrimage, were set upon by robbers and imprisoned, till by their prayers to God and St. Faith the virgin they were miraculously delivered: after which, visiting the shrine of St. Faith at the abbey of Conches in France, and being there kindly entertained, they vowed on their return into England to build a religious house. This vow they performed: edifying a small monastery at Horsham, and annexing it as a cell to the abbey of Conches.^c The continuator of Blomefield says that, at first, two monks only from the abbey of Conches were placed in this monastery by the founders.^d

In 1163, this foundation was confirmed by a bull from Pope Alexander the Third.^e Other confirmations are also recorded from descendants of the founder.^f John son of Robert Fitz-Walter, by a deed, without date, gave sixty acres of land in Horsford and Horsham to this priory, confirming at the same time the grant of his father and mother. William, another of the founder's sons, also confirmed the donations of his father and mother, in the time of King Stephen. Stephen son of Roger de Cressy confirmed the grants of his ancestors, adding his wood called Suthwod in Horsham, and pasture for the cattle belonging to the monks in his park at Horsford. Robert son of Roger, lord of Warkworth and Horsford, confirmed also the same, by deed dated at Horsford on the vigil of St. Andrew the apostle, A. D. 1279.^g

William son of Ralph de Hauville granted by fine, in the 12th Hen. III. to Eustachius the prior, the mill of Doketon.^h

Walter the son of Thomas de Bernham granted to the monks of Horsham pasture for three hundred sheep on his heath-ground at Heylesdone, in the 29th of Edw. I.ⁱ

Arnulph de Kantebrig, with the consent of Christian his wife and William his son and heir, granted to them certain lands in Hintewode.^k

William de Caineto or Cheyney, the son of Robert and grandson of Walter, gave them certain land in Helgetun, with the advowson of the church, and the advowsons of the churches of St. Martin in the Bailey and St. Michael in Iberstrete in Norwich.^l

Ralph de Tyvile, the son, gave them a rent of viij^s. iiij^d. in Intewode.^m

An extent of the lands and other possessions of this priory, taken in the 18th of Edw. II. will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.ⁿ

In the 14th of Richard II. this priory was discharged from its subjection to the abbey of Conches:° thenceforward becoming "Prioratus indigena," and continuing as an English priory till the Dissolution.

The continuator of Blomefield says the Abbat of Sybton paid an annual pension to this Priory in 1426.

The revenues of the priory of Horsham in the 26th of Henry the Eighth, according to the Valor Ecclesiasticus, amounted in the clear value to 162*l*. 16*s*. 11½*d*.^r Speed, who probably gives the gross sum, says 193*l*. 2*s*. 3½*d*.

The scite, together with the manor and rectory of Horsham, and the rectory and advowson of Horsford, were granted, in the 35th of Henry VIII. to Edward Elrington and Richard Southwell.^s In 1820, Lord Viscount Ranelagh was the owner of the scite.

The continuator of Blomefield says, "The SEAL of this priory in 1326, was oblong, of green wax with the image of St. Faith seated under an arch and crowned; near to the head of the image a dove, and under the image the prior on his knees."^t

The Common Seal of the priory appended to the Acknowledgment of King Henry the Eighth's Supremacy, still remaining in the Chapter-house at Westminster, differs from this. The impression is on red wax, oval and large, representing in chief a church-like Edifice, below which, beneath Gothic tracery, is seated Saint Faith, between two Foundationis Historia.

[Ex antiqua membrana penes Sampsonem Leonard fecialem, an. 1598, fol. 180.]

IN the time of King Henry the First, the sixth yeare of his raigne, that Robert Fitzwalter and Sibill his wife, with one assent, moved with godly charitie, purposed them to visit the places of Peter and Paul, that by them and other holy saints ther, which they were disposed to visiten with a great devout mind, that they, by there merrits might have remission of their sins, and after that they might deserveden to come to the blisse of heaven; it befell that ther pilgrimages so done, as they turned home againe, it came to there minds, by counsell, that they should visit an holy place of saint Giles in France with other holy saints in the way: and so they, joyfull and merrie, by the helpe of God and of the saints, as they turned home againe into ther owne countrith, it befell upon a day by an infortune, when they should come from the said holy place of saint Giles, they were espied of brigants, and theeves that layne in caves and denns with strength, and waited upon them; and forasmuch as they were stronger than the said pilgrims, they fell upon them and robbed them and put them in prison, and fettered them with strong irons: and after it was shewed to the lords and barons of the said countrith, that such a deede was done to the pilgrims that went to Rome, anone they raised a certaine people, and went with strength to the castell, and laid siege thereto, and made a promise that they should not goe thence unto time they had taken the said theeves, and that the said pilgrims were restored againe to all there goods. And in the meane time, as they were, they prayed devoutly to God and to the holy virgin Saint Faith to helpe them out of prison: and anone after by a vision Saint Faith appeared unto them and through helpe of God loosed their fetters, and brought them out of prison and there fetters with them, which remaine within this place at this day, and sith set them in the right way to the abbey of Councches in Fraunce, where Saint Faith lieth shrined; and when the abbot of Councches hard of this greate miracle, and that they were cominge towards the place, he and his bretheren with procession and greate solemnities received them into the said place, and ther they made ther praiers, and offered up there fetters with greate devotion to God and to Saint Faith, and weare had into the place, and the said abbot and his bretheren refreshed them with greate cheare, and there they rested by the space of twelve dayes and reade the life of Saint Faith and the miracles that God shewed for her ther daily and hourelly. And anone came tidings unto them that they should send againe into the countrie there as they were robbed, and they should be restored againe to all there goods that were had from them; and so they weare; whereof they were both glad and merry. And so then the made a faithfull promise and a voughe to God and to Saint Faith, that as soone as they came into England into there owne countrieth unto there owne manner of Horsford, that they should do edify there a monastery in the worship of God and S. Faith, and that it should be a cell to the said abbey of Councches and by the assent of th'abbot and bretheren there the foresaid Robert Fitzwalter brought with him twayne monkes of the said house, of the which one was cleped Barnard, and the other was cleped Girard. And soone after that they were come home they began there first foundation upon a certaine ground called at this day Kirkescrofte, and the worke that was made on the day fell down on the night, and then it was thought that God and Saint Faith were not pleased it should stand there; wherefore they thought, by there better advise to edifie the said monastery upon the ground and place where it is now at this day. And when it was finished and ended and endowed with certaine livlyhode and intituled to her name, the foresaid monks weare set in this seid house, here to serve God and Saint Faith, to pray for them and all there heires without endes. And the foresaid Robert Fitzwalter wrote a letter to bishop Herberd, that time being bishop of Norewich, to have it confirmed and dedicate in the worship of God and of the glorious virgin and martir Saint Faith; and so it was done indeed, and afterwards the heires of the said founders given more livlyhode thereto. And so it was increased by them and other devout people: on whose soules Almighty God have mercy. Amen.
